Admits Slaying Former Poet And Novelist

By ARTHUR EVERETT
NEW YORK, (AP) — A Greenwich Village dishwasher was seized at gunpoint Wednesday and police admitted slaying Maxwell Bodenheim, the 1920's poet of passion.
The capture of 26-year-old Harold Weinberg only about a mile from the scene of the crime ended a police hunt that ranged as far south as Miami.
Left unanswered for the moment was how Bodenheim's 35-year-old wife, Ruth, died, if she was slain, was found, because Bodenheim's wife Weinberg's cheap Third Avenue tenement room Sunday. The poet and novelist had been shot.
At one point in a statement, Weinberg claimed Bodenheim killed the woman, said police.
Bodenheim, who was 56, became the rage of Chicago's Bohemian literary set in the 1920s with his sexy, coquettish verse. Then he moved on to New York and greater fame with 13 novels, most of them bordering on the obscene.

Bey of Women

A handsome, red-bearded figure, Bodenheim attracted to him at the height of his success a bevy of lovely young women proteges. Two of them committed suicide over him and a third attempted suicide.
But alcohol caught up with Bodenheim and he ended up selling poetry for drink or food. He was as a blind beggar in his final days to get money.
Bodenheim and his third wife, the former Ruth Fagan of Detroit, were penniless and homeless when they found shelter with Weinberg.
He and Bodenheim were occasional drinking companions.
Weinberg vanished Saturday and when the bodies were discovered 24 hours later, a police alarm was sent out for him.

Police seized Weinberg as he dived through a rear window of an acquaintance's first-floor apartment.

Transportation At Standstill In Prince County

Snow, which began falling at Summerside and surrounding districts early yesterday morning and continued until mid-afternoon, accompanied by winds of 30 miles an hour with gusts up to 50 miles, gradually brought all transportation to a standstill by evening.

Island Motor Transport buses were cancelled during the afternoon due to impassable roads. One bus to the R.C.A.F. Station which went out at 4:30 p.m. was able to proceed as far as the airport road and was forced to return to town in the wake of a government plow coming through from Wellington. The passengers on the bus were obliged to reach the port on foot.

New Demands

inter-American conference opening at Caracas, Venezuela on March 1. On the American suggestion, the Big Four set up a committee to schedule the order of discussions in the few days remaining and to set a tentative adjournment date.

Only a glimmer of hope remained that some ground might be gained toward settlement of Asian issues, including the breaking of the deadlock on a Korean peace conference.

Plea For Freedom

Austrian Foreign Minister Leopold Figl, had earlier pleaded at the ministers' table for his country's freedom. In Austria, the reaction was one of deep gloom.

A diplomatic source disclosed that Figl's plea was not without effect. He said today will offer Russia a new guarantee—a written pledge that Germany, as a member of the proposed European Defence Community, never would be permitted to engage in any aggression against the Soviet Union.

Western diplomats regarded it as a hopeless, but necessary gesture. None expected the Russians to give their grudging insistence on killing off EDC and breaking up the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as conditions for unity in Germany.

Figl asked the Berlin conference at the beginning of the session to "give the 7,000,000 Austrians the freedom long due to them."

"Harsh" Obligation

The Austrian deplored the "strange situation that a country which first was victim by the Nazis and second (in 1938) will be the last to obtain full freedom and sovereignty."

"The few articles of the draft treaty (six out of 52) which still are open are by no means of such importance that they could not immediately be settled—given good-will on all sides," he said.

He reminded Molotov the Soviet Union had extracted more than $200,000,000 in profits since 1949 from Austria. With Russia taking nearly 100 per cent of Austria's present oil production of 3,000,000 tons yearly, the treaty draft would sanction the heavy drain for 30 years.

Dulles challenged Molotov to agree to liberate Austria at once. "Surely the mighty Soviet empire cannot really fear lest 7,000,000 peace-loving Austrians should have freedom. Nor can I believe the economy of 800,000,000 people within the Soviet-dominated bloc depends upon being able to continue to bleed the economy of the small and naturally poor Austrian state."

Austria was "not an aggressor nor a defeated enemy but the victim of aggression," Dulles said.

"In No Hurry"

Foreign Secretary Eden told Molotov that "the Austrian question stands on its own and its solution need not await that of any problem in any other part of the world."

The Briton offered a resolution for immediate approval of 51 of the draft treaty's articles and consideration of Austria's request to revise the last remaining ones: Soviet economic concessions.

Molotov charged that the Western powers are "in no hurry to settle the peace treaty with Germany." He added "we must not forget that during the last few decades German militarism drew Austria into a military bloc directed against other peoples of Europe."

In view of this, he argued, the Big Four are obliged to "take effective measures to prevent a new Austrian Anschluss by West Germany"—by keeping troops on Austrian soil after granting "independence."

