Western Horses Win At Toronto Fair

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire) TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Western Canada's list of honors at the Royal Winter Fair were increased today as judging of horses and cattle continued. Sheep prizes also were announced and awards presented to the winners by the Governor General.

When decisions in the judging of Clydesdale horses were announced the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, entered the winning lists by capturing the Clydesdale special with Julia. The prize is donated by the Clydesdale Horse Association of Canada for the best Canadian-bred female of any age.

Julia placed third in the class for yearling mares, foaled before Jan. 1, 1931, an event which was won by Don Alda Farms, Tordorn, Ont., with Brunstane Phyllis.

The G. Howard Ferguson challenge cup, donated by the former Ontario Premier to encourage farmers and breeders in producing horses suitable as hunters, was presented to Strathearn Boyd Thomson, of Toronto when his brown mare, Lady Nora, was first in the contest. A total for the province of 73 portable units as against the total of 59 last year.

Training School For Forest Rangers

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire) FREDERICTON, N. B., Nov. 28.—At a provincial forestry conference called here today by Premier L. P. D. Tilley to consider possible improvement in forest fire prevention and detection work in New Brunswick, a recommendation was made that the Senate of the University of New Brunswick be requested to establish in conjunction with the university forestry school, a school for the training of forest rangers.

Attended by 40 persons including members of the provincial and Dominion forest services, licensees and forest land owners, the conference recommended also that the minimum penalty for brush burning violation of the Forest Fire Act be $25 instead of $10 as at present.

The conference approved a proposal for the Provincial Boy Scouts Association to take under its direct supervision the 500 junior wardens organized under the Canadian Forestry Association. A meeting of the New Brunswick directors to consider means of carrying out this proposal was held here today as planned. The directors may meet in Saint John at some future date.

The New Brunswick government will purchase five new pumping units for forest fire work, making a total for the province of 73 portable units as against the total of 59 last year.

Rounding Up Alleged Slayers Of King Alexander

(A. F. By Guardian's Special Wire) MERIZ, France, Nov. 28.—Stefan Tomljenovic, who police said admitted being in Marseille the day King Alexander was killed, was arrested here today as France continued its roundup of suspects despite Italy's refusal to surrender two alleged leaders of the assassination here.

Police, who reported finding documents written in the Croat language in his possession, put the man at the disposition of Yugoslav authorities.

ROME, Nov. 28.—Neither Italian penal law nor international treaties and usage justified extradition of Anton Pavelich and Egon Kvaternik, alleged ringleaders in the assassination of Yugoslavia's King Alexander, an official communique said tonight in the first official explanation of Italy's refusal.

Quoting several articles of the Franco-Italian treaty in 1870 and from the Italian penal code which "precisely defines the causes for extradition," the communique said Alexander's assassination was clearly a political crime, as was the simultaneous killing of French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou.

Under the terms of laws governing the case the Court of Appeals "could not and should not" grant the extradition requested by France, it was pointed out.

GENEVA, Nov. 28.—The names of a number of Hungarian officers who allegedly aided terrorists responsible for the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia were reported tonight to figure in a 70-page Yugoslav memorandum to be published tomorrow.

Another feature of the document, it was stated, is a list of Hungarian passports declared to have been used by accomplices of the slayer.

Commodore Turnbull On Farewell Trip

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire) QUÉBEC, Nov. 28.—Departure from Quebec of the Duchess of Bedford in command of Commodore James Turnbull will mark the last sea voyage as skipper for the widely-known sea-captain who is retiring due to his having reached the age limit of 60. Commodore Turnbull said he would live in the environs of London.

The veteran captain has been at sea for 45 years both in the Royal Navy and the Canadian Pacific Steamships. In 1903 he was given two years leave of absence for naval training and served in the Pacific Station and in the channel fleet. During the war he was for about three years with the Dover Patrol Afloat and also organized Canadian convoys at Halifax and Sydney, N.S. He is one of the survivors of the Halifax explosion in which all his subordinates were killed.

Commodore Turnbull was successively master of the Empress of Scotland and Empress of France. Among his prized possessions are several gold-headed canes presented to him for locking his liners before any others at the yearly opening of Maritime shipping in the St. Lawrence.

He was mentioned in despatches during the war and received the C. B. E. (military division) for his services as Captain Royal Navy, active list in December 1902 and granted the rank of Commodore, second class, in May 1928, the rank he now holds on the retired list.

Commodore Turnbull was R. N. R. Aide-de-Camp to King George from January 1927 until October 1928. He is a freeman of the City of London, one of the founders and a liverman of the Honorable Company of Merchant Mariners, and a younger brother of "Tintin House, London.

"I would like to say how happy I have been in making the acquaintance of so many and I hope they will not forget me, just as I won't forget them in the days to come. I hope I may be operating in an honorary capacity in a worthwhile job in or near London," Commodore Turnbull said in a farewell message.

Cod Liver Oil And Cattle

Cod liver oil has never attained very great prominence in supplementing the rations of the larger farm animals because the nutrient which it can supply, or help to make available, can be procured almost equally well, and much more cheaply, from the ordinary farm live stock feeds, plus a minimum of purchased supplements such as protein feeds and minerals.

There are some occasions, however, when cod liver oil constitutes a valuable feed for the larger farm animals. Fish being grown during the winter months sometimes develop an unthrifty rachitic condition, resulting from an evident deficiency of some of the vital feed elements. Such animals can often be brought into better condition by feeding cod liver oil. It is trouble is anticipated, small doses of the oil will probably correct any tendency to a rachitic condition—Fish Meals and Oils Bulletin, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Supplementary Fuels In Farming

In view of the growing practice of using supplementary motor fuels in admixture with gasoline for feasibility of using blended fuels in farm and machinery, and in countries like Canada, in which low temperatures are encountered in winter, has been studied at the National Research Laboratories in Ottawa. This particular form of research is of special practical importance to the Dominion, and consequently the laboratories have determined the relation between water content and solution temperature of the various gasoline mixtures now in use or being tried.

