with an investment of $40,000,000. It is interesting to note that 90 per cent of the newspapers in the United States are printed on paper made from Canadian pulp. Then comes "Canada's Silver South." This booth is all draped in black. With the exception, in the foreground, of a sheet of canvas 10x8 feet, which by a mechanical arrangement revolves so as to show, first, the mineral location in the celebrated Cobalt, then the head of the lake, and then the town of Cobalt. There is a splendid display of coal and peat in large show-cases at the end of the building, and also a show of asbestos. There is another immense case of gold, quartz, nickel, etc. Facing the "Silver South" is a beautiful panoramic representation of Canada's North, "Dawson City in the midnight sun," with Aurora Borealis effect. We also saw in miniature the harbour of Vancouver, with regularly appointed little ships floating at anchor and riding the "waves." Next was the fruit section. We entered through a rustic arch. On either side of glass cases containing all kinds of canned goods. Immediately above the show cases are ten large oil paintings, five on either side, on the right being Sir Robert Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir John A. McDonald, the Duke of Connaught and the Duchess of Connaught; on the other side Lord Strathcona, H. M. Queen Mary, King George V, Queen Alexandra and King Edward.

EULOGIES ALL ROUND.

On a wall, printed on cards which are framed in rustic fashion, the following inscriptions are read: "California has the trees that grow the richest—flavoured sun-kist oranges"; "Canada has the frost and snow kist trees that produce the richest-flavoured apples." To the right of the fruit section is a view of Fort Arthur and Fort William, also showing farm lands in the distance, and trains running and leading grain from large elevators between the two cities. All sections of Canada are represented by various farm scenes, all executed by various artists, and representing a triumph of art. Anxious to know if Prince Edward Island was remembered in all this magnificence, I made enquiries at the information bureau if they could tell us something about the island. We were immediately informed that all the information we required could be given, and we were handed some beautiful pamphlets giving exhaustive information about the province. The Canadian Exhibit altogether we consider marvellous, and the remarks which we heard on all sides confirmed our opinion and, indeed, indicated that in the minds of the visitors Canada's representation at the Exposition was in a category by itself, so far as perfection in arrangement and extreme excellence of handicraft were concerned. Some of the eulogistic references to the Department were in this strain: "WONDERFUL! WONDERFUL! THE MAN THAT GOT THAT UP MUST BE MARVELLOUS." "AREN'T THESE BEAUTIFUL?" "MY! ISN'T THAT PRETTY?" "CANADA DE SERVES GREAT CREDIT FOR HAVING SUCH AN EXHIBIT AS THAT." "MOST WONDERFUL OF ALL." "GOOD FOR CANADA! GO TO PROSPER HER." "BEST IN THE MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY AT THE FAIR." "WELL, LET US GO TO CANADA." "BEAUTIFUL AND GRAND. CANADA HAS NO COMPETITOR." As an instance of the love for their country which islanders have, the following is interesting. We saw in the register: "Jos. Simmons, Los Angeles representative of Prince Edward Island, PROUD OF MY NATIVE LAND!" In Los Angeles we had the great pleasure of meeting Mrs James R. Davison and Mrs Roome, and we spent a delightful evening with Mr and Mrs C. C. Gardner.

AT SAN DIEGO.

"We were also at the San Diego Exhibition, which was on a very much smaller scale than that at San Francisco. Some very beautiful specimens of miniature painting were shown here by an island lady, Laura M. D. Mitchell. Her subjects were "Dean Trew," "Girl in Pink," "Mrs Houch," and the girl in pink. She was $75. In San Diego we were treated to a drive of about one hundred miles over mountains and through orange valleys by Mr George Roome and his friend chicken farm where there were 24,000 chickens. Among the places we passed were Viejas Grade, Descanso, Sante, Lake Side Alpine, back by Bostonia, Elcojón, Lamesa, Lemon Grove and Encanto.

One of the most memorable sights seen by the visitors to Los Angeles, and one which impressed Mr. and Mrs. Paton very strongly, was a mammoth floral procession in that city. The procession was two miles long and the deep on each side, others occupying vantage points in and on buildings. There were numerous floats decorated with flowers, thousands upon thousands of which were used for the purpose. It was a sight that almost defied description, and will remain indelibly on the minds of those who witnessed it. "After all," said Mr Paton in conclusion, "for an ideal home life give have neither extreme poverty nor extreme riches, and the farmer does not require to ply his work on Sunday, as I saw them do in some parts that I visited, while the taxes paid by the farmers here are meagre compared with those paid out West. What we lack here is loyalty to our province. This is a Paradise compared to most places that I have seen. But in those places everyone boasts his own city, town or county. If it rained the rain just the weather was required; if cold, when snow fell, nothing better for orchards! And so on. We are instead try to be more cheerful and thank God that we have the best piece of earth on the globe. If we have not a good word for our own city and province, then we had better get out. Let us take a note from our Western friends and be boosters—not knockers!"

