WINGS OF TOMORROW: The Story of Aviation
 No. 9: New Terror Aloft

West opened the heart king. The ace won, a trump was led to the ace (to guard against the blank queen) and declarer then re-entered dummy with a club in order to take a trump finesse. West won and continued with hearts. When declarer ruffed he was down to two trumps, and the vital diamond tricks were still far from being established. It didn't matter how declarer maneuvered from this point—he was doomed. Actually, he shifted up West's last trump and then led a diamond. West put up the king and led another heart. This look South's last trump, and the diamond ace was still in East's hand. As mentioned above, South probably would have made his contract with the greatest of ease if his trumps had been A-K-x-x-x instead of the actual A-K-J-10-8, which of course is theoretically far better. With the weaker trump suit, South simply would have laid down the ace and king, then gone about his business setting up the necessary two diamond tricks. With the opponent's trumps, whatever they were, breaking 3-2, no defense would then be effective.

It was too bad that South had to be handicapped by the stronger suit, and that he should have tried for a finesse that was utterly unnecessary!

LONDON — (CP) — R.H. Turk has been appointed Bargemaster to the King, a position vacant since 1942. His brother, F. Turk, is swan marker to the Dyers' Company.

able to carry one atomic bomb, packing the punch of an entire squadron of the past war's Superfortresses.

(3) Radar and television are now being used to flight-test jet fighters. Controlled from the ground or from a "mother" plane, the craft can be maneuvered beyond the limits of safety applicable when a human pilot is carried. Latest navigation aids include a radar device which pictures the surrounding country on a screen when the ground is obscured by clouds from the pilot. A wartime development, it aided bomber crews in finding their targets. Air liners will soon make use of similar devices.

(4) Rocket-propelled planes, already glide-tested by the Army and now being prepared for the first man-carrying flights, will succeed the jets in military aviation. Later, scientists may find ways of applying atomic power to aircraft, improving upon the astounding performance of the rocket planes. To do this, the problem, at present insurmountable, of protecting the occupants of the atom-powered plane from radiation must be solved. Perhaps by that time, if fighting air forces are still being built, it will no longer be necessary that men pilot the planes. Radio-guided missiles will do the fighting.
