DELIGHTFUL VISIT.—After a three weeks sojourn, enjoyed to the full extent with relatives and friends both in our city and on the "old farm" at Mount Albion, Mr. William Sealey of Brooklyn, N. Y., will start on his return today by way of St. John. Mr. Sealey has visited P. E. I. a number of times but declares it has no equal for natural beauties and invigorating, pure air. While he has traveled through many States across the border the natural charm, the genuine hospitality of the people and the benefit derived by a visit here rivals any other rural or city place. Mr. Sealey was formerly a newspaper man in Brooklyn, but is now with the Com. Exchange Bank of N. Y. City. He has numerous relatives and friends here, but has enjoyed a most delightful sojourn with the family of Mrs. Helen Sellar on Grafton Street, and at the home of Mr. Samuel Sealey, Lot 48. He returns greatly benefited and full of praise for hospitality and the natural beauties of P. E. I.

Urges More Use of Duck Eggs In Cooking

(Canadian Press.)

OTTAWA, August 22.—Remarking that the main essential was to get the public to realize that "it pays to use more duck eggs in cooking, O. O. Brown, of Scunthorpe, Eng., spoke to the world poultry congress on ducks as egg producers. Some of the smaller breeds he said are exceptionally suitable for egg production.

"Under suitable conditions costs of productions would be lower for duck eggs than for hen eggs, and production should be greater," he said, "ducks can only be suitably kept where there is free range, available, and difficulty is sometimes experienced in marketing their eggs. Duck egg production can safely be extended on general farms, in orchards, and wherever there is grass land available, so long as the individual flocks are not too large and provided that the marketing side of the business is properly tackled."

Cross Games With Leghorn With Satisfying Results

(Canadian Press.)

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.—Results obtained in crossing a handsome Indian Game cock with two white leghorn hens (English type) which had good trapnest records, were detailed to the breeding section of the world poultry congress today by Prof. A. Ghizi and Dr. A. Jaibell, of the Rovigo poultry experiment station. The object of this cross was to combine the masses of muscle found in the Indian gamecock with the extreme fecundity of the leghorn, while preserving the form of the Indian fowl.

Neither the large size and corresponding heavy weight of the game breed, nor the medium size and bodily weight of the leghorn had predominated. The two characteristics combined to produce subjects intermediate in appearance and weight.

Tuberculosis— Fly Infection

NO. 24

Insects play an important part in the spread of disease. Certain mosquitoes are responsible for the spread of Malaria and Yellow Fever.

There is one insect which demands our special attention, "The House Fly." It would be impossible to imagine any living thing with more filthy and disgusting habits, and which also has the ability to pass from place to place spreading diseases.

The fly does not care where he eats, it may be the garbage can, sugar bowl, or food on the dining room table. The fly is covered with minute hairs, which cause things to stick to it, and if the filth flies get into contain tubercule bacillus or other germs, they carry them from place to place.

Mothers should take particular care to never allow flies near the baby or his food.

Flies are really dangerous, they spread disease, and therefore should be destroyed.

Baby Chick Affects Entire Business

(Canadian Press.)

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.—The entire poultry business has undergone a radical change as a result of the rapidly-growing baby chick industry, Herbert H. Knapp, Shelby, Ohio, told the breeding section of the world poultry congress. Baby chicks had not only changed the trend of the branches of the business that existed at the time the shipping of chicks started, but new factors have been introduced to make a bigger and better business until poultry and its products rank as one of the leading endeavors in the agricultural life of North America.

One of the chief factors in the development of the baby chick industry, Mr. Knapp said, was the adoption of sale of baby chicks by the great chain stores in the past 20 years. This year's shipments of chicks by mail would aggregate more than four hundred millions, he said. The chief obstacle was the decided opposition on the part of fanciers who were in danger of losing the hatching egg business.

The Gold Rush Pick-A-Dilly

(By British United Press)

LONDON, August 20.—The miners' rush to Pick-a-Dilly Gulch diggings started before dawn the other day.

Rumour of rich pay brought fortune-seekers from north, south, east and west. Disappointed dole hangers, remittance men, and hoboes swelled the ranks of the diggers as processions converged on the gulch from the home counties, the midlands, and the land beyond the Humber. Seven miners trekked from Durham; a contingent arrived from the Rhondda Valley.

A minute to zero and a thousand expectant diggers had crowded in the gulch. Long Bill stood with his hand on an instrument of torture that loked like an ancient dentist's drill for stopping mastoden teeth. Swarthy Sam was not far away, fingering a contrivance like an old-fashioned parish fire engine that had been conceived in a gatling gun factory and weaned on dynamite.

