

Catarrh in the Head

Is a dangerous disease because it is liable to result in loss of hearing or smell, or develop into consumption. Read the following: "My wife has been a sufferer from catarrh for the past four years and the disease had gone so far that her eyesight was affected so that for nearly a year she was unable to read for more than five minutes at a time. She suffered severe pains in the head and at times was almost distracted. About Christmas, she commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and since that time has steadily improved. She has taken six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and is on the road to a complete cure. I cannot speak too highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I cheerfully recommend it." W. H. FURSKA, Newmarket, Ontario.

A Wide Range.

A preparation which enriches and purifies the blood and assists nature in repairing wasted tissue must have a wide range of usefulness. Such a preparation is Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. The uses of Scott's Emulsion are not confined to wasting diseases, like consumption, scrofula or anemia. They embrace nearly all those minor ailments associated with loss of flesh.

ADVERTISER IN THE EXAMINER

ROOFED BY THE SKY.

Mexican Delight to Live as Much as Possible in the Open Air.

The population of the City of Mexico is about 300,000, and of these at least two-thirds live literally in the streets. The high altitude, the highness and dryness of the atmosphere, even in the depth of winter, and the most constantly clear blue sky combine to make out-of-door life as attractive as may be found, perhaps, anywhere in the world. There is an exhilarating lightness and uplifting buoyancy in the air that gives people a dislike for confinement in the close, heavy houses of Mexico.

Multitudes of persons of wealth eat, sleep, work, visit and live away through the whole year in the gardens or on the very broad porches that extend all about the numerous palaces of their low, rambling houses. Thousands of the poorer classes have never by any means had cheap tent and hut-like abodes. For years have they slept wherever downy beds were laid down—whether in the open doorway on the cathedral steps, in the market places or in the fields about the city. The people of the City of Mexico are, therefore, noted for their habits of early rising.

So early an hour as 7 o'clock almost in the morning, especially in the long, hot summer season is over, and camp equipages may be seen dashing through the park, not a few of the liveried drivers holding the ribbons over the sleek buckskin mules—for here the mule is not relegated to the plow, but holds its own with equine aristocracy. And certainly his satiny skin, his dainty boned hoofs and neatly shorn tail, ending in a jaunty tassel, and his aggressive ears, subdued with fancy nets (assuming a look of conservative respectability), merit the distinction and show how one may feed a mule, as well as "feed a man, into a higher state of existence."

While the latest Parisian styles prevail among the Mexican ladies, the black lace mantilla still anticipates military confections. Conscious, no doubt, of the charm that lies in the black lace mantilla so bewitchingly disposed over her inky braids, softening the outline of her face and lending a certain dignity to the Spanish, the scrofula clings to it. A Spanish woman in a new-fangled hat or bonnet loses half her interest, and she is wise enough to know it.—New York Post.

IF NAPOLEON HAD LIVED IN ENGLAND.

It is also pertinent to inquire what would have happened had Napoleon been successful in landing an army on English shores. In the first place, his mastery of the seas would have been quickly ended by the combined efforts of the English war vessels then afloat, and he would have been left without base of supplies, or communication. In the second place, he would have met a resistance from a proud, free, enlightened and desperate people which would have paralyzed all his tactics, and would have worn out any army he could have kept together. Did Napoleon fail to understand this? Of course not. He had said before that an army which could not be regularly recruited is a doomed army. He had seen this theory verified in Egypt, and he knew very well that the permanent mastery of the seas was out of the question with the fleets and flotillas at his disposal. It would appear in the case of any other man that Napoleon's theory of the proof was complete, in view of what actually did occur—namely, the attack by land on Austria. The invasion which Napoleon received, in 1810 that this had been the Emperor's intention from the first, and the lavishness with which Napoleon, throughout his public career, made use of any and every means for the extension of his empire in order to mislead his foes, are complementary pieces of evidence which furnish the strongest corroboration.—Prof. W. M. Stannard's "Life of Napoleon," in the November Century.

THE POPPE'S CONDITION.

An American gentleman, recently favored with an audience with Pope Leo XIII. thus describes the event in a private letter: "We have just come from having an audience with the Holy Father. He appeared to be very feeble. If he looked as the Holy Father does, you might be inclined to say 'Here is a man of whose death I may hear at any particular moment, yet he may live ten years.' There is something even in his bodily appearance—I know not what it is— which causes you to think he may live a long time yet. If, however, his health is feeble, his mind appears to be wonderfully clear. He has a very bright and at the same time a very kind expression of the eyes. His face is remarkably refined. In some respects his pictures hardly do him justice. Some of them give you the impression of a man of strong character, but they do not indicate the softer graces. To my mind the face of Leo XIII. is that of a man very strong mentally, and at the same time very gentle. His face, if I may so say, has been made gentle by prayer and meditation. It is the face of a gentleman—gentle and at the same time manly.—London Pilot.

