Painful Boils
Bad Blood the Cause

When boils start to break out on different parts of the body it is an evidence that the blood is loaded up with impurities.

Just when you think you are rid of one, another crops up to take its place and prolong your misery.

All the lancing and poulticing you may do will not stop more coming.

Why not give that old, reliable, blood purifying medicine Burdock Blood Bitters a chance to banish the boils? Thousands have used it for this purpose during the past 60 years.

Take B.B.B. and get rid of the bad blood and the boils too.

Rev. D. M. Fraser Is Ordained At W'chester, N. S.

The following item is clipped from the Border Post, Amherst, N. S., and will be of interest to Island friends.

"A service which was of great interest and will be long remembered took place at Westchester Baptist Church on Sunday, Oct. 16, when Douglas Murray Fraser was ordained to the Gospel ministry.

Mr. Fraser, who spent the earlier years of his life in Oxford, N. S., later removed with his parents to Westchester, and having studied in two different institutions of learning, received an education which would fit him for any walk in life. A few years ago he was soundly converted into all the fundamentals of the Gospel faith. He received a definite call from God to enter the Gospel ministry. In 1936 he was licensed to preach by the Westchester Baptist Church and having received a call from the Central Bedeque Baptist Church, at Prince Edward Island he took up the pastorate of that Church, where he has since laboured. He was accompanied to Westchester by his wife, formerly Miss Hazel Webb of this community, and a fine group from the Central Bedeque Church, including several deacons and the clerk of that church.

"The church room, which has been renovated and enlarged, was tastefully decorated with late autumn leaves and fall flowers. In the morning an inspiring prayer and testimony meeting was held and a song service, singing the good old Gospel hymns.

"In the faternoon Brother Fraser was examined in the presence of a large congregation by a council of twelve men, who heartily recommended him for ordination.

"In the evening in the presence of one of the largest congregations ever seen in Westchester, Brother Fraser was ordained by the laying on of hands and ordaining prayers which held the powar of the old time Gospel of the Cross.

"The pastor, the Rev. T. A. Meister, delivered the charge to the candidate and welcomed him to the ministry. The Rev. Max Balser, pastor of Clark's Harbor Baptist Church, gave the charge to the Church and concluded with an inspiring evangelistic message.

"Very evident through all the services was the witness of the Holy Spirit to all that was said and done.

"The service was closed with benediction by the Rev. Douglas Fraser.

"Brother Fraser's many friends in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island will follow his career with great interest and wish him God speed in his great work of the Gospel ministry."

Rev. Mr. Fraser and Mrs. Fraser returned on Saturday from Westchester to their home in Bedeque.

ment was adverse to proceeding with a project which would necessitate development of properties now privately owned. However, no concrete plan had ever been proposed to Federal authorities by local organizations pressing for waterfront development, it was said.

Maritime Board's Attitude

The desirability of pressing for some definite project, rather than a general request for harbor improvements, was stressed at the recent meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade, it was learned. The Maritime Board in a resolution passed at its recent annual session at Sydney declared that "the Maritime Board of Trade at its annual meeting reaffirms its request to the Federal authorities that adequate harbor improvements be provided at Charlottetown so that the largest type of freight and passenger steamers, now on regular Maritime service, may be able to serve Prince Edward Island as recommended in the Duncan Commission."

The new proposal would probably be discussed at a meeting of the Charlottetown Board of Trade in the near future, it was thought. Lt. Col. G. E. Full president of the local Board, was in Montreal, however, and no announcement had been made. The meeting would not likely be held before the president's return probably late this week.

No Evidence Of Pre-session Activity Noted though there was no official comment.

In any event there will be a Canada-United States agreement whether or not its terms are to be influenced by an Anglo-American Pact.

If the government, in its efforts to have parliament prorogued before the visit of the King and Queen early next summer, calls the members to Ottawa before Christmas it will probably choose the third or fourth Thursday in November.

Adjournment for the Christmas and New Year halidays would have to be reached around Dec. 21 in order to let the members get home for Christmas and it would scarcely be considered useful to have them here for less than a month before the adjournment.

Absence of the Prime Minister and several of his cabinet colleagues from the capital has brought a period of quiet which has been relieved by the Bren gun inquiry being conducted by Mr. Justice H. H. Davis of the Supreme Court of Canada sitting as a commission of one.

Defence Minister Mackenzie is now the central figure of the inquiry which was prompted by an article by Col. George Drew, of Toronto in Maclean's Magazine, criticising the contract given without tender to Major J. E. Hahn, president of the John Inglis Company of Toronto, for 7,000 Bren light machine guns.

church and asked the people to abstain from all manifestations.

Desired To Co-operate

The Cardinal's first point explained the basis for the solemn declaration of the Austrian Bishops March 18, a few days after the Anschluss of Austria and Germany in which they voiced recognition of the Nazi movement's achievements and proclaimed their "loyalty as Germans to the German Reich."

