

BLOOD WON.

Mr. Anna Was a Deacon's Niece, but She Enjoyed the Race.

One of these men who came in from the country and has climbed from the bottom of the ladder to the top likes to tell a story on his wife, whose second beauty is crowned by a mass of silken hair as white as cotton.

"We both lived on a farm then," he says. "Anna was an orphan and brought up by a strict old uncle, who was a deacon. She was pretty and bright, but so grim and straitlaced that she would sanction nothing to which the deacon himself objected, and no old Covenantor ever drew the lines more closely than he did.

"Next to Anna my affections were centered on a colt that was good to look at and developed a wonderful speed and gameness that spoke of aristocratic descent. I told this to no one but Anna, and it was with great difficulty that I induced her to ride one Sunday with me to a camp meeting behind a real trotter.

"Going to the meeting I regulated the colt's pace to suit the day and the occasion, and he was as sedate as the deacon himself. The only girl of the neighborhood who pretended to rival Anna in beauty was there with a young fellow who prided himself on having the fastest horses in the county. Toward sundown she told Anna that we had better start home early. They would require much less time and would probably pass us on the way. That made me mad and I thought I detected an unwanted fire in her eyes. We were jogging homeward as decorously as we had gone, talking solemnly as we should, when there was a rush past us, a cloud of dust and a mocking laugh that bade us 'goodby.' My colt was prancing and pulling like a tugboat. I was bound to please my girl, grinding as it was.

"Let 'er go!" came between her red lips and white set teeth just as a girl of the period would say "Let 'er go, Gallagher." "That was enough. Fences and trees flew the other way. Blood told, and the colt seemed on wings. When we were nose and nose, Anna was so excited that she wanted to take the reins for fear I couldn't win the Sunday race. But the gallant colt shot us through ahead. It wasn't long till Anna wore a little jewelry and tolerated cards to the extent of playing 'old maid.'"—St. Louis Republic.

Quite recently the pretty wife of a prosperous manufacturer was looking into a confectioner's window when a barefooted lad of about 10 coolly walked up to her and placed his rugged arm through hers.

"Excuse this liberty, mum," he said, with comical ceremony, "but I ain't got a mother o' my own, an I feels lonely. Will ye kiss me?"

For a moment the lady was too astonished to speak, but the sight of the dirty face turned so audaciously up to hers drove away her indignation. Much to the amusement of the passers-by she kissed the lad soundly, asked him where he lived and dismissed him with a few coppers. But that was not the end of the little incident, for some weeks after the boy was hunted up by the lady's husband and presented with £100—"payment for the kiss taken in front of the confectioner's window," the lady said.

A good natured gentleman who is very stout, and on that account does not care to stoop, once dropped his briar pipe in the middle of a busy street. The pipe was a great favorite of his, but he dared not run the risk of bending down, and after gazing regretfully at his fallen treasure he decided to abandon it. Before he could do so, however, a little street arab saw his plight, and, running forward, picked up the pipe and restored it to him.

The gentleman stared at the boy without speaking for awhile, and then pulled a handful of gold out of his pocket.

"Take this, kiddie, and be careful how you spend it," he said. "Mind also that whatever you do with it you are not to spend it on butter scotch, for that's the stuff that made me fat."

He then walked away, leaving the astonished urchin in possession of a windfall amounting to over £30.—London Telegraph.

Altogether Too Wise.

The engaged girl was thoroughly modern in her ideas, while the girl who was not engaged was given to old-fashioned romanticism.

"Tell me all about it," said the girl who was not engaged.

"Oh, there isn't much to tell," answered the engaged girl. "I suppose the method of procedure is about the same in all cases."

"I presume," said the girl who was not engaged dreamily, "that he looked soulfully into your eyes and asked you if you loved him?"

"Not a bit of it," returned the engaged girl quickly. "He was altogether too wise to ask any such question as that. He merely asked me if I'd marry him."—Chicago Post.

His Choice.

An Irishman in France was challenged by a Frenchman to fight a duel, to which he readily consented, and suggested shillalabs.

"That won't do," said the second. "As the challenged party you have the right to choose the arms, but chivalry demands that you should decide upon a weapon with which Frenchmen are familiar."

"Is that so?" returned the Irishman. "Then, begorra, we'll fight wid guil-lotines."—London Tit-Bits.

