at the Edinburgh Convention in 1931, when McRae's draft was brought up for consideration. The dispute was not allowed to go to a vote but on the recommendation of Dr. McRae and on his motion, plans established in that country.

Whether the question of forming national organizations which he helped to prevent will ever again be revived, I do not know. I hope not. Some doubts and difficulties have arisen in intervening years since 1922 because the United Kingdom has retained a national organization which was granted it in 1913 before Rotary commenced to organize itself as an international association.

Those of us assembled here today are happy because no National Rotary Association were formed in either the United States or in Canada. Instead, we have nine International Districts, embracing clubs on both sides of the boundary line—a boundary line which there are no guns and no forts.

elements of Chinese philosophy handed down from generation to generation in that country of ancient origin and civilization.

There are in fact no new ideals in Rotary differing in any way from those contained in the Sermon on the Mount. It is perhaps a cause for wonder that the Christian religion was not more generally accepted in China.

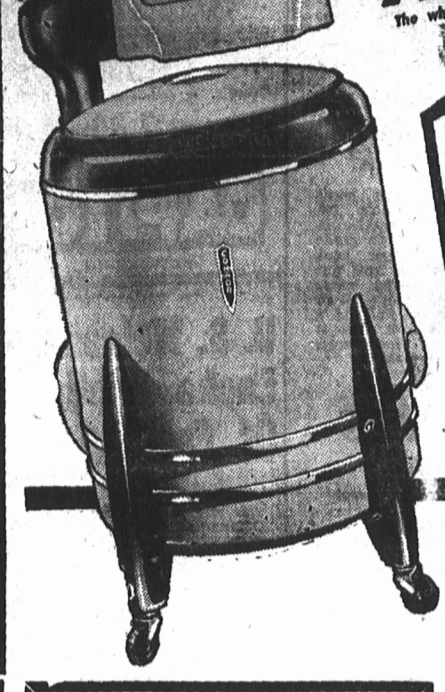

Rotary, however, is not so handicapped and I believe from what I have myself observed in China that the religion of the Chinese was not mailed fit and no imperialism behind Buddhism or Mohammedanism to any suspicion. This is a sad commentary, not on the religion of the Chinese, but on the political ideals of those in power in the days gone by.

I have also had the privilege of attending Rotary Clubs in the United States, Europe, Asia and other parts of the world. About seven years ago I was in China, Japan and Manchuria, and found well organized clubs in these countries.

I had the privilege in October, 1931 of spending a day with the great man of China, Chiang Kai-Shek. He talked to a small group of us whom he had invited to his home which was then in Nanking.

am not going to predict. I do know this, however, that Rotary is expanding and developing day by day. There is, I think, a challenge to the younger men in Rotary to work out its new problems as they arise and to increase its usefulness.

To Search Amazon For Brave Pilot

LONDON, May 8-(CP)—George Osborne, who skipped the Grimsby trawler Girl Pat on her adventurous voyage to the West Indies in 1926, is preparing to take an $37,600 expedition to the Amazon in June.

crew include John Jervis, 11-year-old of Jame England, novelist; Robert Scoble, BBC commentator; Keith Ken Shppard, artist; and Harold Heron-Maxwell, aviator.

Chief object of the expedition which will sail from the Amazon, will be a search for Paul Redfern, American aviator who disappeared on a flight to South America 13 years ago.
