Landon Boom Is No "Accident"; It's Masterpiece Of Planning

Candidacy Built Up With Care by His Loyal Friends

By WILLIS THORNTON

CLEVELAND, June 12-From little known prairie state politician to a front seat on one of the grandest convention band-wagons, of recent times all in one year.

That's the success story of Alf Landon of Kansas. Like many things which seem to have "just happened," the Landon boom didn't "just happen" at all. There was good, solid powder in it, but don't think the priming wasn't carefully adjusted, the fuse nicely set, and the match assiduously applied.

Two years ago, newspaper readers noted a small paragraph in the political news, to the effect that Kansas had re-elected a Republican governor, H'm! No! only elected in 1932, but the only Republican governor to be re-elected, amid the 1934 Democratic landslide! H'm! Oh, well, Kansas always was naturally Republican, wasn't it?

WHO IS THIS LANDON?

The modest suggestion by a Kansas City paper at that time, that this made Landon a Republican presidential possibility, caused practically not even a mild ripple. Landon? Landon?

So the winter of 1934-5 slid by, with never a further mention of Landon except by an occasional correspondent, desperate for a "political dope story," who noted that Landon was the only Republican governor who looked like campaign material at all. The country let Landon lapse back into what Grover Cleveland became famous for calling, innocuous desuetude.

But a certain group of Kansas City friends of the governor, mostly newspapermen, did not forget. Roy Roberts, a managing editor of Landon, and... Star political expert, were prominent among them.

They never quite let the Landon idea die in their own paper. They had friends throughout the country. Roberts had been a widely known Washington correspondent.

LANDON ACQUIRES MANAGER

In the meantime, Landon had pulled off a little coup of his own which strengthened his home defenses. When Landon was breaking into politics as campaign manager for the liberal Clyde Reed, the opposing manager for the conservative group was one John Hamilton of Topeka, a good-looking young law teacher and legislator.

This rivalry between Landon and Hamilton continued after Reed's election as governor, and Hamilton even prevented Landon's election as precinct committeeman in one contest. But shortly after Landon's first election as governor, David Mulvane, veteran national "filibuster," died, and Landon was big enough, or fony enough, as you choose, to name his old rival Hamilton as national committeeman. The breach was healed, and Kan-additional camp equipment were discussed. It was decided to have moving pictures of the Akela training camp taken.

Field Commissioner W. Warren has been appointed Camp Chief for the Provincial Camp. He will have associated with him Mr. R. C. Parent, Mr. F. A. Driscoll and other leaders yet to be selected.

Scoutmasters, throughout the Province, who intend sending boys of their troops to the Provincial Camp, are again urged to notify Provincial Secretary R. C. Parent without delay.

The list of Summerside leaders passing the District Preliminary Training Course has not been received.

Group committees might be of great assistance by arranging transportation for their own Scouts to and from Camp.

Don't forget to take a pencil and a good-sized note book to camp.

As there will be various games played, and a training hike every day during camp, the following suggestions are made for the information of all concerned-

- 1. Close and fasten gates behind you. 2. Do nothing to disturb cattle in pastures. 3. Avoid crossing cultivated fields. 4. If a fence has to be climbed, do so one at a time. A broken fence may mean a serious financial loss to the owner of the property. 5. A scout never destroys a living tree.

Let us all work together in order to make the 1936 Boy Scout Camps the best yet. The more you put into the camp, the more you will get out of it.

-GREY WOLF.

KEEP BALL ROLLING

By this time, magazine and newspaper special writers were beginning to hit the Kansas trail. All the inner Landon council will deny that they were directly solicited, but there undoubtedly were a few personal strings pulled.

It was still all talk. Not a shadow of organization beyond this personal but incessant activity of friends. They had never stopped writing to everyone they could think of, inside and outside the state.

On Oct. 1, 1935, Oscar Stauffer, publisher of a chain of Kansas and Missouri papers, called a meeting in a Kansas City club of Kansas publishers, 90 per cent of whom are Republican. Prominent were Fred Harris, an Ottawa lawyer; Jack Harris and Fred Brinkerhoff of Hutchinson and Pittsburgh; Robert, Haynes, and others.

Stauffer was chosen to head an active committee for Landon. It started work Oct. 15, sending out letters and literature, mostly reprints of newspaper articles, in response to inquiries.

No contributions of more than $500 were accepted at first, and Stauffer for months used the letterhead of his own paper, the Arkansas City Traveler. A booklet, "Kansas, Example of Good Government," was printed.

"WAIT FOR THE BREAKS" The Landon backers wrote letters incessantly to friends in other states, former Kansans in positions of influence in far cities. The bandwagon began to roll of its own momentum.

Thus Stauffer and his fellow Landon backers were able to devise a strategy that fitted nicely with the governor's own inclinations. It was "sit back, say as little as possible, and wait for the breaks."

An ostentatious visitation by Hearst and a party of allies to meet Landon at Topeka was considered "a mixed blessing" by the Landon friends, but it did add to the Landon publicity.

A women's division of the Landon committee under Mrs. E. C. Little, widow of a congressman, later to appear at the convention as delegate-at-large, was chosen. W. T. Gran, head of the Businessmen's Assurance Co. of Kansas City, became treasurer, to handle mounting contributions.

The boom was assured. There remained only the strategy of keeping Landon's name out of the primary fights in even nearby states. The Landon candidacy arrived at Cleveland full-groomed and 10 months ahead of that of any other starter.

The fact that it was all done in one year leaves gasping the partisans of candidates who have been half a lifetime in public service. It is the sensation of a sensational political year.
