Spring Fashions For Home Dress-Making

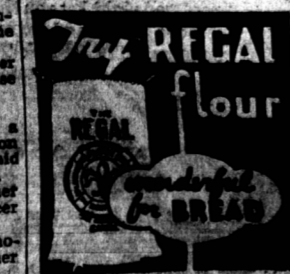

Here's something smart in a new and young shirtmaker frock. It expresses the nautical influence with nautical blue motifs on white ground cotton. Blue lacing right up the front, ties at the boy collar. And what a fascinating affair it is to make and wear. Merely edges to be turned to finish the sleeves. It sounds easy. Doesn't it? A sporty effect may also be achieved with finished with blue bias binds. It's a stunning little dress for vacation week-ends. Tub pastel crepe or shirtings, gay linens, cotton shantung, pique, crash or dotted gyses are other mediums for your choice. Style No. 1795 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18 years, 36, 38 and 40-inches bust. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39-inch material with 3/4 yard of 39-inch contrasting. Price of PATTERN 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

The HOUSEWIFE and HER ACTIVITIES

There are two stones we may not dare to cast: The stone of stumbling in our brother's way, The stone of judgment at our brother's past, We who ourselves like sheep have gone astray. -Hamilton.

BEAUTY
Beauty is a form of Divine speech; it reveals God to man. Nor is God seen alone in the beauty of the natural world, in cloud and mountain, snow and vapor, green forest and spacious sea. Every artist in words or color or sound reveals something of His wisdom and power. The preacher and the theologian may reveal Him too, though sometimes they obscure and pervert His likeness; His ministers are not a close corporation of ordained clergy. Raphael is among them, and Millet, and Burne-Jones. Not only, but Palestrina and Beethoven and Elgar sound His praises. Alike every builder of our stately cathedrals, and every humble workman who with heart and hand creates as best he can the meanest vessel that ministers to man's daily needs, are His artists and fellow-workmen. -F. J. Gillman.

TRUE RELIGION
True religion teaches us to recognize what is under us, to recognize humility, poverty, wretchedness, suffering and death as things divine. -Goethe.

Religion belongs to every day; to the place of business as much as to the church. -H. W. Beecher.

HOPE
Youth is the season of hope, enterprise, and energy, to a nation as well as an individual. -W. R. Williams.

CONSCIENCE
Conscience is that faculty which perceives right and wrong in actions, approves or disapproves them, anticipates their consequences under the moral administration of God, and is thus either the cause of peace or of disquietude of mind. -Rev. S. Conn. D. D.

ATTAINMENT
Our gifts and attainments are not only to be light and warmth in our own dwellings but are also to shine through the windows into the dark night, to guide and cheer bewildered travellers on the road. -H. W. Beecher.

CHARACTER
A good character when established should not be rested in as an end, but only employed as a means of doing still further good. -Atterbury.

A CROOKED STICK
If a crooked stick be crooked you need not explain how crooked it is. Lay a straight one down by the side of it, and the work is well done. Preach the truth, and error will stand abashed in its presence. -Spurgeon.

A crown never cured a headache. Wealth cannot buy a clear conscience. Fears are always more numerous than dangers. Many a man has gone broke by falling over his own bluff. It is what we enjoy, not what we have, that makes us happy. A child sometimes gets on the wrong track because of a misplaced stick. Many a graduate gets through college by writing short stories - to his father. It took the old burlesque queen to discover the difference between gauze and effect. Backbone will never get you anywhere if the knob at the top is made of the same material.

While May-December Marriages Are Not Always Advisable, There Are Rare Occasions Where Youth and Age Can Be Remarkably Happy

Dear Miss Dix - I am 19 years old and am in love with a professional man who is 60. I have known him all my life and loved him from the time I was a small child and have always said that when I was grown I would marry him. I have been going around with him to places ever since I was 16 and he has always been good to me. We have talked over marriage and both our families agree to it, but I am afraid that I am too young and that when I am older I may find a younger man and be sorry for having married him. But that will not happen because he fills my heart as no boy does. When love is this strong and has lasted so long, don't you think we can make a go of it? VENITA.

Answer: Ordinarily I should say that a gap of forty-one years between a husband and wife is too much even for love to span, and that there is small chance of happiness for either one in such an unequal marriage.

But your case in such a very peculiar one that the general objections to a May-and-December wedding do not seem as valid as they are in most cases. Your love for this man so much your senior seems an obsession. For a little child to have fallen in love with a man older than her father and for this love to have grown with her growth and strengthened with her strength, and for her never to have faltered in her determination to marry him is an almost uncanny romance. It is as if we were something predestined, something settled by Fate, and with that one dares not meddle. Evidently you are an old soul, as our theosophical would say, or else youth would call to you instead of age. So, perhaps, your calendar age does not matter.

