For Loss of Appetite
Nervousness
Exhaustion
Retarded Convalescence
Anemia
Malnutrition
Bronchial Troubles

How often you hear people say that! The cause may be indigestion, worry, overwork, strain, or late hours.

There may be nothing organically wrong with such cases, yet nervous ailments are always stubborn and frequently perplexing.

If you suffer from "nerves" and are dejected, irritable and "jumpy", take Fellows' Syrup. In a short time it will rebuild your nervous system and dispel your dreary outlook on life. You may thus be spared a long siege of illness.

CAUTION:—Ask for it by name and be sure of getting the genuine.

"You did well, Master Harry. But granny will be awaiting us. We must hasten."

He walked in silence until he had reached the house in Hoborn.

"How comes De Veulle in London?" he asked suddenly as he climbed the stairs.

"He was in some trouble in Paris—what, I know not. The rumor surrendered it into my admiring hands; but you can have no idea of its value until you have seen it tested in the great forests, where a man's life depends upon the swiftness and accuracy with which he can shoot. I learned that in my own youth, and so when I returned to London I had this gun made for me by the king's own gun-smith, after plans I drew for him. There is none other like it."

"I DISARMED HIM SEVERAL TIMES"

"And it is for me?" I asked, delighted as a child with a new toy.

"What better use could it have?" he replied. "Oh, yes; and there go with it."

He brought from the same cupboard a shot-pouch of beaded deer-skin and a powder-horn, ornamented with dull silver that would not catch the light. Also a belt of hide from which there hung in sheaths a delicately balanced hatchet and a long, broad-bladed knife.

"These you will discover no less useful than the gun," he explained, drawing the weapons from their coverings. "This which you call a hatchet is the tomahawk of the Indians, used for fighting at close quarters and for throwing. The other is the scalping knife, and a deadly blade it is, too. You will feel them strange at first, but among my friends in New York there is a Dutchman named Corlaer who will instruct you in the ways of the wilderness."

"You shall have letters to Governor Burnet himself, whom I met before he went overseas, and to Master Cadwalader Colden, the governor's surveyor general and a member of his council, a fine, loyal gentleman with whom I have had some correspondence."

CHAPTER III

The Fifth Passenger

Granny Juggins drew my face down to a level with her puckered old lips.

"God preserve you, Master Harry. No, I am not weeping. 'Tis—No matter—Remember always that so long as my heart beats there is room in it for you—and forget not that your mother would be hungry for pride in you if she were but with us. She kissed me tenderly."

"I am an old woman, Master Harry," she said, "and I may not live to see it; but the day will come when you will be no longer a fugitive from justice. So be not disheartened."

"And how could I be disheartened," I demanded, as I set her down, "with two friends such as I may boast of?"

There was a mist before my eyes, and I was not sorry when Juggins broke in upon our farewells.

"Aye, John Waterman will be waiting us at the temple stairs, and we have little time to spare if we are to go aboard before other passengers. This De Veulle would recognize you; I fear, even in this disguise."

I could not forbear a grimace at the reference to my get-up, a linsey-woolsey shirt, with homespun jacket and breeches and a bobbed scratch-wig, the whole designed to give me a rustic appearance, which they can do no doubt that it did.

"Never mind, Master Harry," admonished Juggins as he clapped an ugly beaver of ancient style upon my head. "In New York you will rig yourself in forest-runner's garb, and forget that you ever played the bumpkin. Give granny a last kiss, and—"

She flew at me, light as a bird; her arms clasped momentarily about my neck; I felt her kiss on my cheek; and then she was gone from the room. I may as well say here that I never saw her again, although many a night as I lay under the stars I was to remember her quaint ways, her sweet, shrill voice and loving smile.

MALPEQUE

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist, get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16 oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make 16 ounces of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Citizens were shocked and saddened by the sudden passing of Mr. Robert MacKenzie, Sr., at his home early on Monday morning, Feb. 23.

Mr. MacKenzie had reached the advanced age of twenty-eight years and was actively engaged in the pursuits of farming and fishing. About fifty-five years ago, he married Miss Eliza Ann Woodside, and with her five years married, friends and relatives joined heartily in the celebration of their golden wedding. The deceased was survived by his wife, three daughters, Mrs. William Essery, Summerside, Mass.; Mrs. Alexander Clifbridge, Cambridge, Mass.; three sons, Messrs. Robert MacKenzie, Malpeque; George MacKenzie, Charlottetown and Harry MacKenzie, at home; also two brothers, Messrs. William and Kenneth, Belle. To all of these, the deep sympathy of the community is extended. The funeral service was held first at the home on Thursday and from thence to the United Church, where their pastor, the Rev. E. M. Aitken conducted both services. The Memorial Hall was filled to its utmost capacity—all expression of real sympathy. Interment took place in Malpeque Cemetery. The pall bearers were: Messrs. Charles Woodside, Chester Woodside, Milton Woodside, George Mountain, Alexander MacKenzie, and Fred MacKenzie, nephews of the deceased.

