Gaudet - Walker Nuptials At Church of Most Holy Redeemer

A wedding of interest to friends and relatives took place Tuesday July 18 in the church of the Most Holy Redeemer, when Mary Florence Lillian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker, Charlotte-town, was married to Mr. James Joseph Edward Gaudet son of Mrs. Gaudet in a double ring ceremony.

Very Rev. Edward Baldwin C. S. S. R. officiated and celebrated the nuptial Mass. Mr. Alex. McLean, the church organist played the wedding March and during the Mass hymns were sung by Mrs. Yvonne Murray and Mr. Leo Dolron, cousin of the groom.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white chantilly lace over satin and her floor length veil was held by a silver coronet. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses with baby mums on white satin ribbon streamers, and wore a single strand of pearls the gift of the groom.

Miss Mildred Walker, sister of the bride was maid of honor and wore a yellow taffeta gown with a headdress of flowers and tulle. She carried a nosegay of baby yellow and white mums with ribbon streamers. Miss Rita Gaudet, sister of the groom was bridesmaid and wore a floor length frock of orchid taffeta with matching coronet. She carried a nosegay of baby mums.

Mr. Louis Gaudet was groomsmen and the ushers were Mr. George Walker and Mr. Edward Gaudet.

Mrs. Walker, mother of the bride chose a navy blue faille dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations; she wore a neckpiece of stone marten.

The bride's grandmother wore a black and white crepe dress with a corsage of white carnations.

The guest pews were marked with white satin bows; the main altar was decorated with seasonal flowers, and baskets of roses and mums adorned the communion rail.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the Queen Hotel.

The bride was formerly employed at Island Telephone Co. and the groom is the manager of the Agnew Surpass Store in New Glasgow, N. S. where they will reside.

The young couple left by car for Halifax, N.S. and Fredericton, N.B. where they will spend their honeymoon.

Modern Etiquette By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it good manners to recognize servants when one meets them on the street?

A. Yes, and why not? It would be rude and snobbish not to do so. In some instances servants are more worthy of recognition than many people they serve.

Q. Is it proper for a person who is "dummy" in a bridge game to wander about the room conversing with other players?

A. This is not only improper but exceedingly rude and indicates a lack of interest in the game and the play of one's partner.

Q. At present our stump-field is in a raw unsightly state of upheaval to remind our farmers that no matter how soon any seasonal task is completed, there still remains a laborious chore in the offing.

"It would be nice to get some of that stumped land straightened away" James remarked, stopping in the yard to look towards the fields and woodland.

"There's nothing that helps farmers any better than to add a bit of new land now and then. Think of the crops it gives! The hay, and the grain, and in time, the pasture. Land that should be the best of land—hardwood, that it is! Oh well, we certainly haven't time to think about it now, but first chance we get, we'll go back and see what we can do about it!"

Meaning, in a tiny prelude to our haying of which James is bound we'll have a nice bit of mowing to do, but that's not saying anything about what we shall have to gather!" This week brought and ended the chore of the wedding. As had been hoped by our husbands, Jeanie suspended her interests to lend a respected and energetic hand, while our duty to prepare the meals spend a goodly amount of our leisure amusing the two small ones. She with her numberless requests: "Aw, read 'Peter' to me!" "Come out and see the white lily that's just about open!" "Let's go and have a look at the turkeys!"

Those whose birthday it is have prospect of a gainful and reasonably ambitious program in lasting and enduring values. At the same time a profitable and promising plan of action could be stimulated and enhanced by the lighter equation of sentimentality.

A child born on this day while serious and stable, also has been capacity for emotional, cultural, social or domestic avocations.

Monday's astrological forecast encourages indulgence in original research, out of the commonplace thinking, or experimental inventive investigation. While these may prove illuminating, and give intellectual stimulus, yet it would be rather in the realm of the intellectual or dramatic, that the most tangible returns materialize.

Those whose birthday it is may feel themselves impelled to investigation, curious explorations into the novel or unknown, but had better find expression in intellectual or scientific fields rather than in trying to cash in on novel thrills. Over-optimism, any excess, or hope of romantic gratifications might have unpleasant sources or standing. Shun the erratic in all connections.

A child born on this day may yearn to express its particular genius or urge for drama in eccentric fashion. It may be to its detriment to venture into strange pastures.

Summerside have had as their guests for a few days, Messrs Eldon MacKay and Wellington MacCubrey of Sydney, N. S.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Gillis and young son, Tommy, of Kennewick, Washington, are guests of the doctor's sister, Mrs. J. Harold MacLeod, and mother, Mrs. K. Gillis, in Vernon River during their Summer vacation.

Mrs. Thomas Campbell of Ottawa is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Percy Marchbank, in New Annan.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rogers, and children, Donna, Richard and Linton, of Charlottetown, spent the week-end in Summerside, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Rogerson.

