THE ENGINEER'S BI-WEEKLY

News of the World
(Point LePreau, N.B.)
Spokesmen from the nuclear power plant now under construction at Point LePreau, N.B., have now claimed that nuclear power is clean, efficient, and perfectly safe. They say that nuclear power has been a big coverup all staged by the Alberta government. I.M. Stairile, in charge of Pt LePreau energy sales, says "You see, they (Alberta) don't want nuclear power because it would take away from their oil sales. So they started an international plot, bribing everybody from scientists to politicians, to say that radiation is dangerous. Now that's bull crap! Hell, it's actually good for you. In fact, I'm so sure of it that I take it three times daily and I couldn't be better."

As Mr. Stairile was saying this, his left leg fell off - severed about where the shaft of his femur joins the pelvis. When he had regained his composure, he was asked about the event of a nuclear mishap

"Well, if against all probability that a mishap does happen, everybody should just keep going about like normal. I mean as you know, this radiation doesn't hurt you so don't worry about it. However, a few precautions could be made. For instance, the population of New Brunswick should avoid childbirth for the next 500 years or so. And we've figured that its economically feasible for Atlantic Canada to be missed for the next two million years - think of the jobs we'd create in the clean-up!"

We thank Mr. Stairile for the interview, may he rest in peace for he was found Tuesday drowned in a bathtub full of crude oil. In custody are a group of left-handed mormon speakers presently being interrogated.

You Think It's Love

Pam: Oh! Come on.
Stan: Let me alone.
Pam: It won't take long.
Stan: I won't be able to sleep afterwards.
Pam: I can't sleep now.
Stan: Why do you think of it in the middle of the night?
Pam: Because I'm hot.
Stan: You get hot at the damndest times.
Pam: If you were my lover I wouldn't have to beg.
Stan: If you were my lover you would be a little more considerate!
Pam: You don't love me anymore.
Stan: All right, I'll do it.
Pam: What's the matter, need a flashlight?
Stan: I can't find it.
Pam: Feel around.
Stan: There, satisfied?
Pam: Yes, dear!
Stan: Is it up far enough?
Pam: No, a little further.
Stan: Now go to sleep and next time you want the window open do it yourself.

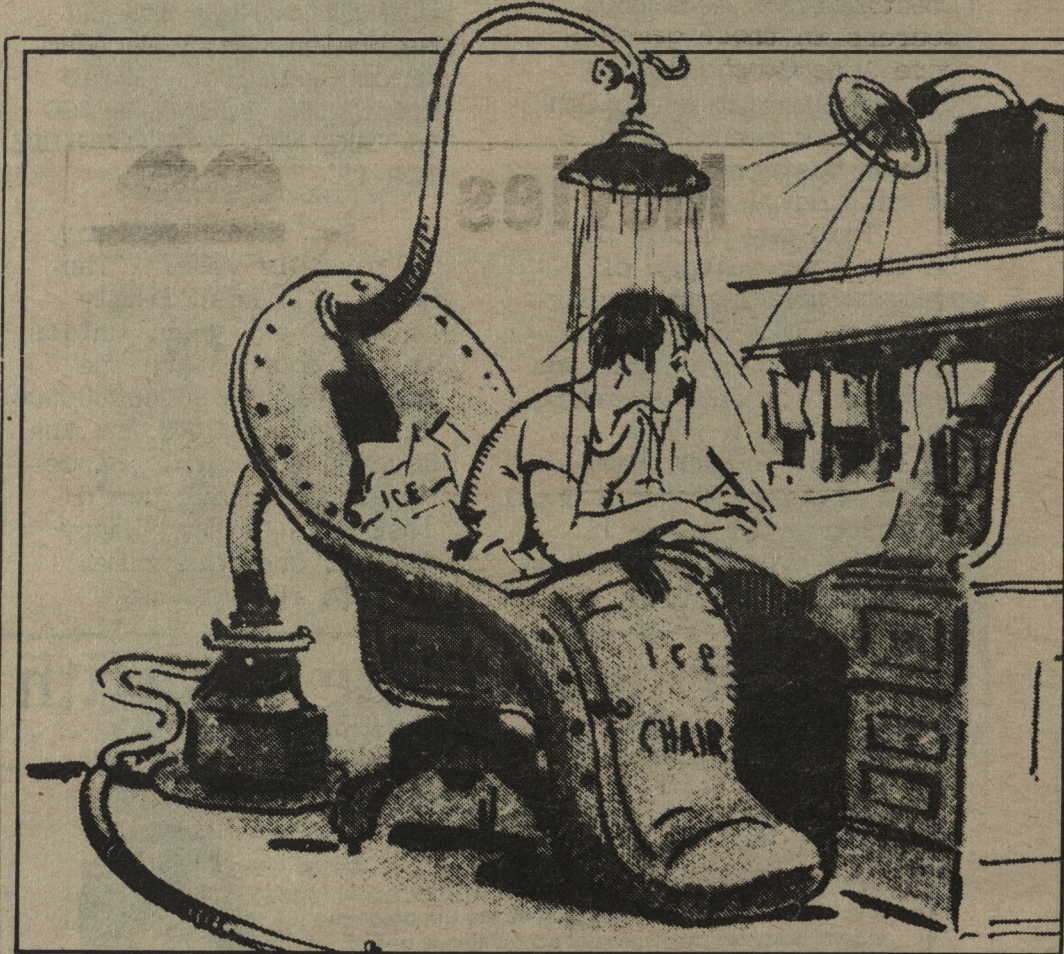

(Local) The group of confectionary store owners were brought to trial today for the selling of alleged pornographic magazines. However, when the evidence was to be displayed, it was no where to be found. Horace Koch, who now walks with a limp, was in charge of the magazines and claims he doesn't know where they went. He won't be able to wait till the evidence is found either for he's going in Saturday to the hospital for the treatment of a severe twitch in his left hand. Horace, just before he went in, said "Even if the twitch isn't cured, it's still good for pounding dough and meat."