Guaranteed Terms

The committee's findings were given only in guarded and general terms by MacLeod in his written statement to the House of Commons. It said that:
1. It must be regarded as established that there is a relationship between smoking and cancer of the lung.
2. There is no certain evidence of the presence of a cancer-producing agent in tobacco smoke, and statistical evidence indicates that the recent rise in incidence of lung cancer is not entirely due to increases in smoking. Difference between lung cancer rates in city and rural areas suggest other factors, including perhaps atmospheric pollution.
3. No immediate dramatic fall in death rates could be expected if smoking stopped, since the development of lung cancer may be the result of factors operating over many years.

Tenders Opened For New Breakwater At West Point

OTTAWA, Feb. 12.—(Special)—The New Brunswick firm of J. W. McMillan of Upper Gagetown was the lowest tenderer for the contract for building a proposed breakwater at West Point, it was disclosed here today when the five tenders for the project were opened. An award will probably be made within a day or two to this firm for an amount of $34,447.

Work on the West Point breakwater was recommended to the Department of Public Works by J. Watson MacNaught, Liberal M.P. for Prince, who represented the works would be of highest importance to fishermen of the area. Actual construction is expected to begin as soon as ice conditions permit and the contractor has assembled his labor force and materials.

A Successful Islander Abroad

Dr. Frederick J. Stevenson, principal geneticist, Division of Vegetable Crops and Diseases, Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils and Agricultural Engineering, United States Department of Agriculture, Beltsville, Md., is a native of Fredericton, P. E. I. He is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James F. Stevenson, and was born in 1886. He attended Hazel Grove school, where his teacher from 1893-1900, was a young man of the community. Some time afterwards, Dr. Stevenson, left the Island, and for several years he taught and acted as principal in the secondary schools of the State of Washington. The State College of Washington awarded him the degree of Bachelor of Science, in 1922, Master of Science in 1925 and Doctor of Philosophy in 1929. From 1919 to 1922, Dr. Stevenson was an assistant farm crops specialist at the State College of Washington. In 1925 he moved to the University of Minnesota as Assistant Professor of Agronomy and Plant Genetics. Since 1930 he has been associated with the United States Department of Agriculture as a geneticist to lead the National Potato-Breeding Program. Under the direction of Dr. Stevenson this program has been included on a cooperative basis to include formal agreements among 25 States and the United States Department of Agriculture. Informal cooperation is carried on with Canada and many foreign countries.

The outstanding success and progress of the National Potato-Breeding Program since 1930, are largely due to the knowledge and ability of its leader, Dr. Stevenson. He was directly, and indirectly responsible for the introduction of 27 potato varieties since 1932. In 1951 these new varieties accounted for nearly 50 per cent of the certified potato seed produced in the United States and more than 70 per cent of the seed production in N. B., N. S., and P. E. I. During his 22 years research with potatoes, he has become the leading authority in the country on potato investigations and has an enviable international reputation.

Dr. Stevenson has a family of six boys and six girls. Six of his family are college graduates. One son is Ph.D. He has 17 grandchildren. His wife was Cottie E. Crossley whom he married in 1911. Two of Dr. Stevenson's sisters reside on P. E. I., Mrs. Harriet Bowman, Charlottetown and Mrs. Enman, Victoria West, Prince County. His relatives and friends on P. E. I., are justly proud of the remarkable man.

In 1952 Dr. Stevenson was elected a honorary life member of the Potato Association of America at its Annual Meeting in Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.

Lad Proves Worth In Sea Rescue

ALDBURGH, England.—(CP)—Fifteen-year-old Patrick Cable was sitting in the theatre when the sirens wailed.
Pat knew what it meant. Five previous generations of his family in his village had answered the urgent call.

The Royal National Lifeboat Institution which operates the lifeboat service around the British coasts, has a rule that no one under 18 may join lifeboat crews.

But Pat joined the dark shapes leaping into the lifeboat. "I got aboard before anyone recognized me in the darkness," Pat said.

The lifeboat fought its way to the disabled steamship Kentbrook and helped rescue 14 men aboard.

As dawn broke and the rescue ended successfully, coxswain Bill Green turned around to congratulate his crew. His eyes bulged at the 15-year-old. Later he said the youngster had proved himself to be "one of the best—he'll make a fine lifeboat man."

"I hope the gentlemen in London will understand," Green said.

tion-wide air-lift organizations on the same basis," he added.

"The continued strength of our Society is based on two things—the work of the volunteers and the financial support of the citizens of Canada," Mr. Leather said. "Increased obligations were cheerfully met in 1953. Our appeal was not only well supported but for the first time since the war our campaign was over-subscribed. The credit belongs to all Red Cross workers and expresses the confidence of your neighbours in the work you are doing with us or her dollar."