Talmey - Murray Nuptials

Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Talmey photographed following their wedding in Montreal recently. Mrs. Talmey was formerly Miss Jane Murray of North Wiltshire while Mr. Talmey is a native of Strathroy, Ont. They will reside in Montreal.

The marriage of Miss Jane Murray, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Murray, of Prince Edward Island, to Mr. Robert G. Talmey, of Notre Dame de Grace, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Talmey, of Watford, Ont., took place at eleven o'clock last Saturday morning, in St. Raphael's Church, Outremont, Rev. J. C. O'Toole officiating.

Spring flowers formed the decorations. The organist was Mrs. Mooney and Miss P. McMillen sang "Ave Maria" and "Where E'er You Walk".

Mr. Clarence Murray gave his sister in marriage, and she wore a gown of white satin, the fitted bodice having a heart-shaped neckline, and the long sleeves ended in points over the hands. Her full skirt ended in a slight train. A beaded halo headdress held the bride's veil of embroidered tulle, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and bouvardia.

Miss Mary Murray, as her sister's maid of honor, wore a frock of pale blue taffeta, with matching bonnet-brim, and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses and delphinium. Miss Donna Talmey, sister of the bridegroom, as bridesmaid, was in maize taffeta, with matching bonnet-brim, and she also carried yellow roses and delphinium.

Mr. W. J. Robinson acted as best man for the groom, and Mr. C. Russell Murray ushered.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at 3273 Van Horne Avenue, after which the newly-married couple left for a motor trip through Quebec and Ontario, the bride travelling in a dress of navy faille, with navy and white accessories, and a corsage of fleurs d'amour. Upon their return, they will reside in Notre Dame de Grace.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Talmey, of Watford, Ont.; Miss Donna Talmey, of London, Ont.; Miss Mary Murray, Mr. C. R. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Murray, Mrs. V. S. Rose, and Mr. J. L. Shepherd, all of Ottawa, Ont.; Mr. Clarence Murray, of Boston, Mass.; Miss K. A. Wynne of Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Williams, Perth, Ont.; and Mr. Clifford Gough and Mrs. A. Wright, of Strathroy, Ont.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS - Turnabout

Husbands, Wives, Should Spend Day Watching Others' Work

A man at the head of a big business in which he employs many men once gave orders that the wives of all of the married men must come down to the shop once a month and spend the day watching their husbands work. It was a great idea, and if he had only amended it by requiring the husbands to spend every fourth Tuesday, say, watching their wives work it would have gone a long way toward ironing out the domestic difficulties in many a household.

For there is no other subject in the world over which there are so many family scraps as there is over which one of the high-contracting parties gets the hot end in matrimony. Wives are virtually a unit in believing that their husbands' alleged work is most of the time spent in eating leisurely lunches, listening to good stories and flirting with stenographers, while men are firmly wedded to the theory that wives spend most of their time lolling on couches and reading novels, interspersed with trips to the department stores and picture shows.

How either one figures out that the other manages to make a living or keep a house going, no one can explain, but it is a fact that virtually every wife looks at her husband enviously as he puts on his hat of a morning and starts off to work and wishes that she had it that easy and nothing is more common than for a husband to say to his wife: "Gosh! I wish I didn't have anything to do but to stay at home and keep house and take care of the children, as you do."

Now the reason that husbands and wives undervalue each other's labor and show each other so little appreciation and sympathy is that, as a general thing, neither one has the slightest idea of what the other one does. To the woman, going down town means a bit of a spree. It is a break from the monotony of housework. It is seeing new faces, talking with strangers, the excitement of buying something that she has wanted for a long time. She does not connect it in her mind with the exhausting work, with the torturing anxieties, with the having to put up with bullying superiors or incompetent employees or the unreasoning fault-finding customers and clients, which her husband has endured all day.

She does not realize that the reason her husband is peevish at home is because his nerves are worn to a frazzle abroad. She does not comprehend that the reason he hides himself behind the evening paper and sits up in dull silence is because he has made sales talks until there isn't a word left in him and he hates the sound of his own voice. She doesn't understand that the reason she has to drag him out to parties and places of amusement is because he is so worn out when night comes that all in the world he wants to do is to flop down on a couch and rest. Above all, she doesn't know how hard money is earned and that every dollar is wet with her husband's sweat and blood, or else she would not throw it away as recklessly as she often does.

And if women have little appreciation of how hard men work to support their families, men have even less appreciation of the endless labor that women perform in rearing a family and making a comfortable home. To the man home is a place for rest and relaxation and, without realizing it, he has a general impression that all his wife does is to weave some sort of magic wand and good meals appear upon the table, floors are swept, dishes are washed, children are tidied up, leaving the lady of the house to lead a life of sybaritic ease and luxury.

Somehow the fact that wife gets up half an hour before he does in the morning and is still at work when he goes to bed escapes his mind.

