NASAL BALM
TOTTENHAM, ONT., May 3rd, 1887.
I have been troubled with nasal catarrh for the last five years. Seeing Nasal Balm advertised I procured a bottle, and although I have only used part of it, I do not hesitate to pronounce it the best remedy in the world for that loathsome disease, Catarrh. It is easy and pleasant to use, soothing and healing in its action, instant in giving relief, removes and changes the poisonous secretions to a healthy state, stops the droppings from the head into the throat, and removes all the symptoms of Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In fact, if the directions are faithfully followed, nothing but a sure and permanent cure can be the result.
Yours truly,
JNO. S. GEORGE,
Baker and Confectioner.

THE PIRATE.
By Sir Walter Scott.
CHAPTER XIV
A twinge of self-conviction, on the part of the agriculturalist, prevented him from reply. He darted a deprecatory glance at Mordant, as if for the purpose of imploring secrecy respecting his tumble; and the Udaller, who saw his advantage, although he was not aware of the cause, pursued it with the high and stern tone proper to one who had all his life been unaccustomed to meet with, and unapt to endure, opposition.
"By the blood of Saint Magnus Martyr," he said, "but you are a fine fellow, Master Factor Yellowley! You come to us from a strange land, understanding neither our laws, nor our manners, nor our language, and you propose to become governor of the country, and that we should all become your slaves!"
"My pupils, worthy sir, my pupils!" said Yellowley, "and that only for your own proper advantage."
"We are too old to go to school," said the Zetlander. "I tell you once more, we will sow and reap our grain as our fathers did—we will eat what God sends us, with our doors open to the stranger, ever as theirs were open. If there is aught imperfect in our practice, we will amend in time and season; but the blessed Baptist's mill and his wheel was made for light hearts and quick heels. He that speaks a word more of reason as you call it, or anything that looks like it, shall swallow a pint of sea-water—he shall, by this hand!—and so fill up the good ship, the Jolly Mariner of Canton, once more, for the benefit of those that will stick by her; and let the rest have a fling at the fiddlers, who have been summoning us this hour. I will warrant every wench is on tiptoe by this time. Come, Mr. Yellowley, no unkindness, and let us, though we feel the rolling of the Jolly Mariner still—for, in truth, honest Triptolemus showed a little unsteadiness of motion, as he arose to attend his host—"but never mind, we shall have them find their hand to reel it with yonder bonny belles. Come along, Triptolemus—let me grapple these fast, lest thou trip, old Triptolemus—ha, ha, ha!"
No saying, the portly, though weatherbeaten hulk of the Udaller sailed off like a man-of-war that had braved a hundred gales, having his guest in tow like a recent prize. The greater part of the revellers followed their leader with loud jubilee, although there were several staunch toppers, who, taking the option left them by the Udaller, remained behind to relieve the Jolly Mariner of a fresh cargo, amidst many a pledge to the health of their absent landlord, and to the prosperity of his roof-tree, with whatsoever other wishes of kindness could be devised, as an apology for another pint-bumper of noble punch.
The rest soon thronged the dancing-room, an apartment which partook of the simplicity of the time and of the country. Drawing-rooms and saloons were not then in Scotland, save in the houses of the nobility, and of course absolutely so in Zetland; but a long, low, anomalous store-room, sometimes used for the deposition of merchandise, sometimes for putting aside lumber, and a thousand other purposes, was well known to all the youth of Dumfries, and of many a district besides, as the scene of the merry dance, which was sustained with so much glee when Magnus Troll gave his frequent feasts.
The first appearance of the ball-room might have shocked a fashionable party, assembled for the quadrille or the waltz. Low as we have stated the apartment to be, it was but imperfectly illuminated by lamps, candles, ship-lanterns, and a variety of other candleabra, which served to throw a dusky light upon the floor, and upon the heaps of merchandise and miscellaneous articles which were piled around; some of them stores for the winter; some, goods destined for exportation; some, the tribute of Neptune, paid at the expense of shipwrecked vessels, whose owners were unknown; some, articles of barter received by the proprietor, who, like most others at the period, was somewhat of a merchant as well as a landholder, in exchange for the fish, and other articles, the produce of his estate. All these, with the chests, boxes, casks, etc., which contained them, had been drawn aside, and piled one above the other, in order to give room for the dancers, who, light and lively as if they had occupied the most splendid saloon in the parish of St. James's, executed their national dances with equal grace and activity.
The group of old men who looked on, bore no inconsiderable resemblance to a party of aged titans, engaged in beholding the sports of the sea-nymphs; so hard a look had most of them acquired by contending with the elements, and so much did the sluggy hair and beards, which many of them cultivated after the ancient Norwegian fashion, give their heads the appearance of these supposed natives of the deep. The young people on the other hand, wore uncommonly handsome, tall, well-made and shapely; the men with long fair hair, and, until broken by the weather, a fresh ruddy complexion, which, in the females, was softened into a bloom of infinite delicacy. Their natural good air for music qualified them to second to the utmost the exertions of a band, whose strains were by no means contemptible; while the elders, who stood around, or sat quiet upon the old tea-chests, which served for chairs, criticized the dancers, as they compared their execution with their own exertions in former days; or, warmed by the cup and flagon, which continued to circulate among them, snapped their fingers, and beat time with their feet to the music.
Mordant looked upon this scene of universal mirth with the painful recollection, that he, thrust aside from pre-eminence, no longer exercised the important duties of chief of the dancers, or office of the revels, which had been assigned to the stranger Cleveland. Anxious, however, to suppress the feelings of his own disappointment which he felt it was neither wise to entertain nor manly to display he approached his fair neighbors, to whom he had been so acceptable at table, with the purpose of inviting one of them to become his partner in the dance. But the awfully ancient old lady, even the Lady Glowworm, who had only tolerated the exuberance of her niece's mirth during the time of dinner, because her situation rendered it then impossible for them to interfere, was not disposed to permit the appended renewal of the intimacy implied in Merton's invitation. She therefore took upon herself, in the name of her two nieces, who sat pouting beside her in displeased silence, to inform Mordant, after thanking him for his civility, that the hands of her nieces were engaged for that evening; and, as he continued to watch the party at a little distance, he had an opportunity of being convinced that the alleged engagement was a mere apology to get rid of him, when he saw the two good-humored sisters join the dance under the auspices of the next young man who asked their hands. Incensed at so marked a slight, and unwilling to expose himself to another, Mordant Merton drew back from the circle of dancers, shrouded himself amongst the mass of inferior persons who crowded into the bottom of the room as spectators, and there, concealed from the observation of others, digested his own mortification as well as he could; that is to say, very ill—and with all the philosophy of his age—that is to say, with none at all.