THE EXPRESS.—The express train from Summerside arrived in Charlottetown last night at 10.50 o'clock.

AT THE PEOPLE'S.—One of the greatest of all photo plays, "The Last Days of Pompeii," at the People's Theatre to-day.

HORSES FOR ARMY.—Mr W. S. McKie leaves for Halifax with 40 splendid horses for the army to-day.

PATRIOTIC MEETING.—Judge Stewart will address a patriotic meeting at Souris to-morrow evening.

Mr A. M. Wall, junior partner of the firm of Goldsmith, Wall & Co., Boston, arrived in Charlottetown yesterday by the Plant Liner, "A. W. Perry."

THE HOLIDAY.—The holiday on Monday was duly observed and although it rained somewhat in the evening the day on the whole was pleasant. The trains out of the city in the morning were thronged with holiday seekers provided with all the requisites for fishing. Many returned with splendid catches and others as usual were not so fortunate, but all at any rate came home feeling that they had had a very enjoyable time. The excursion to New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, was a great success. 110 persons making the trip. The 82nd Regiment supplied good music. At New Glasgow some games were held, which furnished amusement for those who take an interest in that sport. A very large crowd spent the day at Rocky Point, the s.s. Hillsboro being crowded on all trips. Some showers of rain fell in the latter part of the afternoon, but came too late to interfere with the pleasure of the excursionists.

PATRIOTIC RALLY

with an address which was brief but to the point. Did they, he asked, to see the Good Old Flag go under German rule, with all its unspeakable atrocities, established? He was sure they did not, and he believed that that night would be recruiting officers in themselves, because the nation they were fighting for stood for right, for liberty and for justice. Every effort must be exerted to defeat an enemy who had no scruples and who, disregarding every law of God and humanity, murdered women and children and defenceless men. Two hundred men were now required of the island, and he hoped with confidence that the young men here would realize their bounden duty and respond to the urgent call of the Empire.

The Premier, Hon. J. A. Mathieson, was the next speaker. The meeting in the history of the Province, and the largest ever held in the Province, was a tribute to the loyalty of the people and the interest they took in the great war which involved all our savings they valued most in their civilization. He thought they might regard it as having two main objects—one, to commemorate those of our sons who had fallen in doing their duty to the Empire, of those who had fallen bravely and had met with misfortune or accident; and of those who had been more fortunate and had carried through their arms with safety to themselves. They should appreciate, and they all did appreciate, the bravery of those men and the wonderful feat of arms they had performed in the whole history of warfare. And had never been a nobler feat of arms than that achieved by the Canadians at the battle of Langemarck. (Cheers.) The high against overwhelming odds and all that men could do. It was a proud circumstance that that night to realize that the ancient spirit of their race was not dead, that the old strength and courage never faded away, and that they were still there in full force among their sons and brothers, who had been tried in as fiery furnace as ever courage and strength of man was tested since the world began. (Cheers.) What should they do who were here at this moment? He thought they should be in the ranks. One of the Canadian regiments had suffered terribly in the war—the Princess Patricia's—and some of the island men who had fought bravely to the front with that regiment had fallen too. "Let us be brave," continued the Premier, "as were our forefathers in the days of old, when it was their pride that as one fell another stepped forward where they had fallen too." We are called upon now to supply 200 men to step up where their comrades stood and to help to carry through the conflict to victory. I know the appeal to the young men of this Province will not be made in vain. There is not a young man who is worthy of the name who, if he is free to go and if he has the strength to go, will not be ready and willing to go. One may fall. If he does, he dies the most glorious death which we know. He dies in the defence of freedom, in the defence of his native land. If he lives he carries with him to the end of his days an honored name; and living or dying, his relatives, his friends and his country will all take pride in the manhood he has proven. Those who do not come home will be heroes for the rest of their days. The men who have fallen will be regarded as heroes and martyrs in the days to come. But those who with the power and the opportunity, failed to take advantage of this highest duty, they that have fallen to the British Empire, those who fall to rise to that requirement will carry with them to their days' end the penalty of their failure. At the end of the struggle he concluded, those of our men who had done their duty in the cause of freedom and righteousness, would be respected, and their names would be "a watchword to the earth." (Cheers.)