Double Wedding Coincides With Parents' 40th Marriage Anniversary

A double wedding took place on Saturday morning, July 15, at eleven o'clock in St. Raphael's Church, Outremont, P. Q., when Miss Dorothy Gallant, of Snowdon, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Gallant of Charlottetown, P. E. I., was united in marriage to Mr. Maurice Daly, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Daly, of Notre Dame de Grace, and Miss Rita Daly, fourth daughter, became the bride of Mr. Andre Rodrigue, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Andre Rodrigue. Officiating at the double ring ceremony was the Rev. J. C. O'Toole, uncle of the bride and of the bridegroom respectively of the two couples. Miss Theresa Daly and Mr. Alberi Viau, soloists sang during the Mass.

Miss Gallant, who was given in marriage by her father, had as her attendants, Mrs. V. Guy and Mrs. R. Bergeron, Mr. V. O'Toole was best man, and ushers were Messrs George Gallant and Gaston Brochu.

Miss Daly, also given away by her father, was attended by two bridesmaids, the Misses Lysa and Huguette Rodrigue, sisters of the bridegroom, while Mr. E. B. Brunneau was best man, and ushers were Messrs John Daly, Jr., and Emile Laboute.

The two brides were dressed alike in princess fitting gowns of white Chantilly lace over nylon, with finger tip veils held back from the forehead with clusters of lily-of-the-valley, while each carried a cluster of white roses and bouvardia.

The four bridesmaids, gowned alike in embroidered white nylon over blue taffeta, wore pale blue picture hats and carried pink carnations.

Mrs. John Daly, mother of the bride, wore a frock of azure blue marquisette lace; her hat was of pink tulle trimmed with miniature flowers, and she wore an orchid. Mrs. J. I. Gallant, in a gown of grey silk print with matching accessories also wore an orchid corsage cluster. Mrs. Raoul Rodrigue's gown was of orchid crepe faille with which she wore navy blue accessories and an orchid corsage shoulder spray.

Following the ceremony, a reception and dinner was held in the Mount Royal Hotel, where Mr. and Mrs. John Daly were the recipients of many congratulatory messages on the occasion of their fortieth wedding anniversary, which coincided with the double wedding of their two children.

Surrounding them were all their eight children and six grandchildren.

The church and the reception salons were decorated with roses and delphiniums. During the reception and dinner, music was supplied by Coleman Lewis at the piano and the Hal White Trio.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. M. O'Brien, of Manhatton, N. Y.; with their two daughters, Patricia and Christine O'Brien; Mr. Victor O'Toole, of Long Island, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Gallant, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., with their daughter, Joan Gallant, and Mr. and Mrs. P. Laurin of St. Jerome.

That Body Of Yours By James W. Barton, M.D.

LOW SALT DIET AND HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

Because high blood pressure is the commonest, though not the only cause of brain strokes (apoplexy) and heart strokes (coronary thrombosis), there is more interest in high blood pressure today than in any other one condition or symptom. When with high blood pressure there is much overweight, the patient is always advised to reduce his weight. Overweight puts extra work on both heart and blood vessels.

In a great many cases of overweight, much of the excess weight is due to the fact that fat holds so much more water (2 pound of fat holds over 3 pounds of water). This is the reason why the professional wrestler can lose ten to fifteen pounds in a 30 to 60 minute bout and have this ten to fifteen pounds back the next night by drinking plenty of water. In addition to cutting down in water and other liquids, the overweight with high blood pressure is advised to cut down greatly on table salt in and on his food.

Table salt (sodium chloride) and other salts hold many times their weight of water in the tissues which explains why many physicians advise cutting down on salty foods in sinus disturbances, colds, hard of hearing, and Meniere's disease.

In "The British Medical Journal," Dr. H. O. Band, P. Bechgaard and A. L. Nielson, Muncie Hospital, Copenhagen, report the use of a diet containing less than one gm. (1-4 teaspoon) of table salt in the treatment of 26 patients with high blood pressure. Sixteen of these experienced a fall in blood pressure which rose to some extent after a daily addition of 4.5 gm. of table salt. The fact that his salt was taken in food without the knowledge the patient shows that table salt really does raise the blood pressure.

These physicians found that food low in table salt had a favorable effect on the swelling of the tissues caused by a failing heart. Generally speaking then, the overweight and the individual with high blood pressure would do well to cut down on table salt in and on food, using "safe" salt substitutes if necessary. However, most of us with normal blood pressure and normal weight will continue to use table salt.

Onion Odor

Onion odor will often cling stubbornly to pans and dishes, and to remove this, wash and dry them, then scour with common salt, and place them on stove until the salt is brown. Shake off, then wash as usual.

Ironing Board Cover

Bleached muslin is good material with which to cover the ironing board, as there is no danger of lint coming off when pressing suits or woollen materials.

Delicious Salad

Try baking cheese biscuit in a ring mold; then unmold and, while still warm, spread it with butter. Fill the centre with a crisp salad.
