THE GOSPEL OF COMFORT.

This is a cold world. In every circumstance or relation there must be a qui pro quo.
It is never—Something for Nothing.
It is always—Nothing for Nothing.
COMFORT!—That is a sweet word in a selfish world.

MELISSA IS COMFORT.
We are all after comfort. Comfort in our domestic relations, in the state of our liver, in our association with the universe, when the universe—the Canadian part of it, at any rate—threatens to engulf us in a sudden deluge.
The Melissa Overcoat protects from both cold and rain. It is comfort upon a cold day. It is comfort upon a rainy day.
For it is at once an Overcoat and a Rainproof Garment. It has a double function, and each spells CONSOLATION. Melissa replaces the wretched cold, non-porous and dangerous rubber coat, and confers a beautiful comfort with its warmth, its perfect porosity, and its splendid protection from cold and rain.
Melissa is the triumph of the age.
There are imitations of Melissa.
There have also been imitations of Shakespeare. Gold has been imitated by a base alloy. The splendor of the rose has had a sickly counterfeit.
Be sure you get the real "Melissa." All genuine porous rainproof clothes are stamped in wax with the Melissa trade-mark seal, and Melissa garments have the trade mark label attached. None other genuine.

"The Last Braw Bridal That I was at"

About 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Jan. 9th the writer, accompanied by his wife and a lady friend, started from a point about ten miles from the village of Kensington toward that thriving centre. It had been deemed advisable to take a pung sleigh, and ere a third of the journey was completed the wisdom of this choice was attested. Though the roads were bare in some places, in others they showed a decided partiality sometimes to one side of the sleigh, then again to the other, for, by the aid of the banks of the "beautiful snow" they strove to raise one runner higher in the world than the other. As a result one of the ladies was suddenly interrupted in her contemplation of the beauties of the landscape by a friendly collision between her ear and a frozen lump of earth. A cry from the fallen lady called the attention of the occupants of the sleigh to her vacant seat and herself. A halt was called and she gained a firm position beside the others; but alas! the other lady was soon reminded that mother earth may sometimes be a hard resting place.
Arriving at length at Kensington, we are kindly treated by friends there; and soon a sleigh driven by a young man, and intended to convey the ladies to their destination, stops at the door. A rather blank look, which may betoken disappointment (but we'll generously believe it does not) over-spreads the features of this handsome youth as he becomes aware of the non-appearance of the expected third lady. The writer is content to accompany a friend on foot the remainder of the way. About a mile from Kensington we arrive at the imposing and substantial residence of our enterprising citizen, Mr. Wm. Paynter. Had we not known before that this evening is one of more than ordinary importance to our good friend's household, the kindly welcome which shines on the beaming countenances of himself and wife, and a glance around would convince us. All is merry bustle.
And now my readers must know the mission on which we have come. Twenty-five years ago this 9th of January, triumphantly and amid the congratulations of friends—many of whom are present to-night to congratulate him on what the years have brought—Mr. P. carried away from her home, above-named handsome village, Miss Jane Casley as his bride. This, then, is their silver wedding. A glance around their palatial residence convinces us that we are in for a "gran, guide time." In one room is a company partaking of the good things of this life from a table laden with proofs of Mrs. P. and her daughters' skill in the culinary art. Dispersed through the other rooms, on the walls of which are appropriate notices in evergreen dotted with everlasting, are many groups of people of varying ages. From one room come merry strains that almost set in motion the feet of those who have long since passed sweet sixteen, and peeping in we see presiding at the organ the vivacious wife of the Reverend Mr. Hicks. The centre of a group in another room is the reverend gentleman himself. Almost all classes are represented. We see present M. D.'s, M. P.'s, D. D.'s, and last but not least, "the farmer who feels them all." Friends chit pleasantly on various subjects, among which the New Year and the old ones receive their share of attention. Many are the anecdotes told of the years that have passed since they listened to the merry jingle of bells on their wedding night. Passing around I always find a group of admirers about the long table in the hall, on which are arranged the many handsome and valuable gifts noticeable in the beautiful collection on the shelves above-named, and the guests, which are the presents we conclude that the recipients will be in a better position to eat butter than potatoes, as no less than four butter coolers—silver at that—are on the table, and not one knife.
After the writer has accompanied his best girl to supper and had his share of dainties, his attention is attracted by a clamor on the veranda, and he soon discovers that a merry group of young men with faces disguised have come to life things up by tooting, rattling and thumping, the usual charavari accompaniment to the wedding. After a view of the bride and a liberal treat of cake, which is passed around by the son and son-in-law of the house—Mr. Wesley Paynter and Mr. M. Stafford—they move away, giving a farewell salute as they go.
The hours of the evening glide swiftly by. At 10.30 an abundance of fruit and nuts of various kinds is passed around. Another hour and a half spent in pleasant chat and cracking good jokes, and the guests, which are eighty in number, after wishing for Mr. and Mrs. Paynter health and happiness till their golden wedding day, and for themselves the pleasure of again being at such an enjoyable affair, disperse to their several homes, pronouncing this one of the pleasantest evenings of their lives.