Designer of the Yacht America.
I have heard a great deal in the way of reminiscence about the America recently. Her designer, George Steers, was pretty badly treated it seems. Stevens offered him $30,000 for a boat that would lead in the yachting contests. The contract being that she was to win all three of a certain series of races. Stevens threw her back on Steers' hands because she was defeated in one of them, though she had amply proved her capacity to anything afloat. Steers was in a great state, for he could not afford to own her and was owing for the material of which she was built. He was so close pressed that he took an offer of $20,000, and only found after the sale was completed that Stevens was the real purchaser, the other man being the unacknowledged agent.
Steers had his opinion of such sharp practices, but nevertheless took so keen an interest in his work that he consented to go over in her to England. Stevens was very high with him and never asked him into the cabin. He lived in the fore-castle during the whole expedition. When the Englishmen, however, found out that Steers was the man who built the boat who defeated them, many more of the invitations went to him than to the man who merely owned it by dint of a score of thousands and some slippery work. Steers staid in the fore-castle, but he went from there to dine on board the yachts of the richest and most exclusive nobles of England, and Stevens found himself rather at discount. At least that is the story as given to me.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Manitoba's Crop.
The Manitoba crop report for August and September shows that when the season is favorable the agricultural capabilities of that province are very great. The yield per acre of the various crops will, we think, compare favorably with that of any area of equal size on the continent. Wheat yielded 27.7 bushels per acre; oats, 46.2; barley, 36.3; peas, 20.15; flax, 15.31 of seed—the quantity of fibre is not given; potatoes 238 and hay 1.67 ton. The aggregate yield of wheat is estimated to be 12,357,724 bushels, about fifty per cent. greater than the average crop of the last four years. The best crop was harvested in the north-western part of the province. The average yield in that district was 29.6 bushels to the acre. The oat crop of the province is calculated to be 7,265,237 bushels, which is more than fifty per cent. over last year's yield, and the estimated crop of barley is 1,925,231 bushels, which is considerably more than double that of last year's and threefold greater than that of the average of the last four years. Hay was not a good crop, but the pastures are reported to have been in prime condition, and consequently the cattle are, in the language of the farmer, "rolling fat." The crop report is a cheering one, and the reader is assured that it has been drawn up from information supplied by farmers of experience who are interested in the accuracy of the returns made to the Department.

The Surplus of Wheat.
Bradstreet's of October gives the probable surplus of wheat:—
Russia—From 64,000,000 to 70,000,000 bushels.
Austria-Hungary—From 16,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels.
Turkish principalities—10,000,000 to 12,000,000 bushels.
Australia—10,000,000 bushels.
Chili and Argentine Republic—From 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 bushels.
Bradstreet's says that Canada will require nearly all of its year's produce for its own consumption.
United Kingdom—From 130,000,000 to 142,000,000 bushels.
Holland and Belgium—20,000,000 bushels.
German Empire—From 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 bushels.
Switzerland—10,000,000 bushels.
France—20,000,000 bushels.
Greece—5,000,000 bushels.
Spain and Portugal—From 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 bushels.
Italy—From 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels.
The reserve of wheat in Europe is at the present time less than at any period during the last five years. If Bradstreet's estimate at all approaches accuracy, there ought to be an advance in the price of wheat at an early date.
ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.
