HOW TO DEVELOP CHARACTER

It has been found by experiments that character building is not accomplished by teaching an individual moral precepts, nor by controlling him and making him form good habits.

The best way to get young people to build character is to interest them in some effort for community welfare.

WHITE HAIR

White hair is a thing of beauty, dignity, elegance and distinction and should be cared for most scrupulously to make the most of this gleaming crown of glory.

But do not be in too much of a hurry to make it white, if Nature is turning it gradually. Radical changes in the color of the hair are likely to look artificial and are fraught with grief if, attempted by any but an expert.

If your white hair is streaked with yellow, it may be made white by rinsing it in blueing water exactly as you would a fine handkerchief.

White hair is inclined to be too dry, and this makes the lines in the face show up. To give the hair a softer look and so soften the lines in the face, use an oily tonic on it, and massage and brush it more.

TIRED CHILDREN

We have been long familiar with the concepts "the tired business" man, and "the overburdened mother," but the "chronically fatigued child" is a new development of this strenuous age.

The schools are studying this chronic fatigue of children. They have learned to recognize it by decreases in capacity for school work, decrease in strength and endurance and by evidences of emotional unbalance.

The causes of this perpetual weariness of children are reported to be: inadequate sleep, late hours, street play, movie, inadequate diet, home work, excessive social activities and such bad surroundings in school as: improper lighting, improper ventilation, and bad sanitation.

JOTTING IT DOWN

Make your pad and pencil save your heels: is a rule observed by the efficient housewife. Jot down the things you want to order of the grocer, the list or errands you will do when you go down town, the purchases you must make, the article which need a few stitches when you have time to sew, the jobs you have in mind to do when you can get around to them.

With a list like this, you prevent waste motion, save rushing from counter to counter and back again, cut out many trips upstairs, and get the task done much more quickly than you would if you had to stop to figure out: What next?

A Fashion A Day

IT'S ONE PIECE

The throw scarf collar, falling nonchalantly over shoulder, is perfect complement to sheer woolen one-piece all-day dress. It adds that necessary chic of femininity noted in all Paris models.

In a model house, I saw a new device for holding back the curtains from the middle of the window. The curtains were dainty draperies of peach voile. At the top they were hung on the usual curtain rods. They fell just to the lower sash of the window and were held in place there by tiny glass curtain rods, only four inches long. These were on each side of the sash.

In another room were similar curtains of green voile. In the kitchen were shades of glazed chintz which looked like oil cloth. They could be easily washed. Glazed cretonne also makes good kitchen shades. Dainty draperies of dimity serve as glass curtains.

Relieved Of Rheumatism And Pains in Shoulders

Nova Scotia Man Used Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mr. Thomas Hull Has Not Been Troubled Since

Stewiacke, N. S., Feb. 1.—(Special)—Most enthusiastic about the benefit he has received from using Dodd's Kidney Pills is Mr. Thomas Hull, a well-known resident of this place. He writes: "I had Rheumatism and very severe pains in my shoulders and the small of the back in 1920. I used a couple of boxes of your Dodd's Kidney Pills and I have not been troubled since. I have, therefore, no fear in recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone troubled in this way. I am 40 years old and was troubled with pains in my shoulders since I was 13 years old."

Winter is the season of ill health. Your resistance is lowered through continual cold, chill winds, snow and rain. Unless you keep your vitality up to "concert pitch," you will surely fall an easy victim to Rheumatism, Colds, Grippe or General Debility. Take Dodd's Kidney Pills and safeguard your stamina.

The Man Who Is Afraid to Get Married—Is Jealousy a Sign of Love?—Hero's Medal for the Man Who Would Marry a Widow With 4 Children

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a man just past 35 years of age. I have a good position, and a nice savings account, and am seriously considering marriage, but I see so much domestic misery all around me that I hesitate to take the risk when I am so well off as I am.

Would marriage take away too much of a man's independence? Is the institution of marriage a success after all? E. A. B.

ANSWER: If you never went into any enterprise, Mr. E. A. B., until you found the one that was foolproof, you would spend your life sitting on the do-nothing stool twiddling your thumbs.

There is no field of human activity in which there are not plenty of failures. There are men who fail as preachers. Men who fail as lawyers. Men who fail as doctors. Men who fail as writers, as musicians. Men who fail as merchants, as bankers, as farmers, as clerks, as salesmen. Yet there are plenty of other men who make successes in every one of these occupations and professions.

