

British Army Saved Egypt

EL CAP Egypt (AP)—Lt.-en. Sir Hugh Stockwell, commander of the Anglo-French forces in Egypt, told his troops Tuesday they had nothing to apologize for in this campaign which started four weeks ago.

"There are many who say why didn't we take Suez, why didn't we take Cairo," he said. "It would have been good fun and we would have enjoyed it. But that was not what we were told to do."

"Perhaps history will show that what we did stopped, or at least delayed, some major conflagration or war in the Middle East. The way Israel was going they would have given the Egyptians a really good smack and goodness knows what would have joined in on that bandwagon."

3 ♠ Pass 4 NT Pass
5 ♠ Pass 5 NT Pass
6 ♠ Pass 7 ♣

Opening lead—queen of diamonds. The bidding is shown just the way it took place. South decided to open the bidding in his short club suit and then on found himself more or less at the mercy of North's directional steering. North's bid were a little on the optimistic side. His five notrump call compelled South to show his one king by bidding six diamonds, and there was then no way to return to six clubs, the proper contract.

However, it can be said in North's behalf that South's king might have been in spades instead of hearts, in which case North's grand slam undertaking would have been feasible. As it was, South found himself confronted with the task of making all the tricks, this in the face of the fact that there appeared to be a certain spade loser.

As happens so often when the declarer is faced with a sizable challenge, South proceeded to make the hand. A cursory inspection of the East-West resources reveals no exceptional factor that permits the contract to be made, but the course of play adopted by South rendered the grand slam unbeatable.

Declarer took the A-K of diamonds, the ace of hearts, and ruffed a diamond with a sizable heart, was cashed and a heart trumped in dummy. Four rounds of trumps were led, at which point dummy remained with ♠Q-10-8-5.

South had left ♠A-7-9. East remained with ♠K-4-3. When the trump was led from dummy at this point, East found himself in difficult straits.

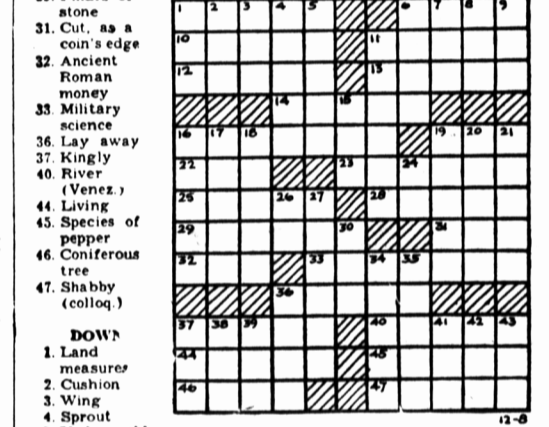

If he discarded the ♠4, South would slough the heart and make the last two tricks by leading the ten of spades to the ace.

If, instead, East discarded the ♠Q, South would slough a spade and make the last two tricks with the ♠A and the ♠9.

Of course, it was a lucky break for South that East was burdened with the responsibility of guarding both the spades and hearts. Or could it be that North's bidding routine showed extraneous perception?

Hungarian Refugees Seeking New Homes Being Assisted

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Planning by federal, provincial and civic organizations to settle Hungarian refugees seeking new homes in Canada continued unabated this week, even as the vanguard of the large group expected to be cared for was being cared for.

In almost every major centre plans were being set up to clothe, feed, house and give medical care to the newcomers.

Between 35,000 and 40,000 refugees are expected to settle in Canada eventually. About 6,000 will be settled by the end of this month.

In British Columbia, more than 1,000 offers of accommodation and jobs were received by immigration officials. A special provincial cabinet committee was set up Tuesday to co-ordinate activities throughout the province.

Alberta's welfare department promised every assistance.

OPEN HOMES AND HALLS

Ottawa put the complete facilities of an immigration hall in Edmonton at the disposal of a Hungarian relief committee being organized.

Saskatchewan was preparing to handle about 2,000 refugees. The first group of 200 was expected in Regina next week.

Two government ministers were named in Manitoba to co-ordinate relief work.

Ontario sent its agent-general in London J. S. P. Armstrong, to Vienna for a first-hand report on Hungarians wanting to settle in Ontario, and John Yaremko, a member of the legislature, also was sent.

Northern Ontario centres were asked to open their homes to refugees.

In Quebec City, where several hundred refugees were expected to dock Sunday aboard the Arosa Star, all local welfare bodies pooled their efforts to collect clothing and arrange housing. Jobs were offered despite a local seasonal slump.

In the Maritimes, planning was still in the preliminary stage, but provincial and welfare officials said everything will be ready when needed.

An immigration building at Saint John, N.B., equipped with a hospital and restaurant, has been opened to refugees.

Some asked what to do and Salusinski said: "I could not advise them. How can I tell a man with a wife and children in Hungary what decision he should make?"

Happiest man among the Hungarians was Janos Somogyi, a former world record walker, who received word from the Red Cross in Vienna that his wife, Teresa, his son Janos, 11, and daughter Edith, 4, are safe in Austria. Somogyi plans to bring his family here. He said 30 Hungarian Olympians would not return.

Meanwhile, Ullus Hegyi, chief de mission and Hungarian minister of sport, told the Melbourne Herald that no members of the team had told him they are not planning to return to Hungary.

40 Hungarian Athletes Seek Asylum In Australia, U. S.

By MURRAY ROSE

MELBOURNE (AP)—Forty and possibly more Hungarian Olympians have decided to sever ties with their native Hungary and seek asylum in Australia and the United States, sources close to the athletes said Wednesday.

There is a strong possibility that some athletes and officials from other nations under Soviet domination also may take advantage of their long distance from Budapest and make a break for political freedom.

Anti-Communist Hungarians both here and in the United States have been raising funds for those who wanted to break away.

Of the 40 Hungarians reported breaking away, 10 to 15 expect to stay in Australia, with the remainder going to America. Five or six women and some top names are included among the 40.
