6. Saturday: With blueberries still in season this might be a very appropriate recipe. It's a new one on my list and it merits an A for Achievement. Line pie plate with rich flaky pie crust about 1-8" thick. For the filling mix 1 quart fresh blueberries, 2½ tbps. flour, 2-3 cup granulated sugar, 1-4 tsp. salt and 1 tbsp. lemon juice. Sprinkle with 1 tbsp. butter Roll remaining dough for top crust and lay over berries. Trim pastry 1-5" beyond pan, fold it under bottom crust, press edges together with fork. Cut decorative slits in top for steam to escape. Brush top of pie with a slightly beaten egg white and sprinkle with sugar Bake in a hot oven (425° F.) 50 to 60 minutes.

7. Sunday: Golden days of September are with us again — it makes us pause and think how fleeting was this summer. It seems such a short time ago that we were making neat rows in the garden, dropping in tiny seeds and saying "It will be some time before we can enjoy the fruits of our labours."

Now the garden is full to overflowing, with each stalk and vine outdoing the other in producing their harvest of goodness.

Across the hills, the fields like patches in a huge quilt are, golden yellow, dark green of potatoes, lighter greens of turnips and some places a drab color where hay has been cut and cattle have kept the grass close cropped. All day we keep the fire going in the kitchen range and at night the embers die slowly, leaving a pleasant warmth in the big old kitchen. The night is dark now, dark as a velvet curtain pinned softly here and there with silver stars. Kon-Tikki purrs softly at my feet as he takes off for a last run around the yard. "Is that a cricket I hear?" he purrs as he dashes madly off. So now, I want to catch the Blanket Harbor Bus before midnight. I shall have to say silently, "Goodnight all". Be seeing you next week.

Tune the sweet stringed guitar
And watch the evening star
As she kisses the moon good-night.
Watch the moonbeams where they lie
In the sea or in the sky.
See the little ships of cloudlets in their flight,
Then happy dreams that bring another day,
And so good night, and so good night.