The letter said the declaration was "inspired by an honest desire to get to a peaceful collaboration with the present legal authority of the country. The further course of events, unfortunately were accompanied by measures which were bound to hit the Catholic population gravely....."

The Cardinal did not enumerate the measures, but he undoubtedly referred among others to the discontinuance of confessional schools, and to Austria's new marriage law which makes civil marriages compulsory.

No Attack Made

His second point was a denial that he attacked Chancellor Hitler or the Nazi Regime at the Catholic demonstration which led to Nazi rioting.

"My sermon in the prayer service of Catholic youth in St. Stephen's Cathedral Oct. 7 contained not a word of attack on the Fuehrer and Chancellor of the Reich," Cardinal Innitzer wrote. "No did I use any inciting terms against him, or the State or the Party.

"The demonstration of young people after the religious celebration could neither have been foreseen nor was it intended.

"It is not true political songs were sung on this occasion by Catholic youth."

(Nazis charged the Cardinal with organizing political chanting in which the Catholic youth in the square shouted "we want to see our Bishops" in union, in the manner of Nazis crying, "we want to see our Fuehrer")

"Words ascribed to me that 'I have decided to fight and I am prepared to conduct the fight.'" the letter went on under point three. "I never have spoken either in connection with the Bishops' conference or any other gathering of priests."

In the fourth point Cardinal Innitzer explained the reason for banning the "co-operating committee for religious peace" formed by pro-Nazi priests.

"The prohibition for priests to take part in the co-operating committee for religious peace was not issued by me alone but as a result of the vote at the Bishops' conference and not for political reasons but for reasons of church discipline," he said.

The last portion of the message was devoted to refuting reproaches in the Nazi press in connection with the annexation of Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland.

"I never overlooked the historically important hour in which my home country (the German Sudeten district) was led back into the German fatherland," the letter said. "Together with other German Cardinals I expressed my thanks to the Fuehrer and ordered thanksgiving services and the ringing of bells for the whole of Eastmark (Austria). I protest against the mortifying reproach that I placed myself in deliberate opposition to the Fuehrer and nation during these great days of the German people."

Sir Andrew Macphail As War Historian

alone," Sir Andrew wrote, "equipment was wholly lacking. Contractors appeared upon the scene. Without patterns, without supervision or direction, they poured into Quebec supplies that had no relation to the hard conditions of war. Men going upon active service were furnished with boots that might do very well for a farmer making an excursion to his barns on a Sunday afternoon, or for his daughter going to church. After 12 parades, these boots were reduced to a sodden mass, and the paper from which the heels were made returned to its primitive pulp. Wagons were assembled that might do very well on the illimitable prairie. They were of all possible types, so that each maker and every town might have a chance to profit by public funds; but there was not a road in Europe wide enough to allow them to turn."

Canadians would do well to take stock of themselves now, so far as the militia is concerned. With the "reprieve" given by the Munich agreement, there may be time to repair some of the fences which the apathy of our people, the complacency of politicians, and the so-called pacifists (who have been loudest in their clamour for action against the totalitarian states) have brought to a condition of virtual decay.

Sir Andrew's history of the medical services deals with a great many other matters, much of which reflects little credit on the "higher-ups" of 24 years ago. Its value now is in the parallel which may be drawn between conditions then and conditions in 1938. The whole work has a fascination all its own, for, in addition to engaging in somewhat acrimonious controversy the book is a valuable compendium of what the medical services achieved in 1914-1918 against almost insuperable obstacles. It is a work not for medical officers alone, but for all who would see what it involved in a nation at war.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES

text for the morning was Philippians 4:6, 7 "Be careful for nothing," followed by the assurance of God's peace to those who bring and leave their problems with him. The speaker drew attention to the background of memory as found in St. Paul's first European visit, and to the inimitable setting forth of salvation and its costs as contained in chapter two of the Epistle, making them jointly the authority for a profound personal faith opening out the life for the reception of divine power, with the resultant inflowing of the divine peace.

At the evening service Canon Haslam was the preacher bringing an illuminating message from John 14:6 "I am the way," etc. Step by step he led his hearers up from the popular conception of a localized heaven to the fuller knowledge of a spiritual salvation which is ours through faith in the sacrifice of the cross.

At the morning offertory the choir sang Shelley's anthem "The King of Love," and the evening music included Oley Speaks "More love to Thee."

THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Taking as his text the words of Jesus according to Saint John 6:28, 29, as the people ask "what shall we do, that we might work the works of God?" his reply is "this is the work of God, that ye might believe on him whom he hath sent." The Rev. H. L. Denton B. D. delivered a sermon on "Working the Works of God."