The danger of an old man marrying a young girl is very real because, as a general thing, they not only have nothing in common but their point of view is antagonistic, and this was never more the case than now when all the traditions, habits, morals and manners by which the older generation was reared have gone into the discard and new ones substituted by the youngsters of today. In your fiancé's youth women were bustles and a dozen petticoats and it was, forward for a girl to show her ankles. Now girls wear shorts. Then no lady smoked, nor drank more than a glass of wine. Now they are human smokestacks and boast of the number of cocktails they can carry. Then no girl worked outside of her home, or walked the streets unattended at night. Now nearly every girl has a job and girls roam the world alone. Then the admired girl was sweet and gentle and innocent. Now she poses as sophisticated. And so on and on.

So it is easy to see why a girl of 19 and a man of 60 may find it hard to adjust themselves to each other. Nothing but a great and miraculous love can do it. DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix - You tell the men that they should be affectionate to their wives. What about wives being affectionate to their husbands? Especially to husbands on the farm who are continually worried with jumping stock, broken fences, lazy hands, etc? A worried man does not think to be as affectionate as he should, so don't you think his wife should meet him with a smile and loving words and help him forget his worries? He would be more in love with her if she would do her part of the love-making, instead of being so silent and hard with him. Also, don't you think that when a husband and wife are separated that they should settle their differences alone without other people interfering? A READER

I agree with you that it is just as important for wives to keep up the courting and love-making after marriage as it is for the husbands to do so. Also I think that the wife who expects her husband to take her affection for granted makes just as big a mistake as the husband does who expects his wife to be mind-reader enough to know that he loves her and thinks her the greatest woman in the world, although he never gives her a kiss that isn't like flabby pancake on her cheek or pays her a compliment. Every man has plenty of things to worry him whether it is jumping stock or a jumping stick market; whether it is broken fences or bankrupt business, whether it is lazy hands or a cantankerous boss. There is no manner of doubt that it would cheer him up and make him feel that all his labor was worthwhile if his wife would meet him with a glad, sweet smile and tell him that in her eyes no hero had anything on him in courage, devotion to duty and in the grit with which he met the trials of life, and that she thanked God for her knees for having given him to her for a husband. But how about it if the husband comes home grumpy and cross, and grouchy, and if he kicks the cat as soon as he opens the door, spansk the baby, finds fault with the dinner and never even notices how hard his wife had worked taking care of the children and making a comfortable home? In order to be kissed you have to be lovable. In order to be loved you have to be lovable. No woman is going to kiss a husband who comes in looking like a graven image and who turns the back of his head to her lips. Maybe if you would be a little more responsive your wife would be a little more demonstrative. Certainly a husband and wife should settle their own differences without any one refereeing their fights. If they did, a lot more of them would end in a draw instead of a divorce. Family squabbles should be strictly private. Dear Dorothy Dix - Several days ago through mistake I opened one of Mother's letters thinking it was mine. To my horror I found it was from a strange man who, it seems, is her lover. Since that moment I have been nearly crazy. I cannot stand it to think that my Mother is that kind of a woman. In my panic I burned the letter, telling no one. Shall I tell my father? Shall I demand an explanation of my mother? Or shall I keep silent? WORRIED

Don't tell your father, but do go to your mother and let her see how your knowledge of her wrong-doing has shattered all of your ideals and broken your heart. Surely if anything can touch her and turn her away from the evil course she is pursuing it will be that. Psychologists tell us that nothing so completely wrecks the morale of children as to lose their faith in their mothers. DOROTHY DIX.

THE COOK'S CORNER

Rhubarb and Pineapple Jam
7 cups rhubarb cut fine
1 cup crushed pineapple, drained
2 lemons, juice and grated rind
4 cups sugar
Method: The rhubarb which is in market now is excellent for this because it has a deep, red color. Cut it in very small slices, sprinkle with the sugar and heat until the juice begins to be drawn out. Add the pineapple and lemon juice and grated rind. Cook until thick and clear, stirring frequently to prevent scorching. Turn into hot sterile jars and seal immediately.

Strawberry Shortcake
2 cups pastry flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons shortening
2 eggs, well beaten
2 tablespoons milk
1/4 cup 32 per cent cream, whipped.
Sift dry ingredients, add sugar, cut in shortening, add eggs, add milk to make a soft dough. Roll out on floured board to 1/4 inch thickness, cut with floured cutter two inches in diameter. Bake at 375 degrees F. for 15 to 20 minutes. Place sweetened strawberries between two layers of shortcake. Garnish with whipped cream and whole berries.
