Railway Meeting at Bayfield, N. B.
To the Editor of the Examiner.

A grand mass meeting was advertised to be held at Bayfield, N. B., on the 16th inst., by the committee appointed at the previous railway meeting held at Bay Verte, and at 7 o'clock of this date a large concourse of people assembled. Whereupon W. Allen Wells, Esq., was elected to the chair, Geo. B. Willett, secy. The chairman opened the meeting by a short speech. After this the Rev. R. Wilson took the platform and after a few introductory remarks delivered a strong railway speech, explaining the many advantages to accrue from the construction of the Cape Tormentine Railway, and plainly proving this route to be the only practical connection with P. E. Island, and in a fluent and intelligent manner urged the necessity of united effort in agitating this important work. Richardson Trenholm, Esq., stated that the ferry between the capes was the only sure connection with P.
E. Island, and referred to the promises made by the past as well as the present Government to build said line of railway.
James Carroll followed, referring to the remarks made by Sir Chas. Tupper in 1878 when he promised railway communication with Cape Tormentine. Also those of Sir A. J. Smith in 1872, promising a complete line of railway in the lapse of four years. Dr. C. J. McCully showed the advantage of making an energetic effort at the present time and of now forcing our claims on the present administration. W.
H. Faulkner urged the importance of united effort and pointed out the small expenditure required compared with other lines of the same length. Mr. Robert Goodwin, in a fluent and humorous speech, reiterated the importance of immediate action, referring to the site of railway as passing through one of the best agricultural districts in the Dominion. Avar Dobson, John Hennessey, Alfred Ray-worth, Esq., Ephraim Allen and Smith McGlashlin followed in short but effective speeches. Moved by Dr. McCully, seconded by Ward Dobson, Esq., that every effort be made to attend a mass meeting to be held in conjunction with the people of Amherst in that town for the purpose of furthering this interest.

A committee of five was then elected for the general transaction of this business.
Geo. A. Dobson, Jas. Carroll, Jos. Richardson Trenholm, Alfred Rayworth and Jeremiah Sweeny, Esq., composing such committee.
Moved and seconded that a report of this meeting be sent to N. B., N. S. and P. E. Island papers.—Carried. Meeting closed after a vote of thanks to the chairman and secretary, by three cheers for the Queen and Cape Tormentine Railway.
Geo. B. WILLET,
Secretary.

The Late Chief Justice Cockburn.

The Right Honorable Sir Alexander James Edmund Cockburn, Bart., G. C. B., Lord Chief Justice of England, died on Sunday in the 78th year of age. He was the son of Mr. Alexander Cockburn, formerly British Minister in Columbia. In 1858 he succeeded to the baronetcy of his uncle, the late Rev. Sir William Cockburn, Dean of York. Having been educated at Trinity Hall, Cambridge, where he graduated LL.B. in 1829. Mr. Cockburn was called to the bar at the Middle Temple and went to the Western Circuit. In 1841 he became Q. C.; during the railway mania of 1846 he had the good fortune to obtain a large share of the Parliamentary practice which arose out of the various lines projected, and at the general election of 1847 he was returned for Southampton in the advanced Liberal interest. He did not take a very prominent position as a debater until he made his memorable defence of Lord Palmerston's foreign policy on the Pacific question in 1850, which was one of the most eloquent and successful speeches ever delivered in the House of Commons. He was soon afterwards appointed Solicitor-General, was promoted to be Attorney-General in 1851, and continued to hold the latter office until the dissolution of Lord John Russell's Ministry in the spring of 1852. On the formation of the coalition Cabinet he resumed his post as Attorney-General, and was appointed Recorder of Bristol in 1854. Whilst Attorney General he was engaged in the "Hopwood case," and displayed consummate ability in the prosecution of W. Palmer. On the death of Chief Justice Jervis at the close of 1856, Sir Alexander Cockburn was created Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and was advanced to the high office of Lord Chief Justice of England on the elevation of the late Lord Campbell to the Woolsack in 1869. His charge to the Grand Jury at the Central Criminal Court, London, delivered April 18th, 1869, in the cause of General Nelson and Lieutenant Brand, prosecuted by the Jamaica Defence Committee, was a masterly performance, and contained a most elaborate exposition of martial law and of the manner in which it has been applied in various periods of our history. In September, 1871, he was appointed to be arbitrator on the part of Great Britain under the stipulations of the Washington Treaty relating to the settlement of the Alabama claims. He presided over the protracted trial of "The Queen vs. Castro" in the Court of Queen's Bench in 1873-4. His charge to the jury in that remarkable case was printed under his own editorial supervision in two volumes in 1875.

