The White Moss Rose.

There is a very pretty German tradition not generally known which accounts in the following manner for the existence of the white moss rose. The legend is to the effect that once upon a time an angel, having a mission of love to suffering humanity, came down on earth. He was much grieved at the sin and misery he saw and the evil things he heard. Being tired, he sought a place to rest, but as it fared with his master so it fared with him—no one would give him shelter. At last he lay down under the shade of a rose and slept till the rising sun awoke him. Before winging his flight heavenward he addressed the rose and said that, as it had given him that shelter which man denied, it should receive an enduring token of his gratitude. And so, leaf by leaf and twig by twig, the soft green moss grew round the stem, and there is to this day a cradle in which the newborn rose may lie, a proof, as the angel said, of God's power and love.