A Prominent Londoner.

Chase's Ointment is an invaluable remedy for itching Piles and in my own case I would pay $50 if it could not be otherwise had.

JOHN PEDROVICI, 160 Sydenham St. It is reported from Havana that the Cuban insurgents are using dynamite in blowing up railway trains.

400,000 Free Samples given away in Eight Months. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the only kidney pills known with sufficient merit to guarantee the proprietors in giving away hundreds of thousands of sample packages free. Ask your druggist for a sample if your kidneys or liver is deranged.

Sir Herbert Murray, the new Governor of Newfoundland, has been received with great enthusiasm by all classes.

Commercial Travellers.

Wm. Golding, commercial traveller, 130 E. Huron St., Toronto, says:—For 15 years I suffered untold misery from Itching Piles, sometimes called pin worms. Many weeks have I had to lay off the road from this trouble. I tried eight or ten different remedies, but all failed with no permanent relief to the intense itching and stinging, which irritated by scratching would bleed and ulcerate. One box of Chase's Ointment cured me completely.

William Morris, whom the world usually thinks of as an artist and poet, is a practical printer, and the inventor of a printing press which has turned out the most beautiful work, technically, of the day.

Bad Blood Between Them.

The ever-slaving farmer's wife, her delicate sister in the city, suffer more than they care to tell. The dark rings round the eyes, headaches, dizziness, palpitation or rheumatic twinges, between a run-down system. The blood is poor, and is a bar to enjoyment of life. Scott's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, strengthens and vitalizes the system, and speedily restores the bloom of health to the cheeks. It cures when all others fail.

Pater Paolo Pecchi, a celebrated theologist, died two years ago at Sassari. A few nights ago his grave was robbed of its inhabitant. In that region the belief prevails that the possession of a priest's bones enables one to discover hidden treasure.

KEEP ENEMIES OUT.

All diseases that linger and finally kill are the effects of bad blood. The blood must be kept perfectly pure. That is what the kidneys are for. They have everything to do in filtering out the poisons.

This process of filtration may be interfered with by a cold. Usually if there is any lack of good kidney work, it is a cold, or perhaps over-eating and over-drinking.

Nearly every acute ailment starts with a cold. So do the diseases that finally kill. The thing is to arrest the cold. This brings us to the question—What is the best treatment for a cold. Experience teaches us, from the universal success of Dodd's Kidney Pills in all the forms in which derangements of the kidneys show themselves, that there is no treatment known to man anywhere equal to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Archbishop Cleary has purchased a building in Kingston for $17,000, and will convert it into a classical college in which Roman Catholic young men can qualify for any profession. The college will be opened in September, 1896. Degrees will be conferred.

That Fat Face

For Nervous Prostration and Anemia, there is no medicine that will so promptly and infallibly restore vigor and strength as Scott's Emulsion.

A heavenly census is now being taken by the Paris Observatory. To count the stars the heavens are photographed in sections. Some of these sections show only a dozen stars, while others of the same dimensions show over 1,500. The work is carried on under the superintendence of a M. Kicmpka, a "Doctor of the Sciences."

It's All Nonsense.

For people to say there is no cure for consumption. Sufferers from that dread disease and kindred ailments are being saved every day by Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. Do not die without giving it a fair trial. If it will cure others it will cure you. The secret of its success lies in the fact that it creates new blood in the system, thus enabling sufferers from lung troubles to overcome the destructive forces at work to waste the tissues of the body. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, scrofula and all lung affections. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at all drug stores.

Prof. Maragliano, of the University of Genoa, has for three years experimented with the anti-tuberculous serum, and now reports in favor of it. He says that of the eighty-two consumptives treated with the serum, sixty-one were either completely cured or in a fair way to regain health, while twenty-one derived no benefit whatever.

Lord Harris says that cricket has become one of the mainstays of the Indian Empire. He describes a game which was recently played in the presence of 10,000 excited natives.

AMERICAN DYSPEPSIA.

What Causes It and How It May be Cured.

Dyspepsia, or inflammation of the digestive organs, characterized by the same symptoms whether found in America or elsewhere, but it is doubtless more common in the United States than in the European countries.

