Punishment of the foul murderers.
Typical of the Moscow edition of the "Pravda" is a statement in the Soviet Trades Unions organ "Trud": "Damnation and shame to the four degenerates and murderers. Soviet justice will crush like a poisonous reptile the criminal band which sold itself for dollars and pounds sterling. Nor will the American and British inspirers of the murderers and wreckers escape retribution."

The official announcement said state security organs uncovered the plot "some time ago."
Members of the "terroristic group of physicians" under arrest were identified as M. S. Vovsi, V. E. Vinogradov, M. B. Kogan, B. B. Kogan, P. I. Egorov, Y. G. Etinger and G. I. Mayorov, therapists; A. M. Grinshtein, neuropathologist (nervous specialist) and A. E. Feldman, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist.

Most of the participants in the terrorist group, the announcement said, "were connected with J. O. I. N. T., the international Jewish bourgeois nationalist organization set up by the American intelligence service, allegedly for rendering material aid to Jews in other countries."
But actually this organization, under the guidance of the American Intelligence Service, conducts broad scale espionage, terroristic and other subversive activities in a number of countries, including the Soviet Union.

The American joint distribution committee has sent millions of dollars to aid European Jews since the Second World War. In New York, Edward M. M. Warburg, chairman of AJDC, said the charges are fantastic, and denied them completely. He said the committee "has never engaged in political activities or deviated from its principle of exclusive adherence to its humanitarian role."

The announcement said other members of the "terrorist group" proved "to be agents of the British Intelligence Service of long standing."

Veteran S' side Smelt Fisherman Goes Through Ice

Mr. Henry DesRoches, Russell Street, Summerside, had a most unpleasant experience yesterday afternoon. When returning home across the Summerside harbor ice he plunged into the icy water about seventy-five yards from shore. The ice at this point is usually very thin and had the tide been high at the time the consequences might have been different.

Mr. DesRoches, who is about 85 years of age, was coming in from his smelt shanty when the accident occurred and he was unable to get back on solid ice unassisted. He was forced to remain there for some time before his calls for help attracted the attention of Mr. Howard Waite, who rushed to his assistance and after getting him out put him in a taxi and brought him home.

Last night he was reported to be suffering no ill effects and his many friends hope that he will not suffer in any way from his harrowing experience.—S.

of war in Korea the army units had neither the personnel nor the equipment to handle the expansion.

No Disgrace

"It is no disgrace on the men in the Works Services branch that they were few in numbers," said Gen. Peakes.
In his speech Mr. Claxton seemed to be "almost defending the army," said Gen. Peakes. "The Government and not the army needed defending."

In resuming the debate that was interrupted by the Christmas recess, Mr. Claxton said that the decision to have the RCMP investigate how the CCF got an advance copy of the report met with the approval of Mr. Currie.
Given prolonged acclaim by Liberal members both before and after his hour-long speech, Mr. Claxton caused an uproar among the Opposition when he moved that the report be given priority by the defence expenditures committee.

The motion to set up a defence expenditures committee was made by Prime Minister St. Laurent with a mere formal nod to the Speaker when the resolution standing in his name on the order paper was called.
Thus, officially, Mr. Claxton was the first speaker to the Prime Minister's motion and the first member of the Commons in a position to move an amendment to it.

Both the Progressive Conservatives and CCF assailed this immediately to the Speaker, Ross Macdonald, climaxed the argument by ruling the amendment in order.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, charged that the amendment was a device used by the Government to block the traditional rights of the Opposition to make counter-suggestions through amendments of their own.
He noted particularly that his party has said it would serve no useful purpose to send the report to that committee but that a far-wider investigation of the whole defence set-up should be launched.

He charged that the amendment was an effort to "embalm" the report with its description of a general breakdown in control of the Army Works Services, of "serious" flaws in security and its statement that there is an indifference to administration among "higher-ups" in the Defence Department.

Mr. St. Laurent argued that it is within the powers of the House to instruct the committee to give priority to a certain subject as long as that subject does not enlarge the scope of the committee.
Stanley Knowles (CCF - Winnipeg North Centre) touched off the side-debate by contending that the amendment is out of order. Either, he said, the amendment enlarges the committee's powers or it serves no useful purpose. In either case, it should be ruled out.

Main Claxton Points

Mr. Claxton made these points in replying to statements in the Currie report itself:
1. His responsibility for the three armed forces "I have no intention of trying to dodge that responsibility. There has not been and there will not be any effort made to find a scapegoat. When we found there had been wrongdoing, we laid prosecutions. When it appeared there had been grave irregularities, I appointed Mr. Currie to investigate the cases and to suggest some means to prevent recurrence."

