

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. When playing bridge, is a person ever justified in criticizing the play of his or her partner? A. Not unless asked outright for an opinion of the play. Usually his opinion is not asked and to volunteer any criticism is a show of ill-breeding. Sports and games are always a good test of a person's true character. Q. What should a girl do if her family cannot afford an elaborate wedding? A. She can plan a very simple ceremony in her own church, and invite only relatives and a few close friends. Q. Where should the hostess seat her two most important male guests at a formal dinner? A. On each side of herself.

TUNA-ASPARAGUS CASSEROLE

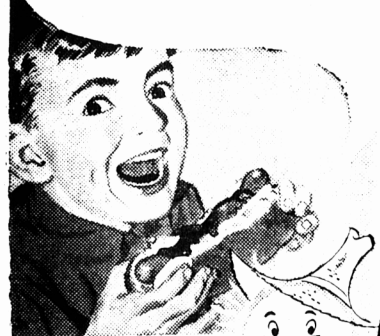

The combination of foods we use in this simple casserole result in a dish which I feel many of you, after a private trial, will use for guest occasions, too. When you haven't the potato chips at hand or want to be more economical, you can use crumbs mixed with melted butter or margarine for the topping.

Yield—6 servings. 1 pound asparagus. 3 tablespoons butter or margarine. 2 tablespoons corn starch. 1/2 teaspoon salt. 1/4 teaspoon pepper. 2 1/2 cups milk. 1 cup cooked rice. 1 can (7 ounces) tuna fish, drained and flaked. Potato chips.

- 1. What is wrong with this sentence: "The theater is a long ways from here, and I hear that it is filled to capacity." 2. What is the correct pronunciation of "colloidal"? 3. Which one of these words is misspelled: Forfeit, focussing, forsee, frieze? 4. What does the word "coterie" mean? 5. What is a word beginning with ad that means "sufficient"?

ANSWERS

- 1. Say, "is a long way from here," and omit "to capacity," which is redundant. 2. Pronounce the o as in rob, not as in robe. 3. Forsee. 4. A group of persons who meet familiarly, as for social purposes. We four formed a little coterie in the household. 5. Adequate.

That Body Of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

NEW SUBSTANCE ENABLING PHYSICIAN TO STUDY CONDITION OF GALL BLADDER

When the physician suspects liver and gall bladder disturbances in a patient, the patient is usually given a substance that, under X-ray, will show the outline of the gall bladder and sometimes the outline also of the bile ducts emptying into the gall bladder and small intestine. The substance used to show up gall bladder and tubes is called the contrast medium. For some unexplained reason, the contrast medium does not show a clear outline of gall bladder and tubes in one dose must be used, much to the discomfort of the patient, the physician, and the radiologist (X-ray physician).

That a more satisfactory contrast, telepaque, is now available, is stated by Dr. W. H. Sheiagh, in the American Journal of Roentgenology and Radium Therapy, Springfield, Illinois, which gives improved visualization of gall bladder and visualization of bile ducts. Observations on 310 patients in whom this new contrast medium was used revealed a very small number of reactions resulting from the medium, rapid absorption of the medium, prompt response of the gall bladder to a fat meal, rapid removal of the medium from the body and improved visualization of the gall bladder.

When telepaque is used, visualization of the bile ducts occurs often enough to make this a convenient procedure by which the ducts can be studied. The bile ducts are visualized in their natural and undisturbed state and not under the influence of a drug which causes spasms of the opening of lower end of the gall bladder. Thus non-surgical or giving contrast medium (telepaque) by mouth may replace surgical or operative method of obtaining the actual condition of the gall bladder and bile ducts. Telepaque is prepared in 15 gm. tablets, six tablets being dispensed in a single dose.

Of the 310 patients studied, 250 received six tablets and 60 received 12 tablets. The use of smaller doses is being studied. With 12 tablets the gall bladder shadow is denser and the ducts show up better, but with the ordinary routine studies, this large dose is not required except possibly in very fat patients. This new contrast medium should be of great help to the radiologist as it enables him to give a more accurate description of the gall bladder and ducts so that the physician and the surgeon will know what to expect should operation be found necessary.

Married In Montreal

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH COMITINI

The wedding of Eleanor, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Hynes, Charlottetown, to Mr. Joseph Comitini, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Comitini of Montreal, took place at eight o'clock on April 25th.

The nuptial Mass and double ring ceremony was performed by the Reverend Father G. Sutton of Holy Family Church, Montreal. Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Rene Boudard, the bride wore a cocktail length gown of white net and French lace, with fitted bodice and a skirt of several layers of net. On top, she wore a cape of white lace—the finger tip veil was held by an Elizabethan cap; she carried a bouquet of white lilies. Mrs. R. Harden, (formerly Miss Eileen Power of Charlottetown), was matron of honour. She also wore a cocktail gown of sky blue net with fitted bodice and full skirt. She wore a bandeau of flowers and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mr. John Comitini acted as best man for his brother, while the ushers were Mr. S. Whitton and Mr. R. Harden.

A reception was later held for a large number of guests at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Rene Boudard. The couple later left for their honeymoon in the Laurentian Mountains.

The out-of-town guests included Mrs. L. A. Hynes, mother of the bride, and Master Brian Reid of Charlottetown. Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Marneau of Val d'or, Que.; sister and brother-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Bernice Reid, sister of the bride, from Toronto.

Girl Believes Man Separated From Wife Should Get Divorce

DEAR MISS DIX: Several months ago I met a young man whose wife had left him, taking all their money and everything she could lay her hands on. The young man and I have grown to love each other, but he does nothing about trying to obtain his freedom. I think that if he wanted to begin life over again, he should sue for divorce. My family is moving to another city in a few weeks, and this young man doesn't want me to go with them. Do you think I should stay here, or go with my family? The man is 30, I am 24.