Pains in the epigastric region, heart-burn, "heart-burn," distress after eating, with regurgitation of either bitter fluid or gases, or both, make the lives of many persons miserable.

A foreigner who recently visited the United States was impressed with the hurry and rush characteristic of our people, and nowhere so much as in the restaurants and other public eating resorts. Being a physician, his habits of mind led him to note the time spent at meals by his table fellows.

At the largest restaurants in the business portion of the city he found the average length of time occupied at breakfast to be 12 minutes 2 seconds. Eleven minutes and 45 seconds were devoted to dinner, while 11 minutes were spent in eating supper.

By nearly half of those whose habits he observed coffee was taken with every meal, but no water was used. According to these observations, more than half the diners in the restaurants fastidiously fasten on one of devoting a few more minutes to business. Even a single meal a day eaten at such a place is detrimental to the health of the digestive organs. Food must be masticated thoroughly so that it may not prove actually injurious.

Between meals one should drink sufficient water partially to buoy the food. The disease of moderate quantities of water during meals also does not appear to be either beneficial.

Our friendly critic recommended as especially applicable to Americans the following prescription, which may safely be commended to Americans in general: If an hour for breakfast. One hour for dinner. Half an hour for supper.—You're Companion.

PETER THE GREAT.

He Found That It Was the Husband's Fault.

There is a story told of Peter the Great in the character of a dentist, which strikes one as very characteristic of his impulsive and high-handed ways. Peter had studied dentistry, in common with most other useful arts, and plumed himself on his dexterity in drawing a tooth, though one finds no record of his giving himself the trouble to do so. Observing one of his valets de chambre to be in bad spirits, he asked what was the matter (an unexpected trait in Peter), and was told that the dentist of the court was suffering from toothache so that he distressed him. "Why doesn't she have it out?" inquired the Czar, beginning to feel the professional instinct.

"I can't persuade her, sire," she always pretends not to suffer when we wish to give her care, renews her lamentations (which distress me to hear) when the dentist is dismissed.

"Let me see her," said the Czar, "I'll cure her." He was introduced to her apartment, and the Czar, after a short examination, there being nothing the matter, examined her mouth. Having satisfied himself as to which was the peccant molar, the Czar said to her husband: "Hold her head and arms, and she shall be cured in an instant." Then, in spite of her cries, he extracted the tooth with great address, and without the aid of an anesthetic. Hearing a few days afterward that the whole affair was a trick of the valet to torture his wife, with whom he had quarreled, the Czar beat him within an inch of his life—not so much, it was broadly suspected, on account of the deception practiced upon him, as because it had caused him to make an incorrect diagnosis.—London News.

To Make 150 Miles an Hour.

It is generally conceded that 60 miles an hour is the practical limit of speed on steam railways, as at present constructed. It is rather startling, therefore, to be told that a company has been formed and that capital has been obtained for the purpose of erecting a railway which will bear trains at double this speed. A hundred and twenty miles an hour is a speed that, if maintained, would carry one around the world in a trice over any existing route. It is faster than the hurricane, the carrier pigeon, or anything else that moves upon this mundane sphere. Yet the company is asking the United States Senate for privileges looking to the establishment of a line between New York and Washington, and specifying in the proposed bill that the schedule time shall not be less than 100 miles an hour, which necessitates a speed of 120 miles per hour to cover loss from stops.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Soldiers and Heavy Loads.

Some interesting experiments have recently been carried out by the German War Office to determine the injurious effect on soldiers carrying heavy loads for long distances. It was found that for an ordinary man a weight not exceeding 45 pounds could be carried for 25 miles if the temperature did not exceed 60 degrees without any injurious effects, even when continued for a number of days. If, however, the temperature is 10 degrees higher, the same load has a temporary effect on the organisms. A load of 65 pounds, it was found, could not be carried 25 miles without danger of serious injury. A weight of 80 pounds, it was decided, was the maximum weight which an ordinary man could carry 25 miles a day on several consecutive days.

Opening an Umbrella.

"Not infrequently," said a stroller, "you see people with their arms full of bundles, making hard work of opening an umbrella. There is a very simple and easy way of opening an umbrella with one hand, known to many, but perhaps not to all. You grasp the little cylinder around the handle, to which the lower ends of the ribs are attached, plant the point of the umbrella against a lamp post, and push with the little cylinder catches on the upper catches, and there you are, without the least trouble in the world."—Philadelphia Record.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Batesman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine? Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupifying narcotics? Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons? Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed? Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle? Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Fitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined? Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Fitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense? Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless? Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose? Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest? Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.