News Notes.
The recent cases of cholera in Hamburg are ascribed to the drinking of water from the Elbe river.
The French authorities have decided to surrender Wells, the swindler, to the English government.

To Kidnap a Prince.

THIRTY-SIX CONSPIRATORS KILLED IN THE FRUITLESS ATTEMPT.
A recent despatch from Buda Pesth says: Despite official denials, the Posti Hirlap insists upon the truth of reports concerning a plot to kidnap the Prince of Montenegro. The plot was concocted in Cotinge, the capital of Montenegro, says the Hirlap, and was of clerical origin. It was discovered just before its maturity, but a desperate effort was made by the conspirators to carry it into execution. About 200 men started for the palace to seize the prince. Warning was received at the palace, already doubly guarded, and all the military in the city was called out. The soldiers met the conspirators a short distance from the palace and began firing at once. The conspirators, who were well armed, returned the fire and tried to charge through the troops, but were repulsed. After thirty-six conspirators had been killed and ninety had been wounded, the attempt to seize the palace was abandoned. Some thirty of the uninjured were arrested; the rest fled. Subsequently, says the Hirlap, twenty-eight priests were arrested for having led in the formation and attempted execution of the plot.

HAMILTON, April 20, 1892.

I was doctoring for years with physicians for a scaly and scurvy affliction of the scalp. They told me it was eczema, but gave me no permanent relief. I was also troubled with excessive dandruff, which would drop from my head like snowflakes. Hearing of Anti-Dandruff, I used it, and from the third application felt more relieved than for years; when half the bottle was used the eczema and scaly eruptions disappeared and have not returned since; dandruff was thoroughly removed, the itching of the scalp stopped, and for an elegant, clean and useful hair-dressing Anti-Dandruff has no equal.

Personal.

Lady Henry Somerset, the well-known temperance and social reformer, has frequently been twitted by interested parties with being herself the owner of public houses. She has just written a letter which effectually disposes of this calumny. When she succeeded to her father's estates ten years ago she found public houses on both the Reigate and Somer Town properties. Since then she has been able to close eight of these houses, having refused considerable sums of money for the extension of the leases before they expired. That the other licensed houses have not been extinguished is due solely to the fact that until the leases expire it is impossible for the ground landlord to deal with them.

News Notes.

The great painter Razzi filled his house with all sorts of animals, and taught his raven to cry "Come in!" whenever there was a knock at the door.
According to the Catholic Directory for Scotland just published, the Catholic population there is 365,000, with 366 priests, 340 churches and chapels, and 329 day schools. 240,000 of the population is in the archdiocese of Glasgow.

Faint Heart.

I love her so!
But does she know
How fondly I adore her?
Dread makes me dumb
Where'er I come
To plead my case before her.
Some common place,
Devoid of grace
Of meaning then I utter.
I come to woo—
And stoutly sue
For love—I only stutter.
Sometimes I think
When on the brink
Of a brave declaration,
She knows what my
Fond looks imply,
And waits for my oration.
But even then
I slump again,
And eloquence deserts me,
White all the while,
I see a smile
In her bright eyes that hurts me.
Oh, cruel fate!
My wretched state
Must surely warn me,
When I should speak
My tongue grows weak,
She is divinely pretty,
What shall I do?
Unless I woo,
Some other chap may get her—
By Jove a bright
Idea! To-night
I'll just write her a letter.

The Nova Scotia Coal Deal.

The New York World, of Friday last, says:
"Despatches from Philadelphia say that there is some foundation for the report that a syndicate of capitalists is negotiating for the control of the Nova Scotia coal fields. Reading, it is claimed, is not directly interested. The finance company of Pennsylvania has not yet been consulted regarding the deal, but it is stated that it will be made the selling agent of the combination, the arrangement being similar to that made with the Reading. Those in the deal are reported as friendly to the Reading, and the coal will not come into competition with the Pennsylvania and southern soft coals, the syndicate availing itself of the Reading, New England, Boston and Maine Branch."
The Herald's remarks: "Of all monopolies, a coal monopoly is capable of being made the most oppressive. It will have every railway, every line of steamers, every iron works, every manufacturing industry in fact, by the throat, and can strangle them whenever it sees fit. It is no wonder that the Province is up in arms. Talk of 'railway monopoly' by the transfer of the I. O. R. to the C. P. R. Why, that with the open sea all around us, would be a mere dash-bite compared to the absolute tyranny of the monopoly that the secessionist annexationist traitors of the local government are seeking to fasten on us."
