New ARDA Agreement Now Being Prepared

CAPITAL BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN

OTTAWA — Prince Edward Island is entitled to 2.7 per cent of the total federal contribution to projects under the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act, it was revealed in the Commons.

In response to questions placed on the order paper by Warner Jorgenson, a Manitoba Conservative MP, the government said that it has not yet completed negotiations with each of the 10 provinces for renewal of the master ARDA program.

The current agreement expires in March 1965 and a number of amendments to the agreement are being worked on by the ARDA staff with a view to obtaining new agreements with the provinces after next spring.

Under the old agreement, the P.E.I. percentage of the contribution is the lowest of any of the 10 provinces. Highest amount is set aside for Ontario projects at 22 per cent, with Quebec second at 20.9.

Other Atlantic Province percentages are: 3.2 for Newfoundland, 6.5 for Nova Scotia and 6.6 for New Brunswick.

A.T. Davidson, director of ARDA, said that the over-all program, in land use, soil and water conservation and research projects, continues to gain momentum throughout the nation.

Sino-Russian Dispute Has Entered New Phase

By ANDREW WALLER

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union's ideological conflict with Communist China entered a decisive new phase when the Soviet Union publicly committed itself to an international Communist conference, even if China would not take part.

A long editorial in Pravda, the Soviet Communist party daily, said Moscow recently proposed a preliminary meeting of 26 Communist parties to begin in Moscow Dec. 15.

This meeting would prepare the ground for a full - scale conference in mid-1965.

But if any party did not wish to take part in either of the meetings, the remainder would go ahead.

Pravda attacked China's objection that the Soviet and Chinese parties had not reached unity of opinion by consultation.

'TO DIVIDE PARTIES'

It said that to suggest two parties could take it upon themselves to decide questions affecting the whole world Communist movement is "to return to the days of the cult of personality, to divide parties into superior and inferior."

Pravda said if any party does not want to take part in the December meeting, the others should not let this hold up their work.

The Sovie Union and China have been at odds over how to further the cause of Communism throughout the world. The Soviet party has advocated peaceful coexistence with the West but the Chinese prefer violence.

The 26 parties, which include all the ruling ones except the Yugoslavs, are those which formed a commission before the 1960 international Communist conference.

Italy is one of them and Monday's announcement came as Palmiro Togliatti, general secretary of the Italian Communist party, arrived in Moscow for what was officially described as a holiday.

OPPOSED MEETING

The Italian party has in the past opposed a meeting of parties that might end in widening the Sino-Soviet ideological rift.

Pravda said that even if the participants could not reach complete agreement, the conference would still provide a basis for co-operation in fields where there is common ground. Some observers saw this as a concession to the Italian and similar points of view.

Chinese - Soviet differences first came into the open at the Soviet party's 22nd congress late in 1962 when Soviet leaders attacked rebel Albania, which was stoutly defended by China.

Monday's editorial stated publicly for the first time that the Chinese had broken off reconciliation talks held in Moscow in June, 1963.

SHOWN NO INTEREST

Since then the Chinese have shown absolutely no interest in consultations with the Soviet party, but have boosted their "campaign of attacks and slanders," Pravda said.

Pravda's 3,500-word editorial said the conference is not being called "to excommunicate this or that party from the Communist movement, to expel arbitrarily from the world Socialist system this or that country, nor to squabble and direct accusations at one another."

It accused the Chinese of using "blackmail and the threat of a split" to disrupt the calling of the conference.

"But the very refusal to take part in the conference would be a striving to complete the split," it said.

If the conference is regarded as just an effort to condemn someone, stick insulting labels and throw irresponsible accusations" it would worsen the rift in the movement.

"However, for our party, as for the absolute majority of other Marxist - Leninist parties, the question of holding a new international conference is inseperably liked with the problem of preserving and strengthening the unity of the world Communist movement."

The Soviet party was convinced of the need "above all to concentrate efforts on working out common positions and to find out what is common and unites all the Marxist-Leninist parties in the search for ways to overcome the difficulties which confront them."

PUB OWNER TO FIGHT BULL

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP)—Pub owner Alfred Marvin said today he would defy a 129-year-old British law and publicly fight a bull next Sunday.

"I'll defy the Royal Society for Cruelty to Animals and the bull," said the publican.

The bull is a full grown heifer from Hampshire County. Marvin, 46, plans to fight it on the lawn on his pub to raise money for his pet charity, cancer research. He's hired a matador's outfit complete with sword.

"I've been told the bull's a friendly animal," said Marvin. "However, nobody can predict how a bull will behave in front of a noisy, excited crowd."

He said he expected a paying audience of several hundred.

Asked if he planned to kill the bull, he replied:

"I will only be nasty with him if he's nasty with me."

Bull fighting has been illegal in Britain since 1835.

Said a spokesman for the R.S.P.C.A.:

"If Mr. Marvin insists on disregarding our warnings against fighting the bull, we'll take the strongest possible action."

The publican replied:

"I'm dead against all forms of cruelty and I can't see how any's involved in this case. I stand a good chance of being gored."

