Come and See the Point

The parishoners of East Point are fully determined to make their tea the big bumper event of the season.

The committee in charge has already established a reputation for itself in catering to the tastes of visitors and is resolved upon surpassing all former efforts.

The grounds are beautifully situated down by the sea and nature seems to "Spread o'er the scene her brightest of green" making it an ideal spot for a really pleasant day's outing.

Arrange then, to be on the grounds for the 15th of August.

THE SHAKESPEARIAN WEEKLY SERMON

(Copr. 1909 by Bradley-Garretson Co. Ltd.)

For never anything can be amiss,
When simpleness and duty tender it.
Midsummer Night's Dream, Act V., Sc., I.

Was there ever a cruder scene than the presentation of the "lamentable comedy" of "Pyramus and Thisby," by the hard-handed men of Athens at the marriage festivities of Theseus and Hippolyta? It was the crudest, clumsiest of farces, but Theseus and his queen enjoyed it. Their simple subjects, through a sense of duty, quitted their trades, turned themselves into actors to do honor to their ruler, and he and his queen appreciated the spirit in which the task was performed.

Somewhat similar scenes are enacted in modern times when kings and presidents visit remote corners of their countries. Decorations are often crude, addresses clumsy and stilted, entertainments of a kind to weary, exhaust or arouse mirth, but the wise rulers enjoy them. They see not the decorations and hear not the addresses. It is the spirit of loyalty which has animated their simple subjects to honor them in their own way that delights them. The blundering welcome ode of the village yokel has a charm about it that may be lacking in the refined notes of court favorites. The one is sincere, the other is too often inspired by the hope of favors to be received.

Giving is relative. It would be a trifling matter for a Carnegie or a Strathcona to go to a telephone and order an automobile to be sent round to some friend as a Christmas gift. The act would cause but little effort, and would decrease, to a very trifling degree, the bank account of the giver. The little girl who knits or crochets or embroiders some homely article gives something of more value from for one she loves and admires, stitching loving thoughts into her work, the point of view of true love than the costliest of presents. The newsboy who saves his coppers in order to bestow a humble gift on his parents or teacher is as worthy of approval as the rich man who bestows a library or hospital on his native town. The horny-handed workman who laboriously fashions a sled, be it ever so rough and clumsy, for his boy or for his friend's boy, is as noble in his act as the man who bestows gorgeous presents on his children—happier too, for every moment that he wrought over the intended gift he had pleasure greater than the receiver could have. This pleasure the rich man usually misses. The spirit in which the thing is done is what should make the deed valued, and even though the attentions of others may irk and bore they should be smilingly endured. If the heart of the giver is right, if duty and love are the mainsprings of his action, they should ever be respected.

There is in the world's history a remarkable instance of a simple, dutiful act calling forth the highest commendation. Popes and emperors and philanthropists have built gorgeous temples for the worship of God. Their acts have made but little stir in the world, but the recording angel stood by when the poor widow cast into the treasury her two mites. The rich, who, to gain their wealth, had in many instances "devoured widows' houses," looked with scorn on the poor, coarsely clad figure coming in simpleness of heart to make her offering, but the spirit in which she performed her deed made it more acceptable in the eyes of the Lord than their princely gifts. The story of that act, too, coming down the ages has opened more purses to charity than the story of any other recorded act. Those two mites of the widow have built cathedrals, churches and chapels and have sent many missionaries to heathen lands. It is an example of what great permanent good may come from the simplest of dutiful acts.

However, all the seemingly simple acts are not as simple and dutiful as they seem. This is a selfish world and attentions paid, favors bestowed, are frequently born of the hope of reward. There are many who throw out sprats to catch whales. The servant is often humble and polite for the save of the tip. Men have been known to attend churches and head subscription lists in aid of charitable institutions for business reasons. They get their reward, they are invariably found out. In the case of the tip-receiver they are deemed but little higher than beggars; in the case of those who for business reasons or gain make a profession of piety and charity, the scorn and contempt which is the lot of the hypocrite, are earned.

There are men who go through life despising the kindly acts of dependants, living selfish, self-centred lives, neither accepting favors nor bestowing them. If serenaders on feast nights come to their doors their impulse is to let loose the dogs or call out the police. The rude mirth annoys them and the spirit of the performance is not considered. Such men make spiritual zero weather wherever they are found. If they could as Theseus did, enter sympathetically into the hearts of the bestowers of attentions and trifling gifts on them they might be bringers of sunshine to humble beings who have but little sunshine in their monotonous lives.

INFLAMMATION AND PAIN

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Creston, Iowa.—"I was troubled for a long time with inflammation, pains in my side, sick headaches and nervousness. I had taken so many medicines that I was discouraged and thought I would never get well. A friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to health. I have no more pain, my nerves are stronger and I can do my own work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me after everything else had failed, and I recommend it to other suffering women." —MRS. WM. SEALS, 605 W. Howard St., Creston, Iowa.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

WIRE WOUNDS.

My mare, a very valuable one, was badly bruised and cut by being caught in a wire fence. Some of the wounds would not heal, although I tried many different medicines. Dr. Bell advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT, diluted at first, then stronger as the sores began to look better, until after three weeks, the sores have healed, and best of all, the hair is growing well, and is NOT WHITE as is most always the case in horse wounds.