Owing to their availability, benzol and ethanol (ethyl alcohol) are in extensive use in the preparation of mixed motor fuels in which gasoline is the main constituent. Recent developments make it appear that isopropanol (isopropyl alcohol) can be manufactured cheaply from waste gases which are by-products of the petroleum industry, and it is not unlikely, says the Canadian Journal of Research that in the near future this substance may become commercially available.

A problem arises in connection with the use of mixed fuels containing ethanol, namely, the possibility of separation into two liquid phases upon the addition of relatively small amounts of water. At a given temperature any alcohol-gasoline mixture has what is known as a critical water content, and, conversely, any such mixture containing dissolved water has a critical solution or "cloud" temperature below which separation into two phases will occur.

In the district between Rhelmis and Esperlay were loaded with bunches of black and white grapes, and hundreds of workers were employed to pluck them for the 1934 vintage. The unusual sunshine and occasional showers worked wonders. One of the best-known experts, M. Henriot, who owns nearly 600 acres in the finest champagne district, said that he estimated the wine production for the year at the immense total of 15,400,000 gallons. "It sounds enormous," he added, "and of course the wine will not be on the market for some years yet."

Novel Diving Suit Tested

Tests of a novel diving suit for saving drowning persons, just completed in the lake at Geneva, Switzerland, are reported to have been successful. The suit was invented by Commander Prier of the French Navy. The essential point about it is that the diver wears a complete which is really a steel bottle of compressed air. The whole suit is easily handled and can be put on in 30 seconds. The diver can remain below the surface for about 25 minutes. He is quite free of the ropes or air tubes which usually connect divers with a boat overhead. At the public demonstration three men remained under water for a long period.

Independent Stores Scales Usually Correct

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—Sutherland Cuddy, Dominion Inspector of Weights and Measures gave his opinion today to the Parliamentary Mass Buying Commission that independent merchants, the store-type type, generally give truer weight and have more accurate scales than most chain stores. He was led to this conclusion from surveys and inspections of store conditions throughout the country.

The Dominion official's opinion was backed by the evidence of the first independent retailers to give evidence. R. L. Werrett of Simcoe, Ont., who told of the practice in his store of calculating the weight in packaged goods and making adequate allowances. For instance, in packaging prunes, sugar or raisins, fractions of an ounce would be added to guarantee 16 ounces to the pound at the time of purchase over the counter.

Inspector Cuddy today completed his evidence of short weights and false scales with a suggestion of uniform containers for foodstuffs. He showed cans of fruits and vegetables of the same brand, bought in the same store on the same day, one containing two or three ounces less than the other. He defied a housewife to spot the difference at a glance and suggested the only solution was to establish standardization of containers. Two or three chain store executives who were in the audience, nodded their approval and Peter White, Toronto lawyer appearing for Loblaw Groceries, Limited, formally agreed for his Company.

The commission had the opportunity to compare weights in chain and independent stores when Werrett gave his evidence. He said he had five employees in his Simcoe store whose wages ranged from $18 to $15 for three men and $11 and $14 for two women.

Mr. Werrett said he made allowances in pre-packaged goods for shrinkage. His commodities were checked every week, and if any were found underweight they were re-packed. His pre-package allowances were: Dates, 1/4 oz. to one lb. Figs, 1/4 oz. to one lb. Prunes, 1/4 oz. to one lb. Currants, 1/4 oz. to one lb. and so on.

This allowance amounted generally to about two percent on cost of 20 articles, Mr. Werrett cited. His mark up was 16.3 percent on cost and in 1933 his sales were $78,100, of which $11,854 was credit.

The Simcoe retailer admitted he carried some bad accounts. "I have lost some money, mostly from tobacco men who skipped out of the country after the poor crop of 1932. He had not charged any of the offenders. He had not made any money last year. On the contrary he had incurred a slight loss. Mr. Werrett told the Commission he allowed himself a weekly salary of $25.

The introduction of cheap goods tended to affect the public's taste for similar goods. He cited the putting on to the market of a poor quality of canned corn which turned purchasers against all corn.

Since 1930 there had been a drop of 25 percent in the retail price of grocery commodities.

The Commission adjourned until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

UGLY DUCKLINGS AT 3 MADE BEAUTIES AT 18

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—"Mothers make a great mistake in not teaching their daughters the value of beauty when they are children, say between the ages of seven and 13."

Ned Wayburn, the glorifier of many a Ziegfeld star and conductor of the Institute of Dancing that bears his name, is speaking. He is convinced that no little girl need grow up unattractive, even though she may not be a beauty, but that "not one out of ten mothers knows how to go about training her ugly ducklings."

Mothers wait, he said today in his studio, until the girls are sixteen, and then expect nature or the girls themselves to accomplish some impossible miracle. And sixteen, he added, is apt to be years too late.

Learning to Music.

"It took me thirty years to prove that one could learn to dance at 60 and I'm taking me about that long to convince mothers that the age of two years is not too tender for children to begin to learn how to handle and control their bodies." Mr. Wayburn continued.

He maintained that at such an age the bones of a child are soft and can be easily developed and that the child's features have not been set definitely.

AND ATTENDING TO IT

As the ship was about to leave the harbor an old lady was knitting on deck. "Cast off there," shouted an officer.

"Thank you, officer," said the old lady tartly, "but I am quite capable of doing my own knitting."