You wouldn't refrain from taking a good job because you know a man who has been fired by his employer. Knowing that a corner grocery store is in the hands of a receiver wouldn't keep you out of the grocery trade. The fact that you know a doctor who is down and out wouldn't prevent you from studying medicine if you felt you had an aptitude for the profession.

Why, then, be scared of matrimony because you have run across some scrapping husbands and wives, and seen a number of marriages laid on the scrap heap? You can no more argue that marriage is a failure because some men and women fail to make a go of it than you can argue that law is a failure or that the drygoods business is a failure because some lawyers have no clients, and some dry goods merchants go into bankruptcy.

Every marriage is an individual experiment and it is a success or a failure, it brings happiness or misery, according to the amount of effort, good will, patience and common sense that the high contracting parties put into it.

There is nothing the matter with the institution of marriage. The trouble is with the quitters who think that they should get everything and give nothing in return, and who throw up their hands and rush for the divorce courts when they find out that marriage means work, and worry, and sacrifice, instead of being a perpetual party.

So don't be afraid to take a chance on matrimony if you have found the right sort of a girl. At its worst it is a good sporting proposition, where you have a fifty-fifty chance of winning out, and if you do win out, you will find that in having a happy home with a devoted wife and children you have got the best thing that life can give a man.

Whereas, if you refrain from getting married because you are afraid to take the risk, you will find that life grows cold, and empty, and dreary, and lonely, with no close family ties to keep the heart warm. The truth of the old adage that nothing venture, nothing have, is never better exemplified than in marriage.

Undoubtedly marriage does deprive a man of much of his freedom. When he takes upon himself the responsibilities of wife and children he gives hostages to fortune, and he is no longer free to follow his own inclinations as a bachelor is.

The bachelor may roam where he lists. The married man is nailed to his job because he has a family to support. The bachelor may do as he pleases. The married man must do as his wife pleases and consider her tastes and inclinations before his own. The bachelor may come home any old time, and spend his evenings sporting himself with the boys. The married man must be a fireside companion, and feel himself lucky to get one evening out a week.

Undoubtedly matrimony puts a crimp in a man's liberty, but no man has a right to get married unless he is willing to lay his freedom on the altar of matrimony, and make his bondage a willing bond.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—My son is married to a woman who is a neat dresser, clean in her house, an excellent cook, and who would make a good wife if it were not for her jealousy. But, although my son is a fine, moral, Christian man, who has never given her the slightest reason to distrust him, she makes his life a hell on earth by her insane jealousy. He must have no friends, male or female. Never does a soul come to their home. She takes away his salary and allows him no pocket money, and goes through his pockets at night to see if he has had any letters from anyone. If he comes home ten minutes late he is accused of having been with some other woman, and there is a wild scene. He dare not even speak to one of the neighbor's girls. He must not love his mother, or give her anything.

My son has borne with this woman for years with angelic patience, but now he can stand it no longer and is on the verge of a mental and physical breakdown. His wife says that she does not love him, but that no other woman shall have him, so she will not give him a divorce, although he begs her to.

What can my son do? Is jealousy a sign of love? A TROUBLED MOTHER.

ANSWER: Jealousy is not a sign of love. It is an indication of colossal selfishness, and it comes from the desire of one individual to monopolize another and to dominate him or her. Love seeks the happiness of the beloved one. Jealousy seeks only the gratification of its own desires and does not hesitate to make its object utterly miserable in order to achieve its own end.

There is no rational way of dealing with jealous people because they are not amenable to reason. They are to all intents and purposes crazy, and their minds are filled with evil that they attribute to others. They feed upon the suspicions that originate in their own foul souls, and believe

Stop that pain in the back!

It is a warning of kidney trouble INFLAMED or clogged kidneys should never be neglected. Take Gin Pills—immediately. Save yourself hours—days—weeks of agony.

Cruel backache, pain in the side, dizzy spells, spots before the eyes, painful, scanty, or too frequent urination, are danger signals. If ignored, Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago quite probably will follow—allments that make life miserable.

GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS

others capable of the sensuality, the lack of faith of which they would be guilty if they had the opportunity.

