NEWS NOTES.

The insurrection in Nicaragua has been entirely suppressed, and peace restored throughout the country.

William Tremear, a well-to-do and highly respected farmer living about three miles from Manilla, Ont., committed suicide a few days ago by hanging himself in a barn.

The European cities of Dublin, Barcelona, and Madrid are to be equipped with trolley systems, and all the electrical and steam apparatus will be supplied by United States firms.

The Dominion Minister of Customs is satisfied with the first effort to collect revenue in the Yukon. Fifteen thousand dollars have been remitted by Collector Davis in less than a year.

Robert Carew, sr., an old man living near Simcoe, Ont., was recently burned to death in a pile of brush in one of his fields. It is thought he was suffocated by the smoke, and fell into the fire.

A New Jersey youth found it necessary to take a gun and fill his sweetheart full of bird shot before she would consent to become his wife. The shotgun is rather a ruthless successor to the bow and arrow which used to figure in the Cupid episodes.

It is reported that a powerful Spanish squadron will immediately proceed to Cuba on the pretext of attending the installation of the new floating dock at Havana, but really as an answer to the despatch of the United States flotilla to Florida waters.

When the poor master of Hoboken came to examine a case of destitution the other day he found a new bicycle in the place. It belonged to the daughter of the house. He very naturally advised the sufferers to sell the wheel.

Vaccination laws are not enforced in England. At Norwich, with a population of 100,000, the vaccination officer's fees this year amounted to about $40; he receives 50 cents for each case. The cost to the city has been $4 per child for three years past.

Moscow in honor of the medical congress just held there, gave $1,000 for a prize to be awarded to some person who had done eminent service to medicine during this generation. On Prof. Virchow's motion the prize was given by the congress to Henri Dunant, founder of the Red Cross society, who is living in great poverty in Switzerland.

Gurlier's Ways.

A man who visited the cow stables on H. B. Gurlier's farm writes:

The stables are provided with cement floors and the Bidwell stall. The floors are flooded and scrubbed every day, and we found a man with water and brush scrubbing the manglers. The stables are as white as snow, made so with whitewash. At the end of each row of cows is a sheet of paper with name of milker and number of cow. Mr. Gurlier told me that he had found enough difference in milkers to pay a man's wages. Milk is weighed night and morning. We found everything else about the barns in keeping—silos, pure running water, salt boxes in yard, clean barn yard, free from manure and filth.

The milk is taken direct to the dairy house, which is a model of neatness, and there thoroughly strained, run through an aerator and cooler, bottled and put into refrigerating room, where the temperature is near freezing. I never tasted such fine milk in all my life. I asked Mr. Gurlier why he did not pasteurize. He replied he was ahead of pasteurization. He did not need it. Pasteurization was all right for milk that had been exposed to unclean conditions. He further said that he believed some of the valuable constituents of milk were damaged by pasteurizing. I am inclined to coincide with Mr. Gurlier on this point.

Voice Photography.

In a technical article on the transmission of sound by agency of light The Journal of Photography has this interesting paragraph:

"Selenium and many other bodies in thin sheets, such as hard rubber, ebonite, metals, ivory and paper, will give sounds under the influence of intermittent light. Friese Greene published a method for converting sound vibrations into photographic action. His plan of photographing the vibrations of the human voice is simple and neat. A piece of parchment is first obtained and stretched like a drum. Upon the center a very thin piece of silver polished glass is pasted. A ray of light coming through a pinhole having a piece of talc, colored green, before it, is made to fall upon the polished silver glass. The reflected ray is carried on until it strikes a sensitive plate. This plate must be arranged to move gradually and be at a distance of three feet from the reflector. Start the plate moving and speak into the drum from behind the silver reflector, and the vibrations of the parchment diaphragm, caused by talking into it, will be recorded on the sensitive plate when developed. Different voices will give different waves on the plate, and it is said that in the case of the vowels repeated singly these waves are wonderfully uniform."

Some people in the world persist in clinging to old methods. There are men who still use a forked stick in place of a modern plow. There are also men, who, when they are troubled with a disordered stomach or liver, resort to the old-fashioned violent remedies that rack and rend the whole body, and while they give temporary relief, in the long run do the entire system a great amount of harm.

Modern science has discovered remedies infinitely superior to these old-fashioned drugs, that do their work by promoting the natural processes of excretion and secretion and gently correcting all circulatory disturbances. When a man feels generally out of sorts, when he loses sleep at night, when he gets up headachy and with a bad taste in his mouth in the morning, when he feels dull and lethargic all day, when his appetite is poor and his food distresses him, when work comes hard and recreation is an impossibility, that man, though he may not believe it, is a pretty sick man. He is on the road to consumption, nervous prostration, malaria, or some serious blood disease. In cases of this description a man should resort at once to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is the best medicine for a weak stomach, impaired digestion and disordered liver. It is the great blood-maker and purifier, flesh-builder and nerve tonic. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs and kindred ailments. Thousands have testified to its marvelous merits. It is a modern scientific medicine that aids without goading nature, and that has stood the test for thirty years. Medicine dealers sell it.

Bright on Gladstone.

John Bright once said of Gladstone. "He is an honest man; he believes what he says. The worst of it is that he too readily believes what he wishes to believe." To a question whether that was not something like self-deceit, Mr. Bright replied: "No. Mr. Gladstone sees an object which he thinks of vital importance, and he turns in all directions for arguments in support of it. He finds them, and he becomes unconscious of anything outside of them. That is not self-deceit." To the objection that it was a dangerous quality in a statesman to be able to see only that side of a question which he wished to see, Mr. Bright replied that every man who had done anything great in the world had been of that constitution. "You cannot do a great thing," he concluded, "if you have doubts of your own position and reasons."

