Among the pictures at New Wonderland last night—an Egyptian depiction created much interest. The pictures of the camels loading up for a journey over the desert; the caravan getting ready to start—the different scenes wherein the natives of this strange country play a part—all were full of uncommon interest—and the clear, even steadiness of the pictures commend the house as a place of entertainment out of the ordinary. The music too, is most attractive—and altogether there is no more pleasant place to spend a happy half hour than in New Wonderland.
