HEARTBREAKING

Word of the situation flashed through the fleet and a squadron from the Philippine Sea moved in to take over. One of these planes was lost.

A stolid fury settled down upon North Korea and with it an agonizing despair on an rescue flight, every American plane was shot up. But through the fleet, pilots insisted upon going in to get their men.

It was an army helicopter that pulled the trick. It landed on the only flat land some 200 yards from Broomhead, Moore and Henry. There was space in the 'copter for two men and Broomhead was unconscious. To try to carry him the 200 yards under enemy fire would be fatal. Moore and Henry might make it in a quick dash. But they would not leave Broomhead. They waved the 'copter off.

REFUSE TO LEAVE

The pilot left and came back for an even more dangerous landing close up to the men. He begged Moore and Henry to climb aboard. They never considered the invitation. If they could not save their comrade, they would not save themselves. The hovering 'copter withdrew empty.

Now night fell but planes from the task force pressed down among the dark and perilous mountains trying for one last miracle. It never happened.

At break of day the planes came back. All they saw were trails of blood in snow, the trampling of many feet where there had been a fight. What happened to the three men no one knows.

Here was complete failure, a heartbreaking tragedy. But as you watched it, you did not know that it was a failure. For there was a spirit of exultation among the fliers involved.

"We don't desert our men," they said.

Trinity Men Addressed By Chief McArthur

The regular monthly meeting of Trinity Men's Association was held last evening in the Social Hall, under the chairmanship of Mr. George Newman, the President.

Fitting references were made to the recent honours bestowed upon Mr. Chester Cooper, who won distinction as the best radio narrator on a distinctive national programme, which he conducts.

Mr. P. W. Turner also received congratulations on his elevation to the directorate of Rotary International, being the sole Canadian Director for 1952-53.

Deep satisfaction was experienced by all present when the announcement was made that Rev. H. E. D. Ashford would be honoured by Queens University in May, with a Doctor of Divinity Degree.

A nominating committee, consisting of S. T. Green, Sr., N. W. Lowther and C. H. Black, will bring in a slate of officers at next meeting to lead the Association for the next year.

A Youth's quartette consisting of Barry Beers, Leith Thompson, Danny Wood, and Wally Wood, made a splendid impression on the audience when they rendered three numbers, including "Now the day is over". Mrs. Edwin Johnston was accompanist, and played for the singing throughout the evening.

Guests were, Sidney Stavert, Ivan Morrow, J. B. Murley, A. Henderson, R. Callbeck, George Auld, Elsworth Wheatley, Earle Riggs, Wm. Coates, Raymond MacLean.

Chief McArthur's Address

"Good Citizenship" was the subject of the address of the guest speaker, Chief of Police C. W. MacArthur. His address centred on the function and duty of a police force and its relationship with and to the public in general.

He stressed that the success of such a force depended to a great extent on their relations with the public and the amount of co-operation they received from the average citizen. "Good citizenship," the Chief stated, "may be measured by this yard stick".

He maintained that this co-operation from the standpoint of the citizen may be given in two ways. "First by example; that is by faithfully observing all those civic enactments or ordinances that although enforced by fines and alternatives are on the borderline of moral obligations and as such should be upheld without the intervention of the law or the ministrations thereof."

To illustrate, the Chief cited snow removal from sidewalks and in the larger sphere the proper affixing of number plates to front and rear of motor vehicles.

Going a step farther and dealing with the major offences under the Criminal Code, Chief MacArthur stated that "these are the ones that affect the lives and health of the citizen; his property both real and personal; his family and his home. Offenders against these laws should be apprehended and punished."

However very often there are no clues left at the scene and the investigator finds a difficult problem. True there may be some person who has a small bit of information. Some idea worth probing or something tangible enough to be the beginning of a successful investigation. "It is then," he stated, "that a citizen can show his true worth by voluntarily co-operation if he can be of any assistance."

The Chief recalled two cases to vividly portray his points to the audience. "In conclusion," Chief MacArthur stated, "let me repeat that in my opinion two things are necessary to curb crime. First co-operation as above and secondly more intensive education of the rising generation, particularly of a religious nature."

