

THE FAT IN

the food supplies warmth and strength; without it the digestion, the muscles, the nerves and the brain are weak, and general debility follows. But fat is hard to digest and is disliked by many. Scott's Emulsion supplies the fat in a form pleasant to take and easy to digest. It strengthens the nerves and muscles, invigorates mind and body, and builds up the entire system.

KITCHENER'S QUICK MOVE.

IT SAVED A BRITISH FORCE FROM CAPTURE AT LEEUW SPRUIT.

The London Standard correspondent throws light on Lord Kitchener's escape from capture. The cables told the story as if Kitchener had been surprised and forced to take to his heels. The fact is that Lord Kitchener, instead of moving back to save himself, moved forward to save a small British force that was in danger of annihilation at the hands of the Boers.

The Standard correspondent tells the story thus: Lord Kitchener's prompt action saved a couple of construction trains, which had been sent to repair the bridge at Leeuw Spruit. One of them was stopped, and a truck overturned, owing to the rails having been removed by the Boers. Lieut. Holmes and six men held the enemy at bay, while the second train was warned. A party of 50 Volunteer Engineers were on it, and most of the rifles were in the first train. Some of the men dashed back for three-quarters of a mile to reinforce Lieut. Holmes, while the others fetched rifles wherewith to defend the second train.

Captain Lloyd drew up his force on both sides of the railway, and after compelling 400 Kaffirs, by the exercise of main force, to lie down and remain quiet, opened a steady fire. The position, however, had become one of extreme danger, when, of a sudden, shells were seen to fall in the midst of the enemy. It seems that a member of a small working force near at hand had managed to escape and carry news of the attack to Lord Kitchener, who was encamped with thirty-five men on Koppie's Station.

Lord Kitchener at once rode to the camp of the Shropshire regiment, and brought a gun into action, personally directing its fire. The fall of darkness compelled the Boers to retreat and the valuable railway material was saved. One of the engines had thirty-eight bullet marks and the other forty, but no serious damage was done.

Under Lord Kitchener's supervision prompt measures were taken to strengthen the lines of communication. The defence of them was entrusted to General Smith-Dorrien, who acted with great energy. The bridges were speedily repaired, and there is now thorough railway communication with Cape Town, while the line to Durban will be open shortly.

CAPE REBELS.

The bill for the trial of rebels imposes no penalties outside the present law, which perpetually disfranchises those convicted of treason, if they are condemned by the higher and those condemned by the lower are only tribal disfranchised for five years. The Attorney-General will decide upon the tribunals before which the accused will be prosecuted. He enjoys the confidence of the people and every one believes that he will use his discretion fairly. The 'Onsland,' the Dutch newspaper, has made an attack on ex-Prime Minister Schreiner with the evident object of preventing the members of the Afrikaners Bond in the Cape Parliament from following Mr. Schreiner, in support of the bills drafted by the Sprigg Ministry providing for the trial of rebels, etc. These bills were drafted at a consultation between Mr. Schreiner, former Attorney-General, and Rose-Innes, the Attorney-General in the Sprigg Cabinet. Mr. Schreiner and Mr. Solomon, who are members of the Bond, are in full accord with the ministry's proposals, and will strongly support them. Men who know Mr. Schreiner are confident that he will secure a fair following of Bond members of the Cape Parliament. The leaders of the extreme Bond faction are Mr. Sauer, the former Commissioner of Public Works, and Mr. Dewarr. The latter is the only Hollander in the Cape Parliament.

The consul met at Shanghai on Thursday last and decided to prevent the sale of arms in the settlement. It was remarked that the British consul had not attended the last three meetings of the consuls.

ORIENTAL DIPLOMACY.

HOW THE JAPANESE TOLD THE FRENCH OF AN ERROR IN GEOGRAPHY.

The presence of the Japanese Crown Prince in Paris has reminded some one of a story.

It was at the time of the exhibition in 1867. A Japanese embassy went to Paris to treat for three free ports in France, in return for which France was to have three in Japan. The negotiations proved short and amiable.

"Make your choice," said Japan, "we will choose afterward."

The minister of foreign affairs selected Yokohama, Yeddo and Han-Yang. The embassy made no objection; they simply smiled and went on their way.

Some time afterward Japan sent word that the three ports mentioned were agreed to, and in return Japan desired Havre, Marsellies and Southampton.

This last named gave the French officials fits. They never laughed so much before, and certainly never since. Southampton a French port! No, it was too good. Gently, but unmistakably, they explained the situation.

"Why, Southampton is in England," they replied.

"We know that," came "the cool response; "but then Han-Yang is in Korea."

Whereupon the French officials collapsed.—London Spare Moments.

THE CHINESE ARMS.

The Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle writes: "It is rather a sad circumstance that the guns which served to kill so many of the allied forces at Tien-Tsin were once the property of some of the very foreign soldiers who fell before their murderous fire. Probably one-half of Prince Tuan's followers are carrying rifles which formerly armed the German army. It is a matter of fact that the European governments have helped to put rifles in the hands of the men who are now using them with such terrible effect. Two years ago the German army adopted a new model of the Mauser rifle, which had the effect of practically making obsolete all of the old patterns on hand. Following the custom in such cases, the government sold 500,000 stand of the old arm to German speculators. The latter found a ready customer in China, where thousands of other guns, with no end of ammunition had already been sold.