Jesus points out to the assembled people the necessity of the dynamic of a strong belief, definite, vital, sure. It was necessary then, it is necessary now. Jesus revealed to men God's purpose, Jesus showed men God's plan. Jesus made available the power to execute the plan. God's purpose is the salvation of men, all men need to be saved—from something and to something. It is said that the Church does not now emphasise, punishment, separation, as in earlier times. Let us never as we contemplate the love and mercy of God, overlook his justice.

God's plan is salvation through Christ. "There is none other name under heaven whereby men may be saved." In Jesus we approach God, we receive a vision of God—and of ourselves. And we must believe in the power of God, through Christ to bring salvation to pass. The power is infinite, it is available, and through this power we may become co-workers with God, for the salvation of mankind.

The anthem of the morning was "O taste and see," the offertory violin solo was taken by Miss Vera H. M. Campbell Mus. Bac with a selection from Tchaikowsky.

At the evening service the Rev. H. L. Denton, B. D., delivered the second of a series of sermons on "Some Saints and Some Sinners" with an eloquent address on "The Woman who was given Another Chance." The evening anthem was Shelley's "Saviour when night involves the Sky," Miss Pearl Burns taking the contralto solo. Miss Vera H. M. Campbell's evening solo was Harker's "How Beautiful upon the Mountains."

TRINITY UNITED CHURCH

At the morning service yesterday the message was brought by Rev. Hugh Millar. Speaking from John 4:35 the preacher said that the power of Jesus working through the gifts and efforts of the Christian Church, was needed to lead the world out of its narrow channels, and to usher in the broader life of the Kingdom of God.

The congregation was pleased to welcome to the pulpit of Trinity Church, Rev. C. H. Dickinson, B. D. of Toronto who spoke at the evening service. Rev. Mr. Dickenson, who is Book Steward of the United Church Publishing House, gave a comprehensive, interesting and enlightening account of the history and work of the Publishing House, and ended his sermon by pointing out the definite need, in the church, for the information and inspiration that can come from literature.

The morning anthem was "I Will Lift Up My Eyes." Mr. Roy Smallman took the bass solo part. In the evening the choir sang Gadsby's "I Will Lay Me Down In Peace." As a special number, Mrs. L. T. Lowther and Mrs. W. G. Spencer sang very sweetly the selection "Saved by Grace" as a duet.

Eight Memorials Honor Canada On Flanders Fields

(By. Capt. W. W. Murray, M. C.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 23—Eight memorials in memory of Canadian soldiers who gave their lives in the Great War are dotted over the battlefields of France and Belgium. All have been erected by the Canadian government and all are built in areas hallowed by the memory of Canadian endeavor and Canadian sacrafice. These monuments to 50,000 dead in foreign soil will be recalled in the celebrations Nov. 11 of the 20th anniversary of the Armistice.

The most northerly of the memorials is at Passchendaele where, in a little park a simple slab of granite records that here the Canadian Corps fought and endured in the early winter of 1917. The form of this memorial has been transferred to five others—those at Sanctuary Wood, in the Ypres Salient; Courcelette, Dury, Le Quesnel and Bourlon Wood.

Memories of the baptism of fire of the 1st Canadian Contingent are preserved in the granite shaft erected at St. Julien, about three miles north of Ypres. Out of the shaft comes the upper half of a brooding soldier, his head bowed in mourning over the thousands whose blood reddened the fields of Flanders in the spring of 1915. One anomaly of this monument is remarked at once: the "brooding soldier" is steel-helmeted. That type of headgear was not worn until early in 1916.

In Village and Ridge

The Sanctuary Wood memorial commemorates the desperate battles that raged in the Ypres Salient in June, 1916. The memorial at Courcelette, erected about a quarter of a mile south of the village, on the Albert-Bapaume Road, brings to mind the devastating battles of the Somme, in September, October and November, 1916.

At Dury, half a mile north of the Arras-Cambrai road, the memorial recalls the battles of Arras in 1918 and the breaching of the Drocourt-Queant Line. A few miles to the south-east, near the summit of the ridge which is crested by the thick growth of Bourlon Wood, is the granite slab recalling the storming of the Canal du Nord in September, 1918, and the subsequent battles for Cambrai and Valenciennes.

At Le Quesnel, the most southerly village on the Western battleline captured by the Canadians, the victory of Amiens on Aug. 8, 1918, is commemorated.

Work of 12 Years

The most pretentious of all the Canadian war memorials is that which towers above Vimy Ridge. It is all embracing, and all the emotions and purposes and hopes of Canada are expressed there in stone.

Twelve years was this memorial in the making. It was unveiled on July 26, 1936, by Edward VIII (now Duke of Windsor) in the presence of the President of the French Republic and 6,000 Canadian ex-Service men, their wives, and dependents of the fallen — pilgrims who had travelled to France for that purpose under the auspices of the Canadian Legion.