Rev. Dr. Fullerton then addressed a stirring and forceful appeal to the young men to come forward and do their duty to their country and the Empire in this hour of extreme necessity. His speech was masterful and earnest and his eloquent appeal to the higher feelings of his audience could not fail to be effective. In his opening remarks he said that there was not an officer in Charlottetown—nor he knew them all—who was not prepared to go to the front, preferably with a contingent from the island, but to go in any case, even at the sacrifice of the position they held, in the active Militia in Canada. He said that advisedly because it was true. He continued:

"We are assembled here this evening to express our highest admiration and noblest appreciation for what stands out as the greatest feat of arms in connection with the thrilling story of the British Empire. We may go back to Waterloo, behind Waterloo we may trace the mighty development of this great Empire to which we are proud to belong, and the deed of arms at Ypres stands unparalleled for heroism, for national devotion, for brilliant courage, for extraordinary endurance; and thus it is we are assembled in such large numbers to do honor to our Canadian patriots. We are assembled also to give expression of sympathy to the hundreds and hundreds of sorrowing hearts in Canada today. Their weeping eyes are turned to the alien land of Flanders, there in teeming graveyard lie all that is mortal of their loved ones. They need our expressions of sympathy; they need us to say that they feel so nobly that their deaths are honored by God and by man alike. They need us to tell them that their loved ones could not pass into the unseen and eternal in a nobler way than they, the men who have fallen? Who are their numbers are far too large for us. Men of age, men of grey hairs, veterans in the fight who might well have spent their remaining years in the sweets of domestic felicity and joy. But the old spirit of chivalry stirred in their hearts and when they heard that the old flag was threatened they gathered themselves together under the aegis and went forth in defence of our great Empire. They have fallen and we drop a tear on their last resting place and extend the hand of sympathy and affection to the children who are mourning the loss of their fathers and to the widows who are in desolation. But with them went young men—men of clean lives, of pure minds, of clear eye, of ardent enthusiasm, of bright hopes, of brilliant courage; young men of dash and valor went out from Canada. Do you not remember that when that thirty thousand men left our shores like a huge western wave and never stayed their progress until they landed on the shores of France? And then never ceased until they held the most dangerous position, a position that was looked upon as untenable by the splendid soldier who is Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in the field today. More than that, they not only held that position, but they actually retrieved part of that ground that had been lost by that huge advance of the German forces. Remember this. While we have glory unexcelled, while we have credit today for the Canadian troops that stand higher than any other credit given to troops fighting for the Empire, this also is true, that the German forces advanced three miles, and we crushed the Allies' front back. This is the greatest advance made in this whole campaign since the month of October last. Three miles of advance and we could only get it back. Do you understand what that means? Today they are shelling Dunkirk; Dunkirk is only 46 miles from the great city of London. Today they are in a stronger position than they have ever been for carrying on offensive operations against our troops. Now what does this celebration mean? Does it mean we are nearly assembled to express our admiration? Not at all. It means that the blood of our brothers is crying to us from the soil of Flanders. It means that they are saying to us again and again, "What loss could not overtake you must not lose; what we have sacrificed our lives to obtain you must not allow to be wrested from you; you must not allow the temporary advantage we have gained to be thrown away." They are saying to us: Is our precious blood to be shed in vain? Is there nothing to be gathered from the blood that has been poured out on the soil of Flanders? They are appealing to you, and we are assembled here this evening to ask you, what is your answer to this appeal? We want men, we want ammunition, we want food. Rev. Dr. Fullerton then made a strong and fervent appeal to every young man who had no ties stronger than his duty to the Empire to enlist at once. Concluding, he said, "Whether we gain recruits or not, we have filled this building with loyal hearts and true, who are here to express their admiration for the heroes of Canada who have fallen in this great strife. In years to come, every man who has taken part in this great war, every woman who has surrendered her husband, every mother who has given her son will feel that they have been added to the temple of humanity that has its finest lustre from the splendid constitution under which we live as members of the greatest Empire the world has ever seen, and an Empire that is not destined to go under. On the contrary, if we play our parts she shall gain a greater ascendancy, a nobler elevation, a higher position in the sight of God than she has ever held in the past."

The meeting closed with the playing of the National Anthem by the band. A few recruits "signed on" afterwards.