"It is a sad circumstance, but history tells of a sadder. For months prior to the breaking out of the Southern rebellion arms and ammunition in vast quantities were shipped from the arsenals in the north into the South with the connivance of the federal government, when it was known that rebellion had been determined upon: the event of Abraham Lincoln's election to the presidency. And yet the parties responsible for this treachery (President Buchanan and his cabinet) were never punished, Germany's sale of her condemned arms to China was innocent but unfortunate. That is all.

With Years WISDOM.

The answer to that old query, "What's in a name?" was not hard to define in the case of one justly celebrated Family Remedy that had its origin away down in Maine, which proves that with age comes wisdom about

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

An old lady called at a store and asked for a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment; the clerk said "they were out, but could supply her with another just as good." The engaging smile that accompanied this information was frozen stiff when she replied: Young Man, there is only one Liniment, and that is Johnson's.

Originated in 1810 by an old Family Physician. There is not a remedy in use which has the confidence of the public to a greater extent. Could a remedy have existed for nearly a century, except that it possess extraordinary merit?

WAR ECHOES.

Says a South African paper: An orderly who did not know Lord Roberts, for whom he was carrying a despatch, riding up to another orderly, asked aloud, "Where's Bobs." "Here I am my lad; what can I do for you?" said a cheery voice close by. It was that of the Commander-in-Chief.

A gunner of the 44th Battery, Royal Field Artillery, owes his life to having a pack of cards in his pocket. In a letter just received at Colchester, a member of Nesbitt's Horse states that at Priesk the gunner was struck in the left breast by a bullet. It lodged in a pack of cards in the pocket of his khaki jacket, and passed through the whole pack with the exception of the last card—the ace of spades. He was unhurt.

The mayor of Portsmouth recently visited Her Majesty's ship Powerful in the harbor, and presented each man of the naval brigade who was present during the siege of Lady Smith, with a handsome silver hunter watch, each of which bore the name of the recipient and the inscription "Siege of Ladysmith, 118 days, 1899-1900." In all 220 watches were distributed to the men, who were drawn up under the poop. The mayor, in the course of a brief congratulatory speech said the gift was made by a few London admirers who did not wish their identity to be disclosed.

Mr. Alfred Fripp, senior surgeon of the Yeomanry Hospital, a letter from whom is published in the London "Physician and surgeon," says: I had some most interesting conversations with Boer officers, prisoners in Bloemfontein. They say that the hope of the ultimate success of the Republican forces depended from the first entirely upon their president's reiterated promises of foreign intervention, without which they never for a moment thought they could win in the long run. First it was Germany who was to help them, then Russia, and lastly America. They declared that they had eighty thousand men in the field from the first, which was more than I thought.

Writing to his diocesan magazine, the Bishop of Natal says that he has been approached by Lady Roberts with the view of having the piece of ground where her son, Lieut. Roberts, is buried, consecrated. This would provide for the grave being kept up. The land must first be acquired, and then, after consecration, it becomes a part of the regular duties of the Arch-deacon, at his annual visitation, to see that the graveyard is properly cared for and maintained as a sacred spot.

The chief of a tribe of the Maoris of New Zealand is sending a club elaborately carved out of greenstone to Lord Roberts, "the brave man." This is the first time a chief has parted with one of these beloved heirlooms, which he values quite as much as an English duke does his ducal mansion. "It has always been my strongest feeling," said the letter accompanying the gift, "that we should join you, if only to ornament your feet or to accompany your dear son to the other country."

A BOXER PLACARD.

Native papers state that the Boxer placards posted throughout Nanking contain the following: "I, the commander-in-chief, heaven troops, will march from Peking to Nanking with them shortly. The principal object is to burn and destroy churches, chapels and then telegraph poles, post-offices, telegraph stations, colleges and schools. People need not be frightened when they see our arrival here. We are going to drive away the foreigners as to keep the Empire in peace and comfort. We are purchasing provisions for succor. We will give market price, but sellers must also charge moderately. We will not destroy yamens and customs. They can levy duty as usual. If any people disobey this order they will be beheaded at once."

A despatch says that for the last fortnight a Chinese steamboat has been towing a cargo boat between Woo Sung and the Shanghai arsenal, presumably with arms and ammunition to strengthen the defence of the requested the Chinese officers to discontinue the sailing of this vessel, but she passed Wednesday as usual.

SHOEING HORSES.

The practice of some blacksmiths, when shoeing horses, to take a hot shoe and bed it into the hoof is most reprehensible. The sensitive parts of the foot are injured by the red hot shoe, violent inflammation which frequently terminates in suppuration follow this nefarious custom. Burning the sole is to be avoided as it does often produce lameness, causes the hoof to become weak and easily broken. An artist in shoeing can, by the use of the knife and rasp, fit the hoof to the shoe and if this method was universally employed it would largely reduce the number of crippled horses in the country. The owner of a horse should never permit a blacksmith to apply a red-hot shoe to the sole of his animal if he has pleasure in using a horse with sound feet.

NERVOUS troubles are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which enriches and purifies the blood. It is the best medicine for nervous PEOPLE.