IRENE L. ANSWER: Your young man may be in love with you, or he may simply be clinging to you in a time of emotional stress. He hasn't been separated from his wife long enough to make an adjustment, and I think you are rather trying to force him to make a decision he isn't ready for, if he wants to make it at all.

SHOULD SETTLE MARITAL MIXUP

Staying in the city with him, especially while you are in the vulnerable position of being separated from your family, would be most unwise. If he cares for you, he most certainly would take steps to straighten out his matrimonial problems, either by obtaining a divorce, or insisting upon his wife taking such a step.

Don't overlook the possibility that he may be hoping for her return. In that case you are merely acting as a temporary companion—a most unrewarding position. Leave with your family, and if he cares enough, he'll do something definite about his personal affairs.

DEAR MISS DIX: The majority of divorces are brought about through selfishness. Too many couples prefer to remain childless, while others have to support five or more children. I think childless couples should be compelled to take one or more children from orphanages.

MRS. L. ANSWER: I can think of no worse fate for a child than to be forced upon unwilling foster parents. Apparently you aren't too well acquainted with adoption laws, which insist upon every precaution that people who adopt a child are eager to have the youngster. There's no doubting your statement that most divorces are caused through selfishness, but forcing responsibility upon people is not the cure.

DEAR MISS DIX: The other night my husband and I went to Continued on Page 3

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

At these farms, we have reached that "bitter-sweet" time of year when one of our farmers may observe, over his porridge, it may be, or over a smoke at the close of day: "Reckon we should be thinking of selling those cattle"—this of the fat ones, stabled while their kith and kindred have been turned to pasture; those of which James or one of the sons will make comment, "They should make gains... they never missed a meal in their lives!"

"Jam-es, Jam-es!" we have sometimes called to him desperately at Alderlea, our indignation warmer than the dinner awaiting his pleasure.

Back across the barnyard would come a hollow echo: "I'll be there shortly, Ellen"—whenever I've finished giving these cattle theirs! And so in season of sale, which may or may not be extended due to such incidents as "They're making fair-good gains now," or a "We'll bide our time and see how the markets go," to their later satisfaction or regret, potential buyers appear. By this, these men are easily recognized by the Grandchildren because among others, their names have become household words.

"Who was that?" a grandchild will repeat our query of a car easing down the laneway, his tone one of amazement. "Don't you know that was... he buys for...!"

So we suppose that when a pair of these gentlemen visited Alderlea today, where at the time Mack, the past-three fellow, was the only man about the buildings, their appearance was hailed by him pleasurably. He later related his initial experience in salesmanship to his father.

"I showed them the cattle," he recalled. "And I said something and they both laughed."

"What did you say?" his father was curious.

"I said, 'They're talking about selling... but I don't know how much they want for them!'"

As did lads of generation before him, the younger fellow of this place caught delightful rides on the old seeder this afternoon at the first of the sowing. Again, though "not so young as I used to be," and yet amazingly youthful, despite his gray hairs, it was James himself who took up this endeavor. He preferred to use a team instead of the tractor—the pair which ordinarily "live the life of Reilly" at this place, and another.

"And which was the best?" It was Jamie, not much interested in horses as a rule, who put the question tonight when the dark had gathered the family indoors.

"I wouldn't like to say," James replied with a smile. "But it's pretty hard to beat the Nell-mare at a chore like that!"

What a charm! There is to the rite as James performs it! Guiding his team along the red of the field; watching the putput that no subsequent telltale omissions may appear; pausing for replenishment of seed; scanning a handful to be satisfied that it is to his required standard... altogether steward of the soil—good servant of a Master-sower, who in unbelievably strange fashion and places, tucks seeds of affection and kindness and "Rosemary for remembrance" in the versatile earth of folks' hearts.

The Stars Say --

By Genevieve Kemble

For Tomorrow

THIS day should bring many pleasant surprises, not the least of which is the sudden release from nervous tension engendered by the seeming monotony of life during the past few days. In fact, practically anything you may attempt this day should reach successful conclusion and you may now begin, safely, to make new plans or initiate new projects affecting your future.

A stranger you may meet during this period could become a loyal and inspiring friend in the months and years to come, and there is also a possibility of good news arriving from a great distance. Romance, courtship and social activities are under particularly beneficent aspect.

For the Birthday

If tomorrow is your birthday, the year ahead should be an especially propitious one, particularly if you are engaged in a business or profession where original and imaginative ideas count. The stars favor the creative, and those engaged in the arts and sciences should achieve spectacular success.

Early Fall should find a betterment in your financial status, and there are indications of a possible windfall where monetary matters are concerned. Travel is favored and you should have some unusually interesting and stimulating experiences through social contacts.

A child born on this day will be imaginative, creative and romantically ardent.

CHEESE CORNMEAL FINGERS

Mix and sift into bowl, 1 1/2 c. once-sifted pastry flour (or 1 1/2 c. once-sifted hard-wheat flour), 3 tps. Magic Baking Powder, 3/4 tsp. salt. Cut in finely 3 tbs. chilled shortening and mix in 3/4 c. yellow-cornmeal, 3/4 c. shredded cheese and 2 tbs. chopped parsley. Make a well in centre, pour in 3/4 c. milk and mix lightly with a fork. Knead for 10 seconds on a lightly-floured board and roll out to 3/8" thick rectangle; cut into 12 fingers and arrange, slightly apart, on greased baking sheet. Bake in hot oven, 425°, about 15 mins. Serve hot with butter or margarine. Yield—1 dozen fingers.