Your son has been foolish and weak to give in to his jealous tyrant of a wife so long and let her enslave him, and the thing for him to do is to make a break for freedom and salvage what happiness he can. No court in the world would force a man to live with a woman who took away all of his earnings from him, and who refused even to let him speak to a woman, or be good to his old mother.

If that isn't inflicting mental cruelty on him, I don't know what is. A proof of such inhuman treatment should be good for a divorce anywhere. DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a man of 30 in love with a widow of 38, who has four children. I want to marry her, but she thinks my mother would not approve of it. Why should my mother object? K. M. T.

ANSWER: Your mother would probably object because she would think that you were going out of your way to hunt for trouble in taking such a big ready-made family on your shoulders.

It takes a lot of money to feed, and clothe, and educate four children, and take out their tonsils, and straighten their teeth, and get them all the doodads that the modern youngsters seem to require. And while a man may really enjoy doing this for his own children, it is something else again, Mawruss, when it is slaving for another man's children.

If you have the high and heroic spirit that prompts you to sell yourself into slavery for the sake of love, go to it. A widow with four children needs help, and here's hoping that somebody will pin a hero's medal on your breast. You will deserve it. DOROTHY DIX.

SHIPPING THROUGH THE PORT OF GEORGETOWN Sunday, January 20th brought to a close the most successful shipping season in the history of this port in the sailing of the S. S. Terne, Capt. Bjorset loaded with potatoes from the Potato Growers Association for Cuban ports. Sailing out under her own power through clear open water right up to the Railway wharf in almost mid-winter speaks loudly of Georgetown Harbor as a winter port. Capt. Bjorset takes with him the good wishes of the many friends he made during his stay amongst us. He is a native of Norway and a gentleman in every sense of the word. He proved himself worthy of the name of that great race of seamen and navigators in bringing his ship from Cornerbrook, Nfld., in the midst of gales and snowstorms depending at times on his lead for guidance to safe anchorage in Georgetown harbor for the first time without the assistance of a pilot and without even a buoy to guide him. He brought the first good news from the S. S. "Andris" who had also left Cornerbrook some days before him, having sighted her off the Magdalen Islands in the gale with her wireless out of commission and several days overdue. The Andris (Capt. Eldred) arrived on the following day from a very rough voyage.

The Captains of these steamers speak in the highest praise of this harbor as a shipping port. Our splendid wharf capable of docking the largest of these steamers is easily accessible in most any weather. Our new frost shed though not sufficiently large for any heavy movement of potatoes is up to date in every other respect. Heated by steam it is proof against the hardest frost and easily maintains a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees with the thermometer as low as 18 and 20 below zero outside. Our railway yards have been greatly enlarged. New loading ramps have been made and accommodation again next season.

A total of fifteen potato steamers loaded here during the season just closed which is a record for this port. In addition to the shipments by steamers the J. J. Hughes Co., Ltd., loaded eight sailing vessels with general cargoes for Newfoundland and Nova Scotia ports from October 15th to Dec. 3rd besides some shipments of potatoes by rail. Georgetown has certainly been a busy place during the last three months; as many as five steamers in Port waiting for cargoes at one time. Our longshoremen have enjoyed a very prosperous season and Messrs. Buntain Bell & Co., speak in the highest terms of the good service rendered by these men. Strikes or tie ups are never thought of and every man seems to try to do his bit to help the good work along.

A large amount of money was spent in Georgetown. The thanks of the shippers are also due to Messrs. Buntain Bell & Co., and their competent and obliging representative Mr. George Buntain and his able assistant Mr. Wallace Macdonald for the efficient way they handled these cargoes. Mr. George Buntain as far as we are aware holds the record of making the latest trip in the season by auto from here in his good ship Ford on January 20th, accompanied by Mr. W. Macdonald, Mr. Frank Webster and Mr. Glen Jenkins. George will be missed among his many friends in Georgetown and we all hope to see him back with us have been made and accommodation again next season.

Our worthy pilots Mr. Temple Golt and Capt. John Dicks are also to be complimented for their splendid services in piloting ships in all kinds of weather without mishap or accident.

provided for a large number of cars. Our competent agent, Mr. Douglas and his courteous and obliging assistant, Mr. Clow are to be complimented for the very efficient work in behalf of the C. N. R.