A RUSSIAN GROWL.

Russia's reply to the new British policy of Imperial federation is beginning to be heard. There is no more significant utterance than this from the St. Petersburg Novoe Vremya:

"English patriots imagine that Imperial federation will enable the British Empire to dictate with impunity to the world by means of an enormous fleet created by the common resources of the Empire and complete economical independence. Herein, however, lies the weakness of the future federation.

"As soon as a British customs union is created, England, together with her colonies, will lose all connection with the rest of the world. A final rupture with her then will be of no consequence to any state, because all economic interests in her will be gone. In such a case, a permanent alliance or coalition among the continental Powers would be very probable.

"Every time the British policy ran counter to the interests of Europe that coalition would put in demands, and no fleet or army, however powerful, could successfully enforce England's opposition. No fleet in the world would be able to protect from hostile cruisers the many thousands of miles of sea between the colonies and Great Britain.

"It would be equally impossible to blockade all the ports of Europe. A certain number of the enemy's warships would always escape pursuit and be able to cut off or at least interfere with the ocean trade of Mistress of the Seas. Having no longer any connection with other states, and being temporarily cut off from her colonies, England would see the ruin of her industries and die of famine.

"It may be safely affirmed that without allies on the continent the island power will not issue victorious from a military conflict, and England cannot find any ally even now. This is the fruit of an exclusive, selfish, national policy long pursued without discrimination as to the end.

"There now approaches the moment of retribution. A State shutting itself up within the narrow circle of egotistical aspirations will remain alone in the day of misfortune, and no project of federation will help it."

MESSAGE TO MEN

Proving that True Honesty and True Philanthropy by Still Exist.

If any man who is weak, nervous and debilitated, or who is suffering from any of the various troubles resulting from youthful folly, excesses or overwork, will take heart and write to me, I will send him confidentially and free of charge the plan pursued by which I was completely restored to perfect health and manhood, after years of suffering from Nervous Debility, loss of Vigor and Organic Weakness.

I have nothing to sell, and therefore want no money, but as I know through my own experience how to sympathize with such sufferers, I am glad to be able to assist any fellow-beings to a cure. I am well aware of the prevalence of quackery, for I myself was deceived and imposed upon until I nearly lost faith in mankind but I rejoice to say that I am now perfectly well and happy once more and am desirous therefore to make this certain means of cure known to all. If you will write to me you can rely upon being cured and the proud satisfaction of having been of great service to one in need will be sufficient reward for my trouble. Absolute secrecy assured. SCOTT ACT MANIFESTO.

To the People of P. E. Island: What will you have, Scott Act or Free Rum? We will have one or the other after election day.

The times are laden with golden opportunities for, and woeful dangers to, the cause of temperance; and it behooves men and women everywhere to be in real and active earnest in promoting temperance and denouncing the liquor traffic.

Charlottetown holds the key of sobriety or drunkenness for this Province. The Scott Act election, to be held July 22nd decides which door will be opened—whether from the fountain head of P. E. Island will flow a stream of good or one of damning influence, contaminating more or less every boy and girl, every man and woman in this province. The enemy is strongly entrenched in this city. Its wealth and power is concentrated here and will fight as never before for its very existence. It is tenfold harder to drive liquor out of the city than out of the country.

The success or defeat of the Scott Act will not only strongly affect, for weal or woe, the people of P. E. Island for some years to come but will have a pronounced effect upon the coming Plebiscite. The eyes of this great Dominion are on us, and the result of this election will be strongly felt by the people from the Atlantic to the shores of the Pacific. Mr. S. F. Spence, of Toronto, in writing, says it will be a great calamity to the temperance cause if the Scott Act is defeated in Charlottetown. Now then, in view of these things, we ask for your sympathy and financial aid. May God give us all wisdom and power to fight and maintain His cause.

GENTLEMEN,—I would like to tell you how much I appreciate, from an ARTIST' point of view, the very excellent Grand piano supplied to me for my concert in London, and the magnificent Grand that you furnished me for my concert in MASSEY HALL, Toronto. The tone is sonorous, the singing quality and sustaining quality just what we vocalists appreciate, and I feel that any one in quest of a really FIRST CLASS PIANO, cannot do better than secure a HEINTZMAN & CO'S PIANOFORTE.
