The Duke of Connaught.

"Kosmos," in the London World, thus writes to the Duke of Connaught:—They (the English people) love their princes with an intense affection, and all they ask of them is that they shall exhibit some discretion, and fill to the best of their capacity that place in the national life to which circumstances have summoned them. Each of your brothers have done this with conspicuous success. The Prince of Wales has performed for nearly two decades the social duties of a Regent. The Duke of Edinburgh has connected himself, not only by profession, but by hard work and actual achievement, with the navy. The Duke of Albany has taken the arts of peace into his tutelage. You, sir, selected the army as your calling; you are now likely to have an opportunity of proving to the world that the choice was rightly made. Thus far all that the English people know about you is that you are a young man of agreeable presence, and that you have shirked none of the routine duties of a British officer.
There is little to distinguish you in appearance from a score of other young men who may be seen in the course of a field-day in the Long Valley. You have the same face, bronzed by the sun, the same well-cut features, the same clear eye, that are the distinguishing marks of the healthier branches of Young Aldershot.
You look, indeed, what you are—a smart hussar, who only requires experience in the field to develop into a beau sabreur.
We have all known that you inherited in a special degree from your Royal mother that keen military instinct, in virtue of which Her Majesty is so acute a critic of a review or of a march past; which enables her to tell at a glance whether the general condition of a particular regiment is satisfactory, and to detect anything like imperfect time in the measured tread of the infantry, as the Prince of Wales observes an infringement of Court etiquette, or the ear of the Duke of Edinburgh would resent a false note on a fiddle string. Only the occasion has been wanting, we have all felt, to convince the public that you are no mere carpet-knight. That occasion appears to have arrived.

Making a Show.

The moment a strong desire for social advancement seizes on a man or woman, it commences to undermine the very foundations of character, and great shall be the fall thereof. "To keep up appearances."
"To make a show." One of these senti-ences is only more vulgar than the other.
The important thing is not to appear, but to be. It is true, and pity 'tis, true, that many people are shut out by limited and narrow fortunes from the society to which by right of taste and culture they should belong. But nothing proves more surely that they do not belong there than any attempt to force their way by means of shams. The grass is scarcely yet growing upon that grave in Sleepy Hollow where he lies, who above all men protested against shams, that seer of Concord, whose mantle there is no one left to wear. He deprecated even the too hasty or impetuous seeking of what seems to belong to us. In his immortal essay on "Friendship" he wrote:—

"You shall not come any nearer a man by getting into his house. If unlike, his soul only flees the faster from you, and you shall never catch a true glance of his eye. We see the noble afar off, and they rejoice us; why should we intrude? Late, very late, we perceive that no arrangements, no introductions, no habits of society would be of any avail to establish us in such relations with them as we desire, but solely the uprise of nature in us to the same degree it is in them; then we shall meet as water with water, and if we should not meet them we shall not want them, for we are already they."

In this last sentence, it seems to me, lies the true cure for all unworthy striving after position. If our steady purpose is each one to raise himself, his own mind and spirit, to the highest standard possible for him, he will not only be too busy to pursue shams and shadows, but he will be secure of perpetual good society, since he will be always with himself. I think it must be that the reason so many people dread solitude is that they do not like the undisguised self that confronts them in lonely hours, and shrink from its better acquaintance.

What will it not accomplish? we queried, as we read in an exchange of the cure of a severe felon by St. Jacobs Oil, the great pan-acea for rheumatism. Mr. E. S. Pike, (329 North Third street, St. Louis, Mo.), a prominent Mason and Odd Fellow was the sufferer whose case we read of.

Egyptian War Notes.

ARABI AND THE HIGHLANDERS.

The appearance of the Highland regiments which England is now hurrying up to the front from both sides of Egypt at once, will doubtless be as great a surprise to the Bedouins of Arabi Pasha as to their grandfathers in 1798. When the Highlanders of Sir Ralph Abercromby's army landed at Alexandria in that year, the Arabs of the town, after a wondering survey of the stalwart Celts, ran to announce to their friends the arrival of a host of giants, so huge that the clothes they wore were all too short for them. In the Sepoy mutiny of 1857 the Highland regiments did priceless service both at Lucknow and Cawpore, storming on one occasion a high-walled garden defended by five times their number of Sepoys, and literally annihilating the whole garrison. When Nana Sahib's soldiers first caught sight of the plaids and kilts, they exclaimed joyfully that all the English soldiers must have been killed, and that the Sirkar (Government) had to call out the women.
But after their first taste of a Highland bayonet charge, they abandoned this belief once for all, and fell back upon the theory that these terrible fighters had deliberately adopted the female garb in order to remind them of the wrong which they came to revenge, viz., the massacre of the England ladies by Nana Sahib.

CAIRO AND THE INTERIOR.

There is a report that matters are again becoming troubled at Cairo, and that in the interior villages the lives of Europeans are not safe. Several murders are said to have taken place in the neighborhood of the city, and an Englishman is said to have been killed at Benbah, the station at the junction of the lines from Alexandria to Ismailia.
Arab fanatics are said to have been the murderers.

On dit that the nomination of H. R.
H. the Duke of Connaught to command the brigade of Guards, has not been well received, says the London World. It has been an old established rule that this brigade going on foreign service, should be commanded by the senior officer of the three regiments; and in this instance he is one who saw service with his regiment in the Crimea, and was badly wounded.

To Make Summer Drinks.

To make root beer, take a quantity of sarsaparilla roots and saffras bark, and some hops, and boil till the strength is extracted. To three gallons of the liquor, after it is strained, add one quart of molasses and a quart of yeast. After standing in a warm place eight or ten hours strain again and bottle. It will be fit for use the following day.

For ginger-beer, take one pint of molasses and two spoonfuls of ginger put into a pail to be half filled with boiling water; when well stirred together fill the pail with cold water, leaving room for one pint of yeast, which must not be put in till lukewarm. Place it on the warm hearth for the night, and bottle it in the morning.

For spruce beer, take three pounds of sugar, four gallons of water, one ounce of ginger, a little lemon peel, or essence of lemon, and a little essence of spruce, to give it flavor. Stir all together, warm it a trifle; add a cupful of good yeast.

Mead is made by dissolving one quart of honey in three of boiling water, flavoring it with spice, and adding a portion of ground malt and a piece of toast steeped in yeast, allowing the whole to ferment.

A Sister Songstress.

Sister Agnes Gubert, probably the most noted teacher of vocal music connected with the Roman Catholic sisterhood in this continent, and the possessor of a phenomenal voice, died at St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore, on Monday, after a long illness.
Parepa Rosa, who heard her sing, acknowledged that her voice was the sweetest, she had ever heard. Max Strakosch heard her and so enthusiastic was he that he offered her $50,000 for a season of six months in concert. Bishop Whelan declined to permit her to accept, and she remained at the school, where she devoted her talents to her large classes.