The Marechal Niel Rose.

The Empress Eugenie gave the name Marechal Niel to the lovely rose which is so called. When General Neil returned from the Franco-Prussian war, where he had signally distinguished himself, a poor man presented him with a basket of lovely yellow roses. To perpetuate their beauty the general had a cutting struck from one of the blooms, and when a rose tree had grown from this he presented it to the Empress Eugenie. She was delighted with the dainty gift, but was much surprised to learn that the rose was known by no distinctive name. "Ah," she said, "I will give it a name. It shall be the Marechal Niel." Thus the empress achieved two ends—named the flower and acquainted the general with the fact that he had been raised to the coveted office of marshal of France.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ambiguous.

Cut a watermelon in halves, scoop out the entire center, taking out the seeds. Chop in tray, add a cup of sugar and the juice of a lemon. Pack the freezer, turn a few minutes. It will be like soft snow and delicious.

The Turk.

Judging of the general dispositions of the Turk, Mrs. Max Muller, in her "Letters From Constantinople," thus expresses herself:

"Education has done as yet very little to tame the ferocious spirit inherited by the present Turks from their Tartar and Mongolian ancestors. When one sees them huddled together near their mosques, one feels that the lions and tigers might spring upon you at any time and at the smallest provocation. It seems a mistake to imagine that the Turks hate the Christian religion. I should say they respect it, and they do not even hate the Christians as Christians, but as Bulgarians, Armenians, Russians and all the rest. In no other country would unbelievers be appointed to the highest offices as in Turkey, where we find Christians not only among the ministers, but among the ambassadors, who, of course, must be trusted with the most important state secrets. When a man is massacred, it may be difficult to draw the line and to say whether he was massacred as a Bulgarian or as a Christian, nor would it make much difference to him. All I can say is that as far as I can gauge the root of the hatred is national and not religious."

Wesley Would Not Burst.

His sister, Elsie Hawthorne, gave me a bust of John Wesley, in clerical white bib, and of a countenance much resembling Alcott's, even to the long, white, waving hair. Its very aspect cried out, though never so mercifully, "My sermon is endless!" Aunt Elsie, hunching her shoulders in mirthful appreciation, said, "Nathaniel always hated it."

Why not? At 4 years of age he had already had enough of Wesley, and my aunt, with a rejoicing laugh, described how, not being able to induce his elders to act upon his abhorrence of the melancholy, tinted object, at last, in dead of winter, he filled it with water through a hole in the pedestal which had revealed its hollowness. He then stood the bust upside down against the wall in a cold place, confidently awaiting the freezing of the water, in which event it was to be hoped that the puppet sermonizer would burst, like a pitcher under similar odds. But John Wesley never burst, to the disgust of a broader mind and the offended wonder of childish eyes.—"Memories of Hawthorne," by Rose Hawthorne Lathrop.

Her Trouble.

I met a pretty maiden,
Whose eyes were wet and red,
I sought to lend her sympathy,
And tenderly I said:
"Pray tell me of your trouble,
That I may help you bear it."
Some heavy sorrow weighs you down,
And, oh, I fain would share it.

"Some friend, perchance, has left you—
Some well-loved one is dead.
You look back through the mist of tears
At happy moments fled.
Or has some one deceived you—
Some heartless man and cruel?
Oh, let me know his name, that I
May meet him in a duel!"

She took her little kerchief
And wiped her tears away,
And then, as I stood waiting, she
At length contrived to say:
"I've lost my love, dear have I
But eddy gay deceiver;
The trouble with me is that I
Have got the blabbed hay fever!"

Of all the nerve-tonics—bromos, celerics or nervines—your doctor will tell you that the Hypophosphites are best understood. So thoroughly related is the nervous system to disease that some physicians prescribe Hypophosphites alone in the early stages of Consumption. Scott's Emulsion is Cod-liver Oil, emulsified, with the Hypophosphites, happily blended. The result of its use is greater strength and activity of the brain, the spinal cord and the nerves.

A GUERNSEY.

Achievement of One Pretty Cow With the Yellow Skin.

This cow's name is Nubia's Vesta. Her owner writes of her to the editor of Hoard's Dairyman:

Nubia's Vesta was dropped Nov. 22, 1891, and is the dam of four calves—three bulls and one heifer. She has never missed a milking since dropping her first calf, May 17, 1893. She dropped her last calf on the 9th of May, and on the 20th of the same month I started her on a year's test, weighing her milk and making a test for butter fat every Wednesday.

From the 20th of May to the 20th of June she gave 1,367½ pounds of milk that tested 6.40 per cent butter fat. From the 20th of June to the 20th of July she gave 1,343 pounds of milk that tested 6.60 per cent butter fat. From the 20th of July to the 20th of August she gave 1,281 pounds of milk that tested 6.70 per cent butter fat. In addition to good pasture she has had eight quarts of bran each day. She is now getting all the fodder corn she will eat twice a day.

I believe it possible to force her to give 11,000 pounds of milk in a year. There are many cows that will give a larger yield of milk for a few weeks while fresh, but there are few cows that will carry their average so high during the whole time between calving.

To which Hoard's Dairyman adds:

So far as form is concerned, it is the old, old story of thin, incurving thighs, high flanks, rising pelvic arch, broad loin and thin shoulders. There is nothing about her that is straight or blocky or beefy.