2. In any operation of the size of the defence effort, there were bound to be mistakes, thefts, fires and frauds. Every effort was made to crack down on wrongdoings. If he had been overenthusiastic in defence of the forces, it was because of his admiration for them.

3. The Petawawa irregularities cost about $30,000 but most of the materials stolen were recovered. Mr. Currie had not uncovered those irregularities—the R.C.M.P. did—and he had not found any others in his examination of the works services.

4. The main cause of what happened—would not agree with the term "breakdown"—in the army works service was the big expansion after Korea and the fact skilled men could not be obtained. The service now was short 1,700 civilian and 250 service personnel. Until these people were available the situation could not be completely rectified. This shortage had prevented full implementation of a new accounting system which Mr. Currie had approved.

5. Of Mr. Currie's 44 recommendations for strengthening the existing set-up, 27 were being put into effect before the report was received. Four more were urgent and manpower was available. Others needed further consideration or were not considered advisable.

6. The Department itself, along with other Government agencies was making a survey of the Works Services manpower situation when the Currie investigation started. This investigation was suspended at that time.

7. The Department's chief auditor reported in March—before the Currie investigation began—that the new accounting system for the Works Service was good but skilled men to run it were so short that even tradesmen and laborers were doing accounting and stores duties. But the auditor had said corrective measures were in train and all possible was being done to remedy the "adverse conditions."

8. Many of Mr. Currie's recommendations for tighter security regulations had been put into effect but the costs of full security measures were often "out of all proportion" to what they achieved. Capital costs for adequate security measures in the works service alone would run to $1,774,000 and it would cost another $1,106,000 a year to maintain them. And none of the Petawawa losses was due to lack of security.

9. It was the Defence Minister who suggested that a draft of the Currie report be submitted to the

Summerside Driving Club Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Summerside Driving Club was held last evening in the Town Hall with Mr. Robert Dewar in the chair. There was a good attendance of interested horsemen. Mr. Dewar was re-elected as president and Mr. Ensor Bowness was elected as president-elect, with Mr. Andrew Perry as secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Dewar, in his report on last winter's racing activities, said that it had been a very successful season and expressed his thanks to all the horsemen from various parts of the Province who had taken part and made the events worth sportsmanship throughout.

He expressed confidence that the coming season would provide many a thrilling finish and said that if weather conditions hold that racing would be under way shortly.

Messrs. R. H. Phillips and Frank Glover, the two old time rivals of many a hard fought battle were present and gave assurance that they would do all in their power to assist the officials in making this season the best yet.

Committees appointed last evening were:
Ice committee: R. H. Phillips, Ralph Baglote, Bob Dewar, Andrew Perry.

Classification committee: Charles Cahill, chairman.

Defence Department to be checked purely for factual errors before it was completed. Mr. Currie agreed to this although there was some disinclination on his part at first. Some changes arose from this.

10. Opposition suggestions that this was wrong "arises from a misconception of what Mr. Currie was asked to do... he was not carrying on a criminal investigation... not investigating the Department of National Defence and he was not investigating the Minister of National Defence."

"MR. IMPERIUM" OPENS TODAY AT CAPITOL SUMMERSIDE

M-G-M has brought together two names that spell magic at the box-office in its Technicolor singing romance, "Mr. Imperium," outstanding attraction at the Capitol Theatre. The are Lana Turner, one of Hollywood's most popular actresses, and Edw. G. Knopf for star of Broadway's smash hit, "South Pacific," who now brings his colorful personality and glorious voice to the screen for the first time.

The two stars team in the story of a famous American film star and a king-in-exile, who first fall in love in Italy against the picturesque backgrounds of the Mediterranean, then continue their romance in a desert hideaway at Palm Springs. The green play was written by Edwin H. Knopf and Don Hartman, with the picture directed by Hartman and produced by Edwin H. Knopf from his play. Harold Arlen and Dorothy Fields wrote three special songs for the production, with the famous Pinza voice heard in "Let Me Look At You" and "Andiamo," and with Miss Turner having a song of her own, titled "My Love and My Mule". A fourth number, sung by the co-stars, is "You Belong To My Heart."

In the supporting cast are Marjorie Main, last seen in "Mrs. O'Malley and Mr. Malone," and now playing a landlady who unwittingly aids the romance of the principals; Barry Sullivan, who appeared with Lana Turner in "A Life of Her Own," and who has since scored in "Grounds for Marriage" and "Payment on Demand"; Sir Cedric Hardwicke, returning to films after his appearance on the Broadway stage in "Cassa and Cleopatra"; and youthful Debbie Reynolds, who enacted Helen Kane in "Three Little Words" and who more recently scored in "Two Weeks With Love."