Marvin—who's never fought a bull before — has been warming up by making mock passes at his pet ram, named Bimbo.

Souris Wharf Paving Job Is Awarded

CAPITAL BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN

OTTAWA — The federal department of public works has awarded a $6,667 contract for the paving of the wharf at Souris, John Mullally, MP for Kings, said here Tuesday.

The contract was awarded to Morrison and MacRae Limited who submitted the lowest of three tenders received. The wharf was sub-graded last year and it is expected that the paving will be commenced shortly.

Mr. Mullally also announced that repair work and improvements are planned for the potato warehouse in Souris. A new electrical power line will be installed which will run along the centre of the building. This will provide a more convenient outlet for growers and shippers who operate potato grading machinery.

The building will also be connected to the Souris water supply and this will require the laying of a water line from Breakwater Street at the head of the wharf, to the warehouse.

Wood siding will be placed on the new portion of the building to replace the asphalt siding which has been badly damaged by traffic and machinery used in loading and unloading operations. The asphalt type of siding now on this part of the building is unsatisfactory for a warehouse of this nature, Mr. Mullally explained.

German Defecter Is Identified

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Immigration authorities here have identified an East German who defected to the West on the high seas two weeks ago as Dr. M. E. Wachter, 38. His home town was not known.

Dr. Wachter refused to return to his ship, the Johannes R. Becher, after he had gone aboard the British trawler Ross Fighter to treat two injured seamen about 240 miles southwest of here.

The defecter refused to ask for political asylum here when the Ross Fighter entered this port over the weekend. An immigration spokesman said Dr. Wachter was planning to stay on the trawler and is expected to seek asylum when it returns to Grimsby, England.

Farm Machinery Co-operatives Are Tried By Alberta Farmers

EDMONTON (CP)—Some Alberta farmers have succeeded cutting farm implement costs and capital outlay—by forming farm machinery co-operatives.

"A lot of machines are used only three or four times a year," says Harry Pole, president of the 10-member Circle Eight Equipment Co-op Ltd., of Balzac, Alta.

"The rest of the time they just rust and become obsolete," he says. Initial capital outlay for members is small, and individuals lose little money through interest and depreciation of machinery.

"It's plain economic sense," Mr. Pole says.

The Circle Eight Co-op owns a manure spreader, post driver, root picker and cattle chute, a total value of about $2,500. Each member put in $125 when the association was formed in September, 1962, and have since added $125 annually to build up the equipment inventory.

USE PERIODICALLY

H. W. Webber, a provincial industry and development department official, says the majority of co-operatives concentrate on the purchase of machinery that is periodically used.

Farmers can also form a co-op to buy tractors, combines and cultivators. Mr. Webber says this is not advisable as most farmers want to harvest simultaneously.

The Balzac co-op was formed prior to government legislation last April which enabled machinery co-ops to borrow money with government guarantee for up to 50 per cent of the loan.

Five associations have been formed since the new legislation and Mr. Webber expects four or five more groups to incorporate before 1965.

Mr. Webber says he knows of no other province where the government has volunteered a guarantee of up to 50 per cent of all loans.

ONLY $5 FEE

Any 10 or more farmers may form a co-op by applying to the provincial co-operative activities and credit union branch and paying the $5 incorporation fee.

The usual procedure of such groups is to purchase machinery, then rent it back to members and others. Rentals contribute to repairs and insurance.

Members can also use the co-op's buying power to obtain goods wholesale or cheaper than retail prices.

A total of $55,000,000 worth of farm machinery was sold in Alberta between January and June, compared with $52,000,000 in the same period last year.

High Level Of Gov't Spending Is Pointed Up By Queens MP

CAPITAL BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN

OTTAWA — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation costs the taxpayers more in a year now than it took to run the entire country in 1908. Hon. J. Angus MacLean, MP for Queens, said in the Commons Tuesday.

Mr. MacLean was concluding an address on federal - provincial fiscal agreements and he pointed out that in the 1963-64 fiscal year the CBC spent $115 million, 70 per cent or about $81 million, of which was tax money. In the fiscal year of 1907-08, the total budget of the federal government was only $85 million.

He said he is concerned about the rapid increase in debt at all levels of government. In 1942 the total debt of all provinces was less than $2 billion. By 1960 it had risen to over $7 billion. The federal debt in 1932 was less than $3 billion and by 1960 it had reached $25 billion.

Mr. MacLean renewed his plea to Finance Minister Walter Gordon to examine the new agreement formula carefully because it would produce an effect that was not entirely fair to Prince Edward Island.

He said that shared cost programs seem to be a bargain as far as the provinces are concerned but something that a person could not afford was not a bargain at any price.

"In the case of a province where the tax base has been exploited almost as far as practicable, it is very difficult to pay their share of the fixed charges," Mr. MacLean pointed out. "In the future, I suggest that the percentage of shared cost programs to be paid by each province be in proportion to that province's ability to pay."

He said it was time Canadians faced up to their fiscal responsibilities as a nation and it was a fallacy for any level of government to believe it can get whatever it needs from another level of government and that this was free.
