Big Crowd Enjoys Battista Concert

Thrilled by the consummate artistry that has won him exceptional acclaim on three continents, a capacity house appeared overawed and entranced by the musical fare presented at Prince of Wales College auditorium last night by pianist Joseph Battista.

Major offerings of the American-born, American-trained artist were the fiery, impetuous Sonata in G Minor, Opus 22 by Robert Schumann, and the emotional Ballade in F Major, Opus 38, by Frederic Chopin, both of which were loudly applauded.

Following military service during World War II, Battista made a triumphal return to the concert stage as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Koussevitzky in 1947 at the Berkshire Festival. The following autumn the critics hailed his return in recital in New York's Town Hall.

Since then he has consistently scored in performances throughout the United States, Canada, Mexico and South America.

His most recent New York Town Hall recital appearance in December, 1957, an eminently successful one can be summed up in the words of The New York Times, "a fine recital by one of America's better pianists."

Union Terms

(Continued from page 1) "The suggestion is so simple that we tend to overlook its importance. I remind you that in the early days of his education, man was constantly faced with the possibility of elimination. He could not match his enemies in strength, speed or weapons; he did have intelligence, the key to this survival.

"There are many aspects of our Grave New World that lend themselves more easily to laughter than to serious comment," he said. "The capacity to laugh, particularly at ourselves, would provide a more favourable atmosphere in which to exercise intelligence."

POLICY ABSURD

Dr. Long referred to the scientific, technological, nationalistic and political forces that make this a revolutionary age. "A foreign policy based on making all nations democratic is absurd and dangerous," he said. "Our efforts should be directed towards ways and means of living with people with different ideologies instead of trying to convert them by subversion, economic boycott, or the use of force."

"Since Canada has never had occasion to seek domination of others," he said, "there are none who bear us ill will; and since we have had to fight for independence of Britain and the United States there are many willing to listen to our voice and follow our example. Canada has a golden opportunity to strike a blow against war and in the defence of humanity, an opportunity that should be expressed in the pattern of our foreign policy and in our statements and actions in the international councils."

EXPAND EDUCATION

He offered the suggestion that "if we encourage a movement in the Soviet Union to expand education and their resources for the general well being of their people, we will do more to ease international tensions than through many summit conferences or gestures of defiance."

Dr. Long made the suggestion that we should encourage the passage of tourists, exchange of students and teachers and any other thing which will help to increase understanding between

Red Cross To Press Search For 'O Negative' Blood Types

There are many instances of demand being greater than supply. This is the case with "O Rh. Negative" blood which is the one type of blood which can be given to any person, regardless of their blood type.

On these "emergency" occasions "O Negative" blood is really life-saving, and there have been such instances in Prince Edward Island. In addition, any person who is an O Negative and needs blood transfusion must receive only O Negative blood or there will be serious complications.

With four days of Red Cross blood donor clinics coming up in Charlottetown during the week of April 19th, a concentrated drive is being made to enroll as many O Negatives as possible among the 1500 donors being sought. Six percent of the 1500 required is just 90 - yet 92 (or 10 percent) of the 908 used so far in 1959 have been O Negatives.

The April clinics at Charlottetown will furnish an opportunity for those who know they have O Negative blood to provide this precious life-saving fluid, and for those who do not know their blood type to attend one of the clinics and in this way find out whether their blood might be this very "special" type so much in demand.
