

Armed Forces Ready To Aid Civilians Says Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—The armed forces will stand ready to assist the civil defence organization in any national emergency, Defence Minister Campney said Thursday in a statement.

"In the event of a national emergency under conditions of modern war, the civil defence organization in Canada may require assistance from the armed forces to the extent that this is practical, the armed forces, on request, will assist in the work of civil defence in a war emergency as they do in national disasters from natural causes.

"The armed forces must, of course, be available for their primary role in the defence of Canada under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. They will not, therefore, become a part of the civil defence organization or assume any of its functions, but they will stand ready to provide assistance in an emergency, if called upon by the civil authorities.

"The Canadian Army has been allotted the task of co-ordinating and planning the efforts of the three services in the provision of assistance to the civil defence organization. Liaison officers will be available at each army command throughout Canada to advise and assist the provincial civil defence authorities in planning.

Y's Kids Down Kinsmen 6-4

—The Summerside Y's Kids took over undisputed possession of first place in the Little League by defeating the Kinsmen at the Queen Elizabeth Park diamond last night by the score of 6-4. It was the sixth straight loss without a win for the Kinsmen, but in going down to defeat they showed some of the best fielding for two consecutive innings that has been seen in Little League ball here.

Particularly brilliant was the running catch that Bobby Cook pulled in left field in the fifth inning, and the diving catch of shortstop McInnis in the sixth.

O'Leary Baptist World Alliance Takes Stand For Freedom

LONDON, (AP)—The Baptist World Alliance Thursday unanimously approved a five-point program to combat "the menace to freedom, basic human values, even Christianity itself."

The resolution was submitted and approved at the alliance's jubilee meeting in Albert Hall, attended by some 8,000 delegates from all over the world.

Before considering the resolution the delegates heard the gospel preached by a Russian Baptist minister, Rev. Alexander Karev of Moscow.

The resolution contained these five principles:

1. "That the right to be free is a gift from God to all men of whatever race."
2. "That a man's right to choose or change his faith must be preserved, as well as his liberty to dissent or to make objection because of conscience's sake."
3. "That toleration is not enough. That freedom to worship is not enough. As Baptists we seek not to be tolerated but to be accepted everywhere as equals in Christ with all the privileges and responsibilities of loyal citizens. What we desire for ourselves we would secure for others, both for Christian believers and non-believers."
4. "That real religious liberty guarantees not only freedom to worship privately and publicly, but the right to teach, preach, publish and advocate, openly and honestly."
5. "That our churches must be free from the interference of the state, that all our churches should so far as their principles permit, abide by the laws of the state and loyally co-operate with the civil authorities in helping to create a community in which freedom of the press, speech and assembly and social righteousness, will be assured."

Lef's Talk It Over

Far too many conclusions are arrived at by casual observation instead of by statistical data. We say this by way of apology because we ourselves are about to pursue this amateur method of making a deduction. It has been remarked by a casual observer, in a good position to observe, that children of lower-income families take a larger number of books per capita out of public libraries than do other children. If this be so (we use the subjunctive mood to emphasize that we are not jumping around it and exploring its possibilities), the reason might well be that over-privileged children have so many exciting things to do, they can't bother to sit still and enjoy the rich legacy that all the great men and women of literature have bequeathed to us.

After writing that word, "over-privileged" it occurred to us that we had never used the word before. Everyone talks and worries about under-privileged children, but few give thought to the over-privileged ones, although they probably have the problems more. A lot has been said about reading being a lost art among modern youth, and it is possible reading has been reduced to a "last-ditch" form of recreation, something to do if you have not the means and opportunity of doing more exciting things. If this be so, it is a great pity. It is throwing away the substance for the shadow, as the foolish pooh in the fable did.

Pursuing this argument, which admitted hangs on the flimsy premise of casual observation, we notice that people who are complaining about the lack of reading stimuli for children today are people, for the most part, in the higher-income brackets, whose children, as a rule, presumably have more exciting things to do, more exciting pastimes to take up their attention. This might account for the large volume of censure aimed at the schools. Now someone may come along with a statistical report and knock this theory into a cocked hat. Certainly, by casual observation, it is often a poor judge of whether an individual is "lower-income" or "higher-income" Exhibit "A" may be dressed in fine raiment in an expensive limousine, and be forced to turn up a side street in casual observation, he is a member of his credit company. Exhibit "B" may be a ragged peddler with golden shekels tucked away under a loose board in the floor of his attic. The above theory, however, seems interesting, to us at least.

Three Students To Red Cross Study Centre

—Maureen White of Souris, Ernestine MacDonald of Tignish and James Norton of Summerside have been selected as the three High School students to represent Prince Edward Island at the Canadian-American Junior Red Cross Study Centre at Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario from August 21st-31st. These enthusiastic students are looking forward with keen anticipation to a busy ten days at Kingston.

In all, there will be forty-nine High School students in attendance from Canada, fifty from the United States and one guest each from Japan, Greece, Yugoslavia, Chile, Uruguay, Ecuador and Jamaica.

The purpose of the Study Centre is to promote among the participating girls and boys mutual understanding of their customs and governments of their countries, and to give them a broader knowledge of the aims and programmes of the Red Cross—nationally and internationally. Every effort is being made to provide a programme that will be a challenge and an inspiration to these future leaders.

Parliament Studies Beer Supply For Arctic Cruise

OTTAWA (CP)—A government ship's cruise through the eastern Arctic last summer with 200 dozen cans of beer and 66 cases of liquor was bandied about in the Commons Thursday.

Transport Minister Marler, questioned on the matter, agreed the liquor supply "does seem rather large" but said there were explanatory circumstances. He added that on this year's cruise no liquor was taken along for passengers on the vessel—the Arctic patrol ship C. D. Howe.

"It does seem to promise a rather dry summer," he said.

The issue was one of the lighter topics raised as the Commons made slow progress in a detailed study of transport department estimates—a rate which raised prospects that the present session may set a modern record for lengthiness.

Silver Wedding

—About 40 young men and women of the East Prince Junior Farmers group met at Locke Shore in Sherbrooke last night to hold their first picnic.

Miss Dorothy Peters and Mr. David Bigger of Summerside gave a very interesting demonstration on artificial respiration and before much time elapsed everyone was into the act.

The demonstration indicated that the important thing is to work on the victim as soon as he or she is taken from the water. The same artificial respiration can be used on patients who have received electric shock, they said.

The instructors were thanked by Donnie Beardo.

Swimming, racing, singing, and a picnic lunch were enjoyed later.

The two ladies' races were won by Sadie Chappel, while Major Laughlin of Sherbrooke, and George Riley of Malpeque, each won in the two races for men.

In the match race the winners were George Riley, Major Laughlin, and Bruce Small. Starter was Urban Laughlin, and the judge was Junior Colwell.
