CABINET MINISTERS Continued from page 1 conditions for the kind of co-operation which goes beyond the present emergency," he said.

Mr. Claxton outlined what NATO had accomplished. It had been faced with a tremendous task, and had succeeded "a miracle of achievement in international co-operation."

The 14 sovereign states had set up staffs on an international basis, worked out standard communications systems and battle procedure trained the various forces to work and fight together, establish a great system of military training areas and set up more than 100 airfields in Europe.

Canada now had fulfilled her commitments of 12 squadrons of Sabre jet fighters, the First Canadian Infantry Brigade, and 36 ships committed to NATO.

"There is nothing second-rate about our NATO forces and every Canadian can be proud of our contribution on sea, land, and in the air."

Warden Claims Canadian Caribou Will Continue To Survive

By STEWART MACLEOD Canadian Press Staff Writer ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., (CP)—Newfoundland's chief game warden says caribou herds can roam the barren wilds of this Province "forever—with a decent bit of management on our part."

H. W. Walters, the chief warden, believes that although it is true the animals cannot live near civilization, the Province still has and will have—enough virgin territory to support sufficient herds.

He says conservation plays only a minor part in the future of the herds with annual legal kills destroying only about 300 animals. There are an estimated 25,000 caribou in the Province.

"Although surveys have never indicated any great increase in the herds, there hasn't been any decrease."

Handsome Animal The stately Newfoundland caribou, said to be the most handsome species in North America, became an unofficial emblem of the Province during the First World War when the Newfoundland Regiment wore caribou badges.

Since then the animal has been the standard identification mark of the Province and appears on the covers of many Newfoundland books. And although there is speculation that the pitcher plant might become the official emblem of the Province, there is little danger of the caribou losing its letterhead prestige.

Although about 10 times as many moose are shot each year, the caribou is a more popular target, especially by non-resident hunters. But Mr. Walters says there are many reasons why more moose are killed.

Sometimes hunters take a week to get in and out of real caribou country, while moose can be shot within walking distance of a paved highway. Besides this, he says, most Newfoundlanders are after meat when they go hunting and the moose carry about three times as much as caribou. So, he concludes, the hunter who bags a moose might get three times as much meat in one-third the time for the same priced licence. The moose population is estimated at 35,000.

Diets Differ Moose, unlike caribou, thrive in second growth timber and many herds can be found at former logging sites of paper companies.

They pull their food from shrubs, bushes and berries. Caribou eat only moss of barren-type land and as soon as a woodsman moves into an area, caribou move out.

In some inland parts of the Province where caribou are plentiful, two seasons are opened each year, Sept. 5 to Oct. 10, and Dec. 1 to 31. In other areas, where the government is trying to protect small herds, caribou can be shot only during the early season.

Licence fees for residents are $25 for the early season and $10 for the late. This entitles the hunter to one animal. For non-residents the fee for one caribou is $35 for either season.

Call Off Search For Missing Boy SOREL, Que., (CP)—Police reported Sunday that the search for missing five-year-old Guy Tremblay was called off Saturday night after the area was scoured for four days without a "single definite clue" being found.

A large group of searchers, including an RCMP corporal and a specially-trained dog brought from Moncton, N. B., combed the vicinity of the boy's home and the watering hole of the Sorel Yacht Club without success.

The child disappeared from his home Wednesday and was last reported seen hanging on the back bumper of a Montreal-bound truck.

Police chief Albert Tangay said he believes the youngster drowned in the basin of the Yacht Club.

IN MEMORIAM In loving memory of Earl S. Reeves, Summerside, who passed away April 5th, 1951.

Eisenhower May Touch On H-Bomb Issues Today

By ROGER D. GREENE WASHINGTON, (AP)—Question marks as big and awesome as the great frell blast of the H-bomb itself confronted President Eisenhower's administration today as the world still gasped at a week of atomic sensations.

The questions are these: Now that the atomic arms race has already produced hydrogen bombs of such fearful potency, what will the future bring in the form of even more dreadful weapons? And what can be done to make sure the world will never be engulfed in an atomic war?

It is possible President Eisenhower may touch on these issues when he delivers a national radio and television address Monday night at 8:30 p.m. EST on various "concerns" of the American people.

Admiral Lewis L. Strauss, chairman of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, already has moved to answer a question bothering some jittery folk.

"They wonder whether it is possible, either by intent or by accident, for a hydrogen bomb to trigger a chain reaction that might set the world's crust or atmosphere afire and result in an end-of-the-world cataclysm."

Impossible Strauss said that scientists had informed him such a thing was impossible.

All last week, the atomic tomtoms drummed out headlines that heightened an already severe case of H-bomb uneasiness in Britain and left many Americans a little queasy but generally calm.

Eden Calls For Speeded German Rearmament LONDON, (CP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden Sunday hailed the fifth anniversary of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's founding with a call for speeded German rearmament.

The British leader's message was one of strong statements paying tribute to NATO's accomplishments—but stressing the need for further development of the West's nations' defence framework.

"If we can now look with more confidence to the future, this is the measure of NATO's success," Eden said. But he added: "Much remains to be done."

Island Odds And Ends The Charlottetown City Council has approved a wage increase for city laborers from seventy to seventy five cents an hour. Since it has been customary to accept the Council's rate as the prevailing rate all over the city, this action will probably result in pay increases for a large number of workers.