A host of friends here will join in wishing Mrs. Bond, of Waltham, Mass., formerly Miss Sophie Ramsay, of Hamilton, P. E. I., every happiness on the occasion of her marriage, which was reported in Friday's issue of the Guardian, as having taken place recently. Mrs. Bond was one of Hamilton's deservedly popular young ladies.

The marriage of Miss Annie Champion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Champion, Darnley, to Mr. Hubert Dixon, of Stanchel, was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday, February 11, at five o'clock. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frederick Williamson, of Keir Memorial Church in the presence of about fifty invited guests. The bride and groom were unattended. The bride wore a costume in one of the new shades of blue and wore a veil and orange blossoms. After the ceremony the bridal party sat down to a daintily prepared repast. Very many friends here wish Mr. and Mrs. Dixon a happy and prosperous wedded life.

Loving sympathy is extended to Mrs. Howard Ramsay, Hamilton, in the passing of her mother, Mrs. MacDougall, which occurred recently at Victoria West; also to Mrs. Herbert Ramsay, Malpeque in the passing of her mother, Mrs. Cousins, which occurred at Burlington on Friday.

Miss Edith Gordon, R.N., who is en route to New York, spent Thursday, the guest of her friend, Mrs. E. M. Aitken, at the Manse.

At the Sunday morning service on February 22nd, Rev. E. M. Aitken, pastor of Princeton United, spoke from the text "Of such is the Kingdom of God," Mark 10-14, taking as his subject "The Marks of membership." Mr. Aitken said, the kingdom of God, as Jesus used the term referred not something external, to a city with its streets paved with the weather of the world, with its wall of defence and God, the great Judge standing at the gate, which we must come for judgment at the end of life, but Jesus made clear it was a state or condition within the life of the individual to be shared now during the weeks and months through which we are passing. He saw the possibilities within men of uniting them in a great brotherhood or fellowship, broader in its scope, higher in its ideas, more exacting in the demands and more worth while in its returns, than any other organization in existence. With that vision of the possibilities of developing men and women to the full extent of their capabilities, which would bring them into fellowship with the Father and would thus bring about the establishing of the kingdom he set out. When they asked him for the marks of membership, for the standards of qualifications, for the signs of identity they expected perhaps they would point them to the temple, the synagogue or the pharises, but to their amazement, they pointed to a little child, he was pointing to the child-like heart. We must get away from the idea of christianity being only for children or the aged. Jesus was talking not to a kindergarten class. He was talking to men, active facing life's varied experiences. It is necessary to distinguish between childlike and childish—childlike means the childlike heart, whereas childish is immature, never facing the facts of life. Who can lay at the feet of Him, the charge that there was anything of the childish about Him. In pointing men to the child-like heart, he was challenging the very best of which they were capable. What characteristics of childhood had he in mind which are so essential to the kingdom and which we are in danger of losing as we grow older—(1). It is the beginning of a new life, life of possibilities; (2) The eagerness to gain new truth—the tendency is to close our minds—The Christian must always be open-minded; (3) The child is a born believer; (4) The child is satisfied to be dependent on others—a message we need today in a generation that has become so independent it would try to dispense with God. The child has the power to deal with mystery. It understands very little, but wonders at everything. To him, who would reject because he cannot understand, Jesus points out the little child. The subject of the evening service was "Indifference." The text "He passed by on the other side," Luke 10-31. Though living in a changing world, human nature remains much the same. Our characteristic which changes little is the spirit of indifference. It was a true picture of society as Jesus saw it, which he portrayed in answer to the lawyers question "who is my neighbor." In that sense he revealed the fact that two out of every three are utterly indifferent to the need of others. Only the third man, the one whom you could hardly expect to have done anything offered a helping hand. It would be impossible to imagine the condition of the world if every man had been indifferent to the needs of others. Only because they have been those few who have caught the vision which meant everything to Jesus are we sharing the privileges we have today—Men all the way from the prophets to those who are giving their life's services in the twentieth century.

On Sunday afternoon, Feb. 22nd, at 2:30, the funeral service from the home of Melville Bryenton, Malpeque, laid to rest the mortal form of their infant son. The service at the home was conducted by the pastor, Rev. E. M. Aitken in the presence of a number of relatives and sympathizing friends. In the course of his address, Mr. Aitken referred to how such an occasion as this turns our thoughts away from the material to the spiritual from time to eternity. If for nothing else than for comfort in the time of sorrow, the Christian faith is worth while.

An epidemic of measles has been prevalent in this locality for two weeks, but it is pleasing to learn that
