Just a Minute

You may be busy; so are we, and have been all the Spring. So busy that we did not have time to advertise and tell you all the fine things we have for this season and the low prices we are selling for, but the people find us out, for it takes over forty people to keep the orders we get made up, so it keeps us moving to keep everything going right. But for those who do not know, we might say that we keep all the old reliable cloths such as Bellwarp Coating and Serges, Tyke and Blenheim Serges, Fashionable Trouserings to no end. Come and see us and see our stock and the fine clothes we make.

JULY MAGAZINES.

HARPERS.

The leading article in the July Harper's is "Sheridan's Ride," by General George A. Forsyth, U. S. A., illustrated by R. F. Zogbaum. Two other articles appropriate to the month of July are "The Military Academy as an Element in the System of National Defence," by Captain James Parker, U. S. A., and "The Modern American Mood," by W. D. Howells. "The Martian," by George du Maurier, reaches its tenth and last instalment; and in its stead appears the first part of "The Kentuckians," a novel by John Fox, Jr., illustrated by W. T. Smedley. "The Great Stone of Sardinia," illustrated by Peter Newell, goes into its second part. The ninth part of "White Man's Africa," by Pauline Bigelow, illustrated by R. Caton Woodville, is "Natal: A Colonial Paradise." "The Celebrities of the House of Commons. Part II," by T. P. O'Connor, M. P., is illustrated by Paul Renouard. The first of two articles on "Physics," appears in the series of articles on the contributions of the nineteenth century to science, by Henry Smith Williams, M. D. The poems are "Two Sonnets," by Helen Hay, the daughter of the ambassador to the Court of St. James; and "Beneath the Veil," by Alice Arther Sewall. The short stories are "The Love of an Ideal," by Laura Spencer Porter; "Miss Eurita Pleason's Relaxation," by E. A. Alexander, illustrated by J. W. Alexander; and "A Portrait by Cabanel," by Robert C. V. Meyers, illustrated by Albert E. Sterner. "The Editor's Drawer" opens with "The Judge's Burglar" by Hayden Carruth. In the "Editor's Study" Charles Dudley Warner gives "An American View of Mexico," and discusses "Brunetiere and Chitticism" and "A Snub to the Professors on Grant day at New York."

LIPPINCOTT'S.

The complete novel in the July issue of Lippincott's is "A Mountain Moloch," by Duffield Osborne. The scene is an otherwise unknown island in the Pacific, settled in remote ages by Phœnician exiles, and ruled by their descendants. The hero is an American naval officer, who leaves his ship for love of a native princess; and the adventures and blood shed are worthy of Mr. Rider Haggard in his palmiest days. Other stories are "William's Spree," by Louise Boynton, and "The Haunted Burglar," by the late W. C. Morrow, author of "The Ape, the Idiot, and Other people." Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Christian Endeavor Societies, who is now visiting the trees of his planting in remote parts of the earth, furnishes a vivid sketch of "A Plague Stricken City," written during a recent sojourn at Bombay when the burbonic plague was at its height. The article will be of special interest to the Endeavorers, and to readers in general. "The Evolution of Newspaper Advertising" is treated through its various stages by Oscar Herzberg. Ingram A. Pyle has a paper on "The American Drama," and Ellen Duval one on "The Decline of the Hero." In "The Play of the Broncho," Allan Hendricks describes an experience which the reader will be loth to emulate. Annie Steger Winston writes appreciatively on "The Fantastic Terrors of Childhood." Lawrence Irwell tells of the theory and practice of "Suicide among the Ancients," i. e., the Greeks and Romans; and "Quarantine for Cattle" in this country—an unfamiliar subject—is illustrated by H. H. Bowen. The poetry of the number is by Mary E. Stickney, Carrie Blake Morgan, and Clinton Scollard.

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

In spirit and sentiment the July Ladies' Home Journal is interestingly in accord with that of our National birth-month. An article on "The Greatest Nation on Earth," by Williams George Jordan, pictures, in a most vivid way, the vastness of the United States, and by simple comparisons and telling illustrations contrasts every phrase of our greatness with that of other nations. Allied in patriotic sentiment is Clifford Howard's article, "When Dolly Madison Saved the Declaration of Independence." This tells the story of the heroism of President Madison's wife, who saved the most precious document in America from falling into the hands of the British when Washington was in flames. "The Women's Patriotic Societies" gives the aim and purposes of the organizations and the requisites of membership. "Fifty Years of Postage Stamps" brings to mind that just a half century ago our Government made and sold its first stamps for letter postage.

Now that the English royal family is under review, George W. Smalley's article on "The Personal Side of the Prince of Wales" is timely, as it is interesting, in presenting a close view of the Heir Apparent in his every-day life. Edward W. Bok editorially addresses girl graduates, and discusses "Going Away in Summer." In his series of Bible lessons, Evangelist Moody takes "Love" for his text, and "Droch" writes on the timely theme of "Outdoor Books." "The Right Side of Disagreeable Things" reveals Robert J. Burdette's cleverest vein. Lovers of fiction will share with "Cap'n Bill" the joys of his wedding invitation, and enter heartily into the tender wooing of "Her Lad."

Along more practical lines are Mrs. Rore's lesson on making salads and salad dressing, and the care of the house in hot weather; Ruth Ashmore's "What Empty Stocking Clubs Can Do," giving a novel idea for new clubs, and showing how the children of the poor can be aided and their Christmas made bright. The first article in a new series, "The Ladies Home Journal's Moderate Cost Houses," by its own architect, gives most minute details and practical suggestions for a model suburban house. Articles on needle-work for summer hours give many valuable suggestions. An artistic feature of striking interest is Alice Babber Stephens' drawing of the American summer girl, the opening illustration of the number, published by The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar per year; ten cents per copy.

PRINCE OF WALES AND HIS FAMILY

A Dutiful Son a Loving Husband and a Devoted Father.

In the July Ladies' Home Journal George W. Smalley writes interestingly of "The Personal side of the Prince of Wales." "The domestic relations of the Prince," he says, "are not a topic for free discussion but at least one may say that one source of the general regard for him is his bearing both to the Queen and to the Princess of Wales in public. Numerous public occasions have presented the Prince in an attitude of affectionate deference to the Queen which is plainly no matter of decorum merely, but personal—the son to the mother; and when the Princess was present—the husband to the wife.

"Those who know will tell you how deep has been the devotion of the father to his children from their infancy and youth when the Prince used to be in the nursery early each morning, down to their present maturity. A word may be said also of his brotherly affection for the Empress Frederick, who has so narrowly missed, or at most nominally shared for a short three months, one of the greatest Imperial thrones in the world. It was her nearness to Homburg which was among the inducements that brought her brother there regularly. He was constantly at the old Schloss, where till her new place was finished she lived. The Empress was constantly in Homburg—her carriage, with its black horses, and the familiar Imperial liveries, always in front of the Prince's villa."