The speaker described the major disasters in various parts of the world to which the more fortunate people of Canada were able to render assistance through the Red Cross. "The relief supplies were provided by you" he added. "They represent your money and endless hours of work by thousands of Canadian women volunteers from England and the Netherlands from our Red Cross representatives all over the scene."

"When the flood swept over some of the islands of Japan last summer, your society presented financial assistance to the Japanese Red Cross and when the Ionian Islands of Greece were violently shaken by earthquakes a short time later," the speaker continued, "supplies were flown from Geneva and further supplies were flown from Canada by the R.C.A.F., and were accompanied by our Assistant Commissioner, Mr. Bjarason.

"With the introduction of our Gamma Globulin project we were able to co-operate as a voluntary society in matters of health and relief with the departments of Government as required under our charter. Our society was requested by the Department of National Health and Welfare to supply one hundred and fifty thousand donations of blood for the manufacture of Gamma Globulin to be used in the fight against polio. Gamma Globulin is the new hope against this dread disease, a disease that is feared by every person in Canada. Last year was the worst in our history when across Canada eight thousand men, women and children were afflicted. We must bear in mind," Mr. Leather said, "that the collection of blood for this project is the sole responsibility of the Canadian Red Cross Society."

Mr. Leather then described the establishing of a welfare team to work amongst the Canadian service men in the Far East. In this until 23 young Canadian women visit men in hospital regularly, write letters for them, do their shopping, teach them arts and crafts and deliver home town newspapers and magazines at their bedside. At the Maple Leaf Club in Tokyo they mingle with the men on leave and provide recreational programmes in a Canadian atmosphere.

"At home our veterans were not forgotten," the speaker continued. "There were regular visits, weekly films, an art and crafts programme and the comforts provided by you girls, brought happiness and varied interests into the lives of those whose existence would otherwise be drab and dull."

Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Drummond of Freetown, P.E.I., announce the engagement of their daughter Ruby Vinetta Caswell to William James Finet, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Finck of Halifax. The marriage will take place February 26.

Canadian newspapers," the speaker said. He touched on the inauguration of a self help program for the Korean people, made possible by the Canadian Junior Red Cross. Sewing machines and materials were provided resulting in garments being made for war orphans. This project has expanded to Seoul. The project has not only provided clothing but tends to rebuild the self respect of those participating in the scheme," the speaker said.

"The Korean people have come to realize that our country, remote from theirs, is genuinely concerned about them. They realize that we recognize their battle for freedom as our battle to retain ours."

Visits 'Quake Area
Mr. Bjarason went on to describe his visit to the Tengan Islands following the devastation there by the most disastrous earthquake of modern times. At that time urgent relief was flown in by aircraft by courtesy of the Dept. of National Defence. The speaker described the flight to Athens followed by a road and ship trip to the devastated area which he said defied description.

Zante, a once beautiful city of more than 15,000 inhabitants, rich in the culture of civilization was completely shattered by the tremors. This was followed by a fire that destroyed everything that could be burned. The refugees were accommodated in tented camps around the former town site. "I was proud to see cases and cases of Canadian Red Cross clothing piled up on the wharf awaiting distribution," he said. "It was embarrassing to me to have people fall on their knees and kiss my hands when they heard I came from Canada." To most Greek people Canada represents the land on which Providence has chosen to bestow its favours. "It is gratifying when the world is sitting in two armed camps, and engaged in an ideological struggle that there is one symbol under which men and women of all creeds and colours will rally in the cause of humanity and in time of peace or war will work for the improvement of health, the prevention of disease and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world," the speaker concluded.

Let's Talk It Over

The standard of education in any given institution embraces a lot of factors. It goes a great deal further than the setting of a 60 or 65% minimum for passing examinations. If this were not so, the greatest credit might go to the highest bidder. One high school sets 60% and is proud of its standard. Another up this to 65% and, we presume, is entitled to be still prouder. Then some one comes along fairly bursting with pride, announcing 70% as their minimum. If the last institution could pass as many at the high percentage as the other two, there might be some reason for gratification. But no one should take any pride in a large list of failures. We don't know very much about the standard of the fair amount of candidates who have passed the examinations which stand as admission to your portals, may be able to pass on to further and widely divergent fields of educational endeavour. If students are not suited to this higher education, there should be some way to find this out by testing, before they waste precious and money fighting their way towards a mirage which they can never hope to reach. Of course, errors will be made, and some must be disappointed, but the failure of a pupil is to a certain limited extent the failure of the school he attends, and these failures should be kept down to a reasonable minimum.

The reasonable and right thing to do, of course, is to set your standard as the fair amount of candidates who have passed the examinations which stand as admission to your portals, may be able to pass on to further and widely divergent fields of educational endeavour. If students are not suited to this higher education, there should be some way to find this out by testing, before they waste precious and money fighting their way towards a mirage which they can never hope to reach.
