

WHEN BEAUTY WAS AN ART.

Strange stories are sometimes told of the pains and penalties which the modern woman of fashion will undergo in her quest of beauty.

Yet—granted all this—our modern dame is decidedly half-hearted in her efforts after beauty.

The Empress Poppa and Agrippina were having their hair done for most of the "toilette," if one may judge from the records that have come down to us of the little contrivances invented and indulged in by these feminine exquisites.

It was the fashion at that time for a high degree of coarseness to her hair to be maintained.

And however lovely she looked, there isn't one of us who would care to go through with the process.

of grated pumice-stone, or a suspension of powdered marble—a mineral advanced with a tooth-pick of gold, silver, or porcupine-quill.

By when she had got thus far the fair dame's toilette, really was about finished, and one may conclude that she was now ready to "slip into her frock."

which was a rare happening during the years from 1858 to 1898.

It has been the means of making baseball the greatest institution in the world.

The players, too, are reaping the reward of this reform, and today many of the players are paid from $3,500 a season to $6000.

This alone shows the wonderful strides the game has made during the past ten or fifteen years.

In dealing with the players on the salary question, if a player who has done good work for the club during the previous year demands an increase in his salary, the wall goes up that he is unreasonable.

These same people who argue against the players' earning capacity in some other vocation seem to overlook the fact that the majority of the players who "make good" in major league baseball could surely "make good" in any other business.

It is not surprising that the intelligent man that the trustees are not conversant with the actions or business principles of the players of the field.

It has not been so many years ago, in fact, many of the veterans of today will remember when little thought was given to the comfort of the people by the majority of club owners.

The people, in their enthusiasm, forgave many insults, but they did not forget, and when the American League came into the field the patronage shifted to the junior organization.

Many of the clubs, notably the one in Boston, found this was not as easy as they supposed and the records show that many of the owners decided to retire from the financial part of the game rather than to be burdened with a white elephant.

During the years from 1892 to 1898, when the Boston club was successful in winning pennants, and when there was a great deal of rivalry between the Baltimore and Boston teams, the patrons were compelled to pay exorbitant prices for reserved seats.

All this has been changed; and let it be said to the credit of the men who have their money invested, and who are doing everything in their power to keep the game above reproach, that their first thought is for the comfort and welfare of patrons, and the second thought is to place the game upon a high level and endeavor to keep it there.

Baseball has been rescued from chaos and today it is a legitimate and profitable amusement.

Every club in both major leagues made money last season; nearly all the minor leagues showed a balance on the right side of the ledger, and, best of all, every minor league in the country finished out its schedule.