All was ready. The boss looked at his watch.

"Go!" Sam pulled a lever, Long Bill thrust in his toothpick, and a hundred thunderstorms broke out at once. The earth quaked. Pick-a-Dilly Gulch flung up dirt, wood blocks, cement, everything.

Only a hundred of the trekkers had permits to dig. Each was given a brand-new shovel. Disappointed miners, refused for the time being permission to dig for treasure, sang community songs to cheer the others, or lolled on the rails and sat on barrows or boards, and strained anxious eyes into the cavities that were quickly appearing for sight of gold or a Roman pavement or a fossilised frog.

Nothing came to light but rusty pipes—dozens of them.

Within three hours the camp was fully in evidence. Shacks were pitched, braziers and frying pans were in use.

The gulch by midday was impassable. All travellers on wheels were switched round by way of the Regent divide or the St. James' trail, all of which means by interpretation, that the famous thoroughfare of Piccadilly is "up" and that for four months or so the poor man's motor-bus and the rich man's taxi will know it is no more.

GENERAL CONDITIONS OF BUSINESS

Taken from the Monthly Review of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Business is still expanding, though less rapidly than during last March and April. Goods are being moved in large volume and manufacturing industries report another slight increase in their working force. The average of wholesale prices has nevertheless fallen slightly from the June level and now stands almost exactly where it stood in May.

The recent drop in wheat prices was some weeks in advance of the normal summer decline, and is attributable mainly to good growing conditions alike in Europe and on this continent, together with a realization that the carryover from last season shows a considerable increase over last year's figure. The first threat of frost produced a quick recovery. Recent crop reports encourage the belief that the spending power of the prairie farmer will be well maintained during the Fall.

Interest centres at present in the building and construction industries. Recent fluctuations in building permits, construction contracts, and employment in construction are graphically shown on page 4. Expansion of business all over the country may be traced largely to this one factor, which is operating as strongly today as at any time in the past few years.

Less encouraging, in its bearing upon the future, is the value of building permits issued during the current year. As will be seen by reference to Fig. II, overleaf, the corrected curve of building permits has been falling sharply since January, and although still somewhat higher than at this time last year, is at present a good deal below the peak. There is a tendency, not clearly marked but natural enough, for changes in the volume of work done in this industry to lag some five or six months behind changes in the value of building permits.

WEDDING BELLS

On Thursday, August 4th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. McFarlane, DeSable, P. E. I., at 8.30 in the evening the friends and relatives of Mr. Roland A. Easter and Miss Ruth R. MacFarlane gathered to see these young people united in the bonds of wedlock.

Under an archway of evergreens and red roses with white bells the groom attended by the bride's brother, Smith MacFarlane, awaited the bride who was daintily attired in white silk crepe de chene with the customary veil and orange blossoms. The bride who was given away by her father carried a bouquet of sweet peas and was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Annie Easter dressed in pink georgette crepe. Mrs. Thomas B. Bell, of Albany, an aunt of the bride, played the Wedding March. The Rev. Geo. F. Sears of Hampton was the officiating minister and after the ceremony had been duly performed the bride and groom with the invited guests sat down to a delicious supper.

There were many presents received by the happy couple, including cheques, silver, china, etc., etc.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace and to the best man a pair of dull gold cuff links.

A very large number of friends and neighbors, probably upwards of two hundred arrived to greet and [illegible]

Hardened London Critic Is Shocked

LONDON, August 20. — An echo of the wave of reaction against sexy shows which swept New York last year resulting in a general house-cleaning of the theatre was heard in London today following the opening last night at the Globe Theatre of "Potiphar's Wife", starring Jeanne De Casalis.

Although the London critics, forewarned by the action of the Lord Chamberlain in refusing to allow the biblical passage from which the play derives its name to be spoken on the stage, were prepared for somthing out of the ordinary, most of them admit that some purple passages and Miss De Casalis's pajamas were more than they had expected.

"I thought up to last night that I was unshockable," says Hubert Griffith in the Evening Standard, "but found I wasn't." Miss De Casalis admits the pajamas are more scanty than is customary, but says the producer complained after the dress rehearsal that she was wearing too much and ordered her to remove the sleeves and part of the lining.

As for the forbidden biblical quotation, the audience found that printed on slips which were inclosed in the programme.

The average man at fifty is only about half as smart as he thought he was at twenty-five.
