"Training the Trotting Horse,"

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

Edited by Leslie E. Macleod.

THE publishers are now taking orders for this greatest of practical horse-books, which will shortly be off the press. It is a handsome 300 page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated by Whitney, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of Charles Marvin, who has given more young horses fast records than any man that ever lived; and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto, as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters. The illustrations alone are worth the price of the book. Mailed, post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada at $3.50. Read what J. C. Sibey, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book in the Spirit of the Times, after seeing advance sheets: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber, who has any relish for his business, can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed, post-paid, for $3.50.

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

APRIL 25, 1890.

Sandy Land.

Henry Stewart, in The Country Gentleman, says some things about sandy land which may be encouraging to those who are tilling such farms.

"Sandy soil, well managed, is the best of all kinds. It absorbs the rain and holds it firmly; its porosity keeps it dry in wet weather, and moist in dry weather; it enables the air to pass in and out freely at every change of temperature and condition of moisture; and also exerts that oxidizing effect upon organic matter, as manure or composts, which is well known to be a property of all porous substances, and thus such soil makes at once available an application of manure by decomposing it very rapidly and converting it into plant food; it is easily tilled, may be worked weeks in advance of clay land, and twenty-four hours after a rain when the working is the most effective.

"It yields the best quality of wheat, thin, clear-skinned and heavy in the grain; the very best and brightest barley, the heaviest oats; the very finest potatoes and roots; and being warmed up quickly by the sun's heat, which it absorbs greedily, it yields the finest corn, clover and forage crops. It is healthful to live stock and to the owner. It is generous, kindly in disposition, tractable, and when liberally treated returns favors promptly and abundantly. Like the greatest virtue of humanity it is twice blessed, it blesteth him that gives and him that takes; but also like everything kindly and good, it pines for kindness and generosity in return. It is thankful for small favors, and gives quid pro quo for the least it receives. I would rather work a sandy loam farm than any other kind; and if the right kind of sand is there, the loam will soon be made of it by ploughing in green crops and by the use of fertilizers, lime included, as well as manure."

After "La Grippe."

Correspondents writing from Germany and Italy to the English press, speak of a new disease following the trail of la grippe, and affecting only those who have suffered from its forerunner. The Italians call it "La Nona," which may be translated into English as "falling asleep." People drop into a comatose condition under it, and remain seemingly dead, except for a faint breathing, four or more days. If then they recover consciousness, they exhibit every sign of nervous exhaustion. In one province of Italy the prefect has issued a circular to the inferior authorities to this effect:—

"Although the epidemic known as influenza is almost at an end, yet in these late days, in several communes, cases of very rapid death have been verified, in consequence of cardiac paralysis and comatose attacks. In view of this fact, the prefect recommends not to hurry the burial of persons deceased from such maladies, protracting the period of delay even to 48 hours." (The Italian law prescribes 24 hours as the usual custom.)

One case is mentioned of a young man who has been asleep for twenty days, opening his eyes but once a day. He is extremely emaciated and corpse-like. A physician writes to the Boston Herald from Illinois that he has seen cases of the disease in that State. In these the heart and eyes have been chiefly affected, the heart showing irregular pulsation, the eyes great photophobia and penetrating pain. One woman patient has been forbidden to read, write or sew, on penalty of losing her sight very speedily. The Herald adds: there has been no public reference to the subject that we have seen in this city; yet a local physician informs us that he has a case of the complaint under treatment.

Mr. Parnell's Objection.

