Jockey Escapes When Horse Drops Dead

MIAMI, Fla., (AP) — Ted Atkinson, one of the leading jockeys in the U. S. escaped injury Friday

The five-year-old Irish-bred horse, owned by A. J. Fralinger, was in front during the first quarter-mile of the six-furlong race, then backed up sharply as if in distress.

He was trailing the field when he went down and Atkinson quickly regained his feet.

The Toronto-born jockey had ridden two winners on this Friday the 13th when Ballinlea went down.

A census taken in 1766 showed Nova Scotia farmers owned 10,836 cattle and 6,972 sheep.