The guest speaker was introduced by Mr. Chester Cox who humorously referred to the Chief as a young fellow who took short cuts across his home farm to attend school at Cornwall. He stressed his career briefly from a first class school teacher at 17 to the present time, highlighting Chief MacArthur's military career in the First World War when he rose to the rank of captain from that of private.

Schooner Burns Off Irish Coast

HOWTH, Republic of Ireland, April 14 (Reuters)—A trans-Atlantic crossing in a two-masted schooner ended abruptly today for owner Kevin Lawler and stowaway Thomas McDonagh. Lawler's vessel burned to the waterline off the Irish coast.

Lawler, 29, a marine engineer, set sail for the United States Saturday because his girl friend dared him to make the crossing alone. Today, his ship, the St. Austell, burst into flames in the Irish Sea. Lawler and McDonagh, 40, jumped overboard and were picked up an hour later by a fishing smack.

Lawler was alright but McDonagh, earlier described as a passenger, suffered from exposure. "It all happened in a flash," Lawler told his rescuers.

He was shipwrecked three years ago on his first attempt to cross the Atlantic in a small craft.

BOARD MEMBER

(Continued from Page 1) of the commissioners, Miss Mabel Matheson. She reported that three requests had been made to the Provincial Government, namely:

1. That the Government should contribute to the teachers' fund.

2. That of the three members representing a quorum of the pensions commission, at least one should be a teacher.

3. That any teacher who had been teaching for 30 years should receive a part pension, regardless of age.

Of the three requests, it was reported that the first had been refused and the second ignored. Previously it was necessary for a teacher of 30 years standing to be 60 years of age or over to be eligible for a part pension, but an amendment recently approved by the Legislature has changed the age minimum to 35 years. However, this is still considered unsatisfactory by the Federation.

Miss Estelle Bowness, Summerside gave a report on the activities of the publicity committee during Education Week, which was held March 2-8. She commented upon the genuine interest and willingness to co-operate with the teachers shown this year by representatives of a number of organizations who had been invited to participate in the work of the committee.

She stated that many districts had taken advantage of the opportunity to hold meetings to discuss education, but deplored the fact that some of those who are most prominent in the educational field in the province have not modernized their outlook to suit the times, remarking that "You cannot shackle the wheels of progress in education any more successfully than in any other field of endeavour."

Higher Standards Stressed

Miss Bowness emphasized strongly the view that the Island must have teachers with higher academic and professional qualifications, and urged that the teachers stand behind the Director of Education and support his efforts to raise the status of the profession.

Evening Session

It was found necessary to continue the meeting of the Board of Governors last evening, and Mr. J. A. S. Williams opened the evening session with a report of the C. T. F. Directors' meeting in Ottawa in January. Among the many points brought up at the meeting was a request that education authorities keep abreast of the problems encountered by pupils transferred from one province to another, particularly the children of members of the Armed Services.

Mr. Williams commented upon the Radio Research Committee, set up here at the convention last summer, which is making a survey of serious situations, presentation of programs and educational outcomes. He explained the school children of P. E. I. will participate, each donating one cent to a fund to buy scribbles and pencils for needy Greek school children.

Mr. Elmer Pineau of Summerside gave a report on the Federal aid situation, and commented that the main P. E. I. suggestions in this respect have been incorporated into the C. T. F. national policy.

A report presented by Mr. Daniel MacDonald on the Advisory Council of Education meeting held in Charlottetown in February was thoroughly discussed. It was brought to the attention of the meeting that a series of questionnaires on the difficulties encountered by rural school teachers have been circulated over a five year period, and it was left to the publicity committee to decide what use will be made of the information.

The salary situation was discussed, and it was also decided that the executive would meet with the Department of Education to discuss the possibility of holding a two rather than a one day convention in the fall.

Attractive Exhibits

A large number of interesting exhibits in connection with the convention are on display at P. W. C. A Junior Red Cross exhibit is of particular interest. It contains samples of the exchange of artistic work which is being encouraged by the Junior Red Cross International Art Program, with work of students from such widely scattered points as Western Canada, Greece, and the Scandinavian countries. It also shows something of the work which the Canadian Junior Red Cross is doing to help the youth in countries where assistance is needed.
