

Funeral Yesterday Of George McCullagh

TORONTO, Aug. 8 (CP)—George McCullagh, who rose from newsboy to publisher of two Toronto daily newspapers and died Tuesday at 47 was buried today.

His funeral, attended by hundreds of persons, contrasted in its simplicity with the colorful career of the publisher of the Telegram and the Globe and Mail.

An old friend of Mr. McCullagh, Archbishop R. J. Rensson, conducted the service. There was no eulogy or sermon. Mourners who found places in the crowded-up town church—hundreds were turned away—heard the formal service for the burial of the dead as contained in the Anglican Book of Common Prayer.

After the half-hour service, the cortege moved off slowly in the sunshine to Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Active pallbearers were John Bassett, Jr., Ralph Blackmore, Charles F. W. Burda, Hal J. Godwin, Dr. James P. Grant, Harry G. Kimber, John C. Laidlaw, Donald A. Macintosh and J. Matland Macintosh.

Honorary pallbearers were: John Bassett, Sr., Hon. Herbert A. Bruce, A. W. J. Buckland, C. L. Burton, Oakley Dalgleish, George A. Drew, James S. Duncan, John David Eaton, Dr. Ray F. Farquharson, Premier Frost, Allan Holmes, Wellington J. H. MacBrien, James W. Murdoch, W. B. Phillips, A. Harry Squin, Sidney E. Smith, Conn Smythe, Dr. Joseph A. Sullivan, E. P. Taylor, John S. D. Tory and Norman C. Urquhart.

P.E.I. Registers 887 Blood Donors

When the Mobile Team packed its vehicles for the tenth time last night after completing ten clinics throughout the province during the past five days, they registered 887 donors. This was a fairly satisfactory result, and had the response been a little better during the earlier part of the week the province might have had a larger number to its credit.

The team leaves this morning on return to Halifax after having had quite a strenuous week and will return again to the province during the first week of November for further clinics.

Fire Marshal Stresses Value Of Precautions

"An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure," was emphasized by Mr. T. A. Campbell, Provincial Fire Marshal, in discussing the overall picture of preventable fires in the city and province.

"A loss of $92,764.50 due to fires since January first of this year, with an insurance out-payment of $74,416.00, while considerably less than during a similar period last year, leaves much to be desired.

"The fire waste problem is a continued challenge to spread fire protection and fire prevention education to the best of our ability," Mr. Campbell added. "Each year an appalling waste of life and property is caused by fire due in most part to carelessness or ignorance of fire safety methods. This education should begin with the very young in the home and later in the school, so that fire prevention habits be firmly established in the minds of our youth in order that the devastating results of fire may be well understood early in life.

"No difficulty should be experienced in engaging the interest of school teachers and trustees in a programme of this kind, which would develop an alertness in the home and on the farm that would become second nature to the young people, in observing possible sources of fire.

"Although frequent fire drills are a matter of routine in our inspection throughout the province," continued Mr. Campbell, "I feel very strongly that anyone aspiring to the teaching profession should become well versed in the techniques of fire prevention as part of their education."

Co-operation Essential Fire chiefs in the smaller towns and rural areas can help very materially in the campaign for fire prevention. It has long been an accepted idea that a fireman's responsibility to the community is to put fires out when they happen.

However, the conviction is needed that it is equally important to prevent fires from happening.

Some fire fighting equipment should be available on every farm, Mr. Campbell said. In the absence of pressure water supply, fire extinguishers or water buckets may be effective in stopping a fire at its beginning. Safe chimneys in all buildings eliminate the risk of fire from defective chimneys, and non-combustible roofing material such as asbestos shingles or asphalt, are all important as a protection against sparks. Electrical installations unless the wiring is safe and adequate. Precautions should be taken against overloading or deterioration through long use or weathering. All wiring should be done by a fully qualified electrician. It is false economy to have such work done otherwise.

Gasoline, kerosene and other petroleum products top the loss of lives by fire on farms throughout Canada. In this Province eighteen months ago two lives were lost and a home entirely destroyed as a result of a smouldering kitchen stove fire. Matches are especially dangerous in the hands of children, and should be kept in a glass or metal container, well out of their reach.

The loss from careless smokers is extremely high, and is responsible for many fires in homes as well as in forests and fields. Throwing away lighted cigarettes or cigars in addition to matches, should be safeguarded against by every intelligent adult as a matter of routine.

Highly Dangerous There is no known agent that will extinguish a fire in a large quantity of liquid petroleum gas. Fires of this type are practically impossible to blanket. Such fuel, when kept in its own container, under specified pressure, presents no problem, but if the liquid is spilled, or otherwise released, to the air rapidly, or in quantity, it can become a fire hazard, but only after it has become a gas and mixed with air in the correct proportions to burn.

Fire extinguishers are effective for a few minutes when used in a confined space such as a closed room. Experience however, leads to the conviction that for flexibility, prompt and effective use in case of a farm fire, a stirrup pump, supplied from a barrel or two of water near the house and barns is best as long as water is available, and the pump kept in operation, a thirty-five foot lift of water can be very effective if started immediately.

A tightening up of the regulations designed to prevent fires in Prince Edward Island became effective by order-in-council two weeks ago. Plans for new buildings or to remodel old buildings, must in future be submitted to the Fire Marshal for his approval, showing exits, fire escapes and other fire protection and preventive measures. The Fire Marshal or his deputies may also stop highway traffic, in the vicinity of a fire, do any necessary act for the protection of fire hose and equipment and require persons other than firemen to assist in extinguishing a fire.

The International Convention of Fire Chiefs takes place in Boston August 26, 27 and 28 followed by the Dominion Convention closely after at St. John, from Sept. 1 to 4.

Heavy Traffic At Ferry Terminals

The heavy summer ferry traffic created by visitors to the Province returning to their homes prior to the Old Home Week was illustrated yesterday morning when the services at both Wood Islands and Borden were jammed.

At Wood Islands when the ship left the dock at 9 o'clock for the second sailing of the morning there were 41 vehicles left waiting on the pier. This was despite the fact that the boat crews had worked until late in the evening before with the Prince Nova only docking at 10 o'clock on her last run. Yesterday and from now on the Nova and the Charles A. Dunning will simply operate a "shuttle service" without regard to regular schedules in order to permit cleaning up the traffic.

Conditions were almost the same at Borden yesterday morning when over 30 vehicles were left on the pier at the 9:10 sailing. It was said that cars are left there at each sailing, but after 6 o'clock each night they are cleared up.

Will Require Continued from page 1 original amount of the debts was not reduced in most cases.

Allowance was made for the fact Germany is divided. Negotiations for the payment of debts owed by East German institutions and private individuals will not, in most cases, be attempted until after Germany is reunited.

The repayment is in part a commission composed of British, U. S. and French Government experts.

The plan was drafted and approved mainly by delegates of private creditors such as the American Foreign Bondholders Protective Council.

In return for West Germany's agreement to pay off the pre-war debts, Britain, U. S. and France agreed to scale down the amount of money owed by West Germany for post-war aid.

In a further concession, the U. S. today offered West Germany a five-year breathing spell before it starts repaying the government aid bill.

This would mean that West Germany would not have to start paying off the $1,200,000,000 she has received in U. S. aid until 1957. She would have 30 years to finish paying.
