

Morsels for Sunday Contemplation.

Jealousy is no more than awkward homage.

Time is gold; throw not one minute away, but place each one to account.

It is sad, but true, that we can silence our consciences easier than our desires.

What a catalogue of social virtues a man requires to make him generally beloved!

I have always observed this: that the people of this world never speak well of it at parting.

Hope is like a bad clock, forever striking the hour of happiness, whether it has come or not.

The difference between perseverance and obstinacy is that one often comes from a strong will, and the other from a strong won't.

It is an uncontroverted truth that no man ever made an ill figure who understood his own talents, nor a good one who mistook them.

The world is all title page; there are no contents; the world is all face; the man who shows his heart is hooted for his nudity, and scorned.

Satiety comes of too frequent repetition, and he who will never give himself leisure to be thirsty can never find the true pleasure of drinking.

The rude man is contented if he sees but something going on; the man of more refinement must be made to feel; the man entirely refined desires to reflect.

There never did and there never will exist anything permanently noble and excellent in the character which is a stranger to the existence of a resolute self denial.

Talents give a man superiority far more agreeable than that which proceeds from riches, birth or employment, which are full external. Talents constitute our very essence.

To know one person who is positively to be trusted will do more for man's moral nature—yes, for his spiritual nature—than all the sermons he has ever heard or ever can hear.

The purposes, objects and resolutions of life are the perfectly formed links, and the fulfilling of these aspirations is the linking of them together, which forms the useful chain.

Honors soften fatigue. It is easy riding in a gilded and embossed saddle. Atlas, while he sustains the world upon his shoulders, is himself sustained by the admiration which his feat excites.

Plenty and indigence depend upon the opinion every one has of them; and riches, no more than glory or health, have no more beauty nor pleasure than their possessor is pleased to lend them.

When we hear people ready to speak of the faults of others, or to censure them as holding scandalous errors, or to lessen the wisdom and piety of those about them, that themselves may seem the wiser and better, this is a sign that they have a vain religion.

A wife's love is the golden chain which unites her to her husband. It has a thousand delicate links, forged by sympathy, self respect and mutual confidence; sever but one of them and the chain is as completely broken as though a hundred were destroyed.

Gone.

There is probably no word in the English language more expressive, more heart-touching, than the simple word, "gone." It is a small word, yet hidden under it is an intense meaning deeper than one thinks until called upon to use the word in reference to his own loss.

Robert Hall thought the word "tear" the most beautiful and expressive in our language; but has not the word gone much the same pathetic sentiment? The loved and cherished of the heart and home—perhaps a dearly beloved mother or father, a brother or sister, has passed away. No expression could be more touching to the heart than the word gone—gone out of our sight and home forever. With it in this case the word tear is a near kindred. When we have seen friends laid in their narrow house, gone expresses the feelings of our hearts better than any other word. We can hardly conceive of the cause of a tear without the knowledge of something gone.

Does the heart weep over the graves of loved ones? Then something surely is gone. Does it mourn over wasted time and opportunities? Then something is gone. Abundant as our language in words, it is hard to conceive how we could do without it, short as it is. Life is always changing, always making voids in our fireside circles; friends leaving us to seek fortune or fame. Twenty years hence the friends with whom we mingled at the present time will be scattered; some may be in foreign countries, others may rise to high honors, and some, sad to say, will ruin themselves in dissipation, and finally die outcasts from society, un-honored and unmourned. And gone is the only word which expresses the soul's keen sense of the loss and absence. There is an expressiveness in the exquisitely sad word which we only see in its kindred word, tear.

The Greatest Medical Discovery since the Creation of Man, or since the Commencement of the Christian Era.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS are acknowledged by all who have used them, to act quicker than any other plaster they ever before tried, and that one of these plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different: the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

Physicians in all ages have thoroughly tested and well know the effect of Capsicum; and it has always been more or less used as a medical agent for an outward application; but it is only of very recent date that its advantages in a porous plaster have been discovered. Being, however, convinced of the wonderful cures effected by DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS, and their superiority over all other plasters, they now actually prescribe them, in their practice, for such diseases as rheumatism, pain in the side and back, and all such cases as have required the use of plasters or liniment. After you have tried other plasters and liniments, and they have failed, and you want a certain cure, ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER. You can hardly believe your own convictions of its wonderful effects. Although powerful and quick in its action, you can rely on its safety for the most delicate person to wear, as it is free from lead and other poisonous material commonly used in the manufacture of ordinary plasters. One trial is a sufficient guarantee of its merits, and one plaster will sell hundreds to your friends.

Ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER, and take no other, or, on receipt of 25 cents for one, $1 for five, or $2 for a dozen, they will be mailed, post paid, to any address in the United States or Canada.
