NUMEROUS complaints have reached this office of the habit practised by a number of boys in the city of taking wheels left by their owners and riding them. THE Princess had left the wharf at the usual time Saturday morning for Pictou. The day was calm and the sea was smooth. At the harbor's mouth a tug approached with a scow in tow filled to the water edge with stone from the quarry outside the Blockhouse for the new market house. The crew of the tug, without thought of danger watched the steamer as she steamed by and the passengers looked upon the scow with her load of stone. Hardly had they passed when the backwash from the steamer struck the scow she filled and in a moment was reposing at the bottom of the harbor's mouth. There was no remedy for the disaster and nothing to do but to come to the city minus the scow and minus the load of stone.

HISTORIC SLIPPERS. Shoes and slippers have played an important part in history and tradition. An instructive collection of historic footwear is shown in "The Delinator" for October, including dress slippers of Marie Antoinette and many other quaint, curious specimens of bygone centuries. The shoes of the present day represent a great advance in the quality of comfort, it would seem, but in elaboration and artistic ornamentation they must yield to the footwear of earlier times. The shoes of the fourteenth century were gilded or engraved ornately. Ladies' shoes of the fifteenth century were wooden, curiously carved. The seventeenth century was most prolific in the different styles of shoes produced, and the materials from which they were fashioned were the richest. The shoes of the Orient have always been extremely elaborate.

THE glories of English army history are intimately bound up with the annals of its oldest regiment, the Coldstream Guards, whose splendid band will soon be thrilling the hearts of the Canadian public. Of all the achievements of the Guards, Inkerman is, perhaps, the most heroic. "The conduct of the Coldstream Guards at Inkerman," says the Times of November, 1854, "should immortalize their name. The battalion went into action with 17 officers and 400 men; of that number 8 officers were killed, 5 wounded and upwards of 200 rank and file were killed and wounded." These few hundred Coldstreams held the redoubt all through that grey but glorious day against as many thousands of Russians—thrice did the hordes of Russian—their natural courage inflamed by fanaticism and drink—rush up the hill, on the top of which calm and determined stood the small force of Her Majesty's Guards. Three times were the Russians driven back, only with strong reinforcements to hurl themselves again from that diminished band. The ground was slippery with a hideous crimson slime; men slipped and recovering themselves saw that it was on a dead comrade's body that their feet had found purchase. The Coldstreams' ammunition became exhausted and in place of leaden bullets, the assailants were now met only by heavy stones. The struggle soon became hand to hand, the group of Coldstreams fought back to back with clubbed muskets, and succeeded in forcing back the foe sufficiently to form line. Then ensued a companion wonder to that charge of the Coldstream at Fuentes d'Onoro. The surging crowds of Russians were seen to waver and give way, and cleaving through the mass came the remnant of the Coldstream Band with bayonets at the charge and having the mien of men who have worked death itself.
