

Webster's appeal thrown out

by DANIEL LARONDE

Fifty-one year old A. Gary Webster of St. Peter's Bay, charged with sexual offenses, has failed in his attempt to have these charges thrown out of PEI Provincial Court.

Webster, a Political Science professor at the time the offenses allegedly took place, formerly charged with giving marijuana to a minor, (also under appeal), is fighting charges of gross indecency, buggery, and indecent assault against victims only known by their initials. These offenses happened over a period of 1 - 9 years, alleging that oral sex, attempted sodomy and masturbation had taken place.

Webster has filed three other appeals, one to the PEI Provincial Court, another to the PEI Supreme Court and a third to the appeals section of the PEI Supreme Court. The appeal most recently denied was filed to the Supreme Court of Canada, in which the denial would make way for the charges to be heard in the Provincial Court.

Webster's lawyer argued to the Provincial Court that the Criminal Code was violated when police "information" did not meet criteria set by the Criminal Code of Canada. This information had failed to include data for Webster to be informed of the charges against him.

In the Supreme Court of Canada, in Ottawa, Webster's lawyer stated that the appeal heard by the PEI Supreme Court appeals section was thrown out and that they erred in doing so. The appeal was denied. ■

Imaginus reviewed

by CHRIS

Each year, right after Remembrance Day, our campus is visited by Clint Eastwood, Marilyn Monroe, Einstein, the Blues Brothers, and even Jesus. What is this you ask? This is the Imaginus company who travel across Canada, stopping at universities to sell art work. Imaginus is only too short. They know there is a lot of disposable income to be spent at universities.

The artwork comes in the form of prints which range in price from six to about forty-five dollars apiece. Of course, with any event there is good taste and bad taste. I believe that the vast majority of the art is in good taste though there is some art which is bad and doesn't belong next to the good stuff. For instance an uninspired photograph of Robert Plant resembling a monkey in jeans along with a barely visible Jimmy Page just does not fit in with scenic orator art work or humorous closeups of a man who really has made contributions, Einstein.

Another irritation I felt was that there were far too many pictures of Jim Morrison. I think Jim is okay, but do we need to have twelve prints of Jim Morrison? Have these people heard of overkill?

Besides, Bob Dylan deserves more credit than Morrison.

Some of my favourite prints were the kitten in the fish bowl, Clint Eastwood "Revolver", the picture perfect wolf photos, and any of the five Einstein photos.

There were so many prints, that if I were there alone, which would never happen because Imaginus is so popular, it would still take over an hour to view every print available.

In conclusion, I am pleased with the art Imaginus has for sale each year; however, I would like to see more sports photos, and maybe a reduction in some of the rock and roll prints. ■