A London despatch says:—An intimate friend of Mr. Parnell, in giving the Irish leader's reasons for opposing Mr. Balfour's land purchase bill, said Mr. Parnell considered it a bad bill from every point of view, not only bad, but to a great extent ridiculous. Considering the matter from the point of view of the Irish tenant, it may be said at once that the proposal is one to rob the tenant who is foolish enough to buy up his own property or his holding. If the bill passes there will be three classes of peasants: 1. Holders owning land as purchasers under the Ashburne act, whom we may call the Ashburne tenants. 2. The tenants owning land under the Balfour act, whom we may call Balfour tenants, and (3) tenants holding land at a rent, either judicial or non-judicial. These tenants will be placed in an unfavorable position as compared with the first mentioned. The Ashburne tenant will have his land at a reduction from the present rate of (roughly speaking) 49 per cent., whereas the Balfour tenants, under the Ashburne arrangements, will, the first five years, hold his land at a reduction of about 25 per cent., and the ordinary tenant will be paying a rent which will be equal to the old rack rent fixed by the land commission. The meaning of all this is that everything will be unsettled; that agitation will become not merely desirable but necessary, for it is contrary to reason to suppose that one man on one side of the road can hold at an annual rental of £50 a year, and two men on the other side of the road pay twice that sum for the same quantity of land without causing the two latter to rise in whatever way may be open to them. The land question would thus be opened afresh. Mr. Balfour, in short, by his bill, which provides only for the gradual transfer of the property to the tenants, puts a direct premium not only on agitation but only violence, and is thus destructive and not conservative.

The Bit of Ready Money.

BY LILLIE E. BARR.

I. I have steady work in plenty, I've a master just and kind, Work that's easy to my fingers, And exactly to my mind; But I have another pleasure, One for which myself I thank— Listen, listen, Mollie, honey! I've a bit of ready money In the bank.

II. O, you make my home so happy! And you are so good and fair, That there is no man I envy Anyhow or anywhere! But I may as well confess it, If I would be true and frank, Every blessing's doubled, honey, By the bit of ready money In the bank.

III. And though you are bright and hearty, And though I am strong and hale, No one has for health a surety; I've seen other workmen fail, But if trouble touched us, Mollie— And it touches every rank— None I love would suffer, honey; I've a bit of ready money In the bank.

IV. Some care but for passing pleasure, Love the feast, and dance, and song; Spend their dollars as they earn it, Trust to luck to get along; Then care comes with grief or sickness, And they have themselves to thank For not having, Mollie, honey, Just the bit of ready money In the bank.

V. For it doubles every pleasure, And makes sorrow less and light; He that has a growing bank-book Does the thing he thinks is right. He can choose his work and master, He can speak out bold and frank; He's a freeman, Mollie, honey, Who has laid by ready money In the bank!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

"Traveller" to "Fairplay."

Sir,—I have no intention of replying to the flippant effusion of the Grand Sachem of the motley school of unbelievers, whose headquarters is Summerside. The game wouldn't be worth the powder. Besides, the Christian religion requires no apology at my hands, nor any defence against such blatant blasphemers, who crop up every succeeding age, from the days of their prototype, the fool who said in his heart, "There is no God," down to the philosophical wonder who invokes Euripides, and talks about liberty when he means license, over the pseudonym of "Fairplay." I merely write to give certain parties a word of warning. As the general public happily believe in Christ and not in the gentlemen comprising the school above referred to, it is not very likely that they are going to tolerate much longer in their servants the conduct complained of, especially when, apart from religious considerations, they are in the possession of facts more than sufficient, under the service, to send them about their business. It is useless for the gentleman to cast aspersions upon Christianity because there have been, and are, erring Christians. Can their vices be traced to Christianity? And if comparisons, always odious, are to be made, how will we compare with the votaries of Tom Payne in this Province? Knowing the ground they stand on, one would have a right to look for a little more wisdom than "Fairplay" displays when he attempts to "address the public." But then as "the beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord," we are not to comment on its absence in certain quarters.

TRAVELLER.

O'Leary, April 23rd, 1890.

News Notes.

Boston expends $16,000 a year to maintain its quarantine establishment.

Brazil's revolutionary government is having trouble with its soldiers. It was the same soldiers who placed it in power, and probably they do not see why one government should be more sacred to them than another.

A newspaper of the smallest circulation is that published for the use of the Emperor of Austria, his Minister of Foreign Affairs, and his Secretary of State. A fourth copy is never issued. Its contents consist of the criticisms of the journals of the world upon his administration of government. Its annual cost is $50,000.—Washington (D. C.) Craftsman.

"To discontinue an advertisement," says John W. Namaker, Philadelphia's great merchant, "is like taking down your sign. If you want to do business you must let the public know it. Standing advertisements are better and cheaper than reading notices. They look more substantial and businesslike, and inspire confidence. I would as soon think of doing business without clerks as without advertising."

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used by mothers for children teething for over fifty years with perfect success. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. ap118 90dy wky