For instance the Dominion Government when it lets a contract in this city specify that the contractor must pay the prevailing labor rate, this will apply when the new Federal building is being built. But the effect of the order is even more far-reaching. It has always been recognized that when unskilled wages go up, skilled labor must receive more to preserve a fair ratio.

It can be expected, then, in view of this distinction between the laborer and the skilled tradesman, that carpenters, plumbers, and electricians, will be in line for equivalent increases.

At present local carpenters are receiving from ninety cents to a dollar an hour and in exceptional cases as high as one dollar and a quarter an hour.

The rate being sought by the newly-formed Charlottetown Union is said to be one dollar and a quarter, and because of the City Council's wage hike this figure is almost certain to meet with approval.

When the late Senator J. Walter Jones was trying to convince the authorities that a Wood Islands-Cariboo ferry service could, and should be started, he had a rocky road, not only in Ottawa but here at home.

Many business men regarded the proposal as visionary, in some quarters it met ridicule, and apathy and lack of interest was general. The Hon. Dr. J. MacKinnon was its seconder, and its most active supporter. For more than a year the voice of the late Senator was that of one crying in the wilderness. Travelling back and forth from Ottawa at his own expense, and between times urging the project to Islanders when opportunity offered, he overcame in the end, all obstacles.

His victory however was only complete when he arranged for the Minister of Finance to come to the Island, to consider the idea at first hand. Mr. Dunning came so quickly that the plan was good and gave it his blessing, which as Minister of Finance and the sitting member for Queens, was a guarantee that the service would be a certainty.

Considering that the late Senator was only a private member of the Island Legislature at that time with no prestige other than that which his own talents, initiative and drive bestowed upon him he had his success in having the Wood Islands-Cariboo service established was a minor miracle.

When, as now seems probable, a new boat is built for this service which will more appropriately name could be found for the ship than the "J. Walter Jones". But for the late Senator she would probably never have been heard of.

Some fears are being expressed that when the new causeway is built at North River, the trout fishing may be spoiled at Milton, and farther up the river. But surely it is not beyond the capabilities of our engineers to so construct the new crossing as to allow the trout easy access to their old haunts and spawning grounds. The Fish and Game Association might very well consider consulting with the proper people, to see what safeguards are being taken to preserve the upper section of the river for the large number of fishermen who find relaxation there each summer.

Former Member Of Parliament Dies Suddenly

MONTREAL, (CP) — Abraham Albert Heaps, 68, former member of Parliament for Winnipeg North, died suddenly Sunday in Bourne-mouth, England.

His death was reported here by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. David Heaps. He had gone to England Feb. 17 to visit relatives.

Mr. Heaps, a native of Leeds, England who came to Canada in 1911, was one of the West's best-known socialist and union leaders.

He was first elected to Parliament in 1925 as an Independent Labor member. He was re-elected in 1926 and again in 1930.

He joined the CCF party in 1930 and remained that party's representative for Winnipeg North until 1940, when he was defeated by C. E. Booth, a liberal.

Mr. Heaps was one of the men involved in the 1919 general strike that paralyzed business in Winnipeg. At that time he was president of the Winnipeg Upholsters' Union, secretary of the Winnipeg Trades and Labor Council and a member of the city council.

He was charged with seditious conspiracy following the strike but was acquitted.

He is survived by his widow and two sons. His first wife died in 1938.

REDS CLAIM Violation Of Armistice Line TOKYO, (AP) — Peiping radio said Sunday that Korean-Chinese civil police killed one Allied soldier and captured another Saturday night near Panmunjom, Korea.

Presumably the Allied soldiers were South Koreans.

The broadcast said the two were part of a five-man army unit which crossed the military demarcation line over to the Communist side and started an "armed attack" on the civil police at 8:45 p.m.

"This incident constitutes a serious violation of the Korean armistice," the broadcast said.

"One of the men who crossed the military demarcation line was killed by the civil police while another was captured. The rest fled back to the south."

Peiping said Allied and Communist observer teams decided to conduct an on-the-spot investigation Sunday at a point near Magangni about two miles east of Panmunjom.

Peiping said the Allied patrol, which it identified as "a small group of armed personnel of the American side," pushed more than 1,500 feet inside red-controlled territory.

Business Conditions In U. S. Brighter In March

By Walter Breede Jr NEW YORK, (AP) — United States business had more zing in March than in January and February. But it was off from March 1953.

That was the pattern that emerged today from an Associated Press survey of economic trends in 51 major U. S. cities.

Aim of the survey was to size up general business conditions at the grass roots in the month President Eisenhower said would be a crucial one for employment.

This was the broad picture: Unemployment leveling off. Automobile sales up sharply, but inventories still high.

Retail trade picking up more slowly than a year ago partly because of the late Easter.

A developing boom in construction of homes, factories, schools, toll roads, office buildings, utilities and churches.

A pronounced sag in steel production.

Not Unusual By itself, the over-all March improvement was nothing about a March pickup is normal and seasonal for many lines. This year, however, there had been indications that the tempo of business activity might run counter to the established trend. It may have been significant that this did not happen.

The survey covered manufacturers, farmers, auto dealers, labor union chiefs, chamber of commerce officials, federal reserve statisticians, merchants, railroad men and bankers. Most were cautiously optimistic.

The payoff statistics were those on unemployment. They failed to show any substantial rise in many areas the unemployment curve was definitely downward.

In Washington the census bureau reported an increase of 54,000 in unemployment to a four-year