Sir Alexander Cockburn has several times refused a peerage.

Beecher Defines Importunity.

The Lord's Prayer was the subject of Mr.
Beecher's remarks at Plymouth Church prayer meeting last week. He commended it as a model of brevity; comprehensiveness and simplicity. He suggested greater brevity and more naturalness in domestic and public prayer. At its close Assistant Pastor Halliday remarked that it was extremely difficult to offer a short prayer and that the command of Christ was to be importunate in prayer, and that importunity presupposed that a petition would not be brief. Mr.
Beecher replied that he did not object to long or short prayers; what he did desire was an avoidance of garrulity in prayer. As to importunity, he commended it by the following illustration:—
"When Mr. Moody was a city missionary in Chicago" Mr. Beecher said, "he preached in the streets of a low neighborhood, where he was stoned and hooted. He went to the Bishop of the Catholic Church to tell him about it. He applied several times at the door of the Episcopal residence, and he was invariably told that the Bishop was not at home. Moody thought that there must be something wrong about it, and so the last time he went he sat himself down on the steps of the outside of the house. After about nine or ten different people had come to the door the servant went in and told the Bishop that a man was waiting on the steps and that he had been waiting there half a day. The Bishop told her to show him in.
Moody went in and told the Bishop that he had been preaching among the people who ought to go to the Catholic Church; that he had tried to get them to clean up their homes, save their money, give up drink and join temperance societies. The Bishop promised to take the matter into consideration.
Then Moody said, "Bishop let us pray about it." The Bishop was quite willing.
Moody dropped down on his knees and prayed; then the Bishop prayed, Moody said, such a sweet, beautiful prayer, and when they rose, the Bishop, with tears in his eyes, said, taking the hand of Moody—"Go and preach; you shall not be interfered with." Now, sitting on these steps for half a day I call importunity."

Canada and the United States.

A correspondent of the Moncton Times asks for information to settle a dispute as to the relative size of the Dominion and the United States. According to the official reports, the area of the United States and territories, including Alaska, is 3,603,884 square miles; exclusive of Alaska, the area of the United States would be 3,235,649 square miles. The area of Canada, according to the best official data, is 3,580,310 square miles; if Newfoundland were added, it would reach 3,620,510 square miles.
Therefore it will be seen that the area of the United States, including Alaska, is somewhat greater than the present area of the Dominion; without Alaska, is much less. The data in reference to Canada does not include small islands recently put under the government of the Dominion by the Imperial authorities, and if these are taken into account the difference in favor of our neighbors is somewhat less. If Newfoundland were added to the Dominion at any time, its area would then be considered greater than that of the United States, including all the territories and Alaska. The "Union Jack" flies over a greater area in North America than the "Stars and Stripes."

THE HANLAN.—A gentleman who is intimately acquainted with some of the Han-lan family, has furnished us with the following sketch, which cannot fail, at the present time, to awaken more than ordinary interest: William Hanlan, an uncle of the now famous oarsman, has resided in Souris for several years past, and only discovered through correspondence, since "Ned" began to figure in aquatic contests, that he was his nephew. It appears that he and his brother John, the celebrated oarsman's father, emigrated from some part of Ireland to Newfoundland several years ago, where they resided for a considerable length of time. William left Newfoundland, and went to the Magdalen Islands, where he remained for some time previous to coming to Souris. John also left Newfoundland and located in Canada, where he resided until his death, and bequeathed to Canada the aquatic conqueror of the world at the present day. Our informant states that William Hanlan, at the time he came to Souris, was of a very robust disposition, and was possessed of more than ordinary physical development. He is now well advanced in years, and deservedly feels proud of his famous kinsman. We learn that there is a striking resemblance between his family and the young Torontonian, who, in a succession of contests, in different lands, has demonstrated the wonderful physical prowess of this Canada of Ours.—K. C. Advertiser.
