Unusual Soft-Drink Lab. To Visit Local Bottling Firm

The only travelling laboratory in Canada to do soft-drink analysis will soon be in Charlottetown. The lab, operated by Pepsi-Cola Products Ltd., will carry out a series of product control tests at the direction of the local bottling firm starting Oct. 29. Britain Seeking Time To Consider NATO

By ARCH MacKENZIE
WASHINGTON (CP)—Britain has asked for time to think out its proposals for rejoining NATO, Foreign Secretary Patrick Gordon Walker said Tuesday at the end of two days of explanatory talks.

That will be done as soon as possible but it requires consultation with allies other than the United Kingdom, Gordon Walker said in a press conference following a 45-minute meeting with President Johnson.

Britain needn't cheat on the time table by delaying a decision until he asks for adequate time, he said.

The visit, saving the way for an annual meeting with Johnson by Prime Minister Wilson in London, is expected to have touched many world issues, Walker said.

Britain did not expect to have its NATO thinking done before the end of the year.

SPOKE OF VALUE

He and State Secretary Rusk spoke of the "extraordinary value of the talks and of a 'bread of interests'."

The inference NATO has been that the new Labor government is concerned primarily with avoiding a head-on collision with the strong United States advocacy of a mixed-manned scheme NATO deterrent, which the Labor party opposes.

The foreign secretary said the timing of Wilson's visit is up to the president but Wilson is expected here in December if Johnson wins.

Gordon Walker speculated the ousting of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev probably was due to "something fairly recent" that led to such a brutal way of deposing him. "It appeared unlikely the two men were a team," he is likely to last very long.

No basic Soviet policy change seemed to be involved although much had yet to be learned.

OPPOSITION MENTIONED

"It must have come as a very unwelcome surprise to Moscow" that the normally serene satellites and the larger European powers had so strongly opposed the ouster so strongly.

As a guest, Gordon Walker summit state within the hemisphere as well as Cuba.

Gordon Walker said treaty in giving the U.S. the British decision to proceed with the election. "I don't think his did anything but please them."

This was a matter for Britain. The election results in British Guiana weren't a foreign concern.

NINE MORE THAN CNR

More Winter Positions Said Offered By Hotel

On Sunday, Nov. 1 the Island Development Company takes over operation of the Charlottetown Hotel.

Jan Grude, the new manager of the hotel, said last evening that the new company would have a staff of 32 throughout the winter. This is nine more than the Canadian National Railways kept on for their normal winter trade.

Mr. Grude informed the Guardian that the 70 or more people who were on the summer staff of the hotel, 54 of which had been offered positions with the new company. He has personally interviewed 36 of these people, only four have refused the positions they were offered.

Sixteen former employees of the hotel have been sent letters which stated in part, "We are sorry we have no position we can offer you at present." The company also said in the letter that if they "had need of your services later, we shall be glad to communicate with you."

Parliament At A Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, Oct. 27, 1964
The Commons debated the government motion for authority to spend some $740,000 on the new Parliament building in Ottawa.

Mr. Grude said the reason the extra staff was being kept by his company was to train them for the summer rush period and also because the hotel was expanding certain of its facilities.

SOME RECALLED

For those that have not been interviewed for positions with the company Mr. Grude pointed out that so far only 22 positions have been filled and he will continue to interview people until all the jobs are taken. He has even recalled the names of 16 people that received letters stating that there was no jobs for them.

When the hotel was under CNR administration many of the hotel's employees were members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Hotel, Transport and General Workers union. Richard Rush, chairman of the local at the hotel and Lorne Crawford, president, has as yet received no word on what action, if any the union will take.

Mr. Grude said yesterday that those who were not offered jobs with the new company were people who, the company, would not fit in with the new setup.

He does not feel that his company has any responsibility for these people. The people with the long service were in the employ of the Canadian National Railways and Mr. Grude feels that it is their responsibility, not that of the new company.
