PLANTING TEETH

Antiseptic Surgery as Applied to the Latest Dental Practice Makes It Possible to Substitute Sound Teeth for Old Ones—Once the Method was Dangerous.

An article recently published in the Brooklyn Eagle described certain advances made in the science of dentistry within the last decade or two. The practitioner of to-day is no longer a destructive, but a reparative agent. Extraction is no longer the logical remedy for an aching molar, and if you care to pay the difference in cost the vacancies in your gums can be filled—not by teeth set on a celluloid plate, but by the natural article, transplanted from another's jaw.

This work of transplanting teeth is something which, while entirely familiar with the higher grade practitioners the general public knows very little about. Like many other so-called discoveries it is really nothing absolutely novel—merely an elaboration and improvement of an old system abandoned years ago because of conditions then existing which rendered the practice dangerous. These conditions having been removed, the rejected method was revived with eminent success, and it is now recognized not only by individual practitioners of high standing, but by all the leading dental colleges.

Nearly a century has elapsed since Sir John Hunter, an eminent London anatomist, discovered that healthy teeth extracted from the jaws of one person could be transferred to those of another. He based his operations in this direction on the supposition that the planted tooth should always be made to fit the socket and in the majority of his experiments it is believed that he inserted the new tooth in the still unhealed wound left by the extraction of another. Valuable as Hunter's general contributions were to medical science his method of transplanting teeth was not destined to enjoy uninterrupted popularity. He himself recognized its great fault and others were not slow to apprehend what the discoverer of the system was ready to acknowledge. It was found that certain blood diseases were liable to be transferred along with teeth, and so this particular line of dental surgery was abandoned as too dangerous for pursuit.

When the system of antiseptic surgery was evolved, Dr. Younger of San Francisco conceived the idea of applying it to Hunter's old method of tooth transplanting. He very properly argued that a tooth thoroughly cleaned and subjected to a bath of antiseptic fluid was no longer a medium for the transfer of disease. Moreover, instead of dealing with the matter on the lines adopted by its discoverer, that is, that the tooth should be made to fit the socket or cavity, Dr. Younger worked on the principle that the socket should be made to fit the tooth. His experiments under the new conditions proved eminently satisfactory and it speedily became evident that the art of transplanting teeth had become a recognized branch of dental surgery.

To-day the system is pursued by all first-class dentists in New York and by many in Brooklyn. It is not popular in the most correct sense of the term, because it costs more than ordinary people can afford and, beside, it can hardly be carried to the extent of giving a man or woman a whole set of ivories that once belonged to some one else. Still, it is practiced in many cases and will be continued. Nearly all the leading dentists in New York nowadays devote their energies to saving teeth. With all the conditions now militating against the development of perfect teeth, this is no easy matter. It gives them enough to do without devoting valuable muscular tissue to the extraction of big grinders with roots like anchor flukes. When they have a patient whose tooth really must come out they pack him off to a certain doctor who makes a practice of doing such things. If the extracted tooth is not decayed, this practitioner puts it away in an antiseptic bath, where it remains with some score of others until a dentist has a patron whose jaw has a vacancy that could be filled by transplanting. A demand is then made upon the individual who keeps teeth in stock and the order is filled with regard to the requirements of shape, size, etc. It is no longer necessary, as in the days of Hunter, to have a recently made cavity ready for a newly extracted tooth. A skillful dentist will make an incision in the gum, if necessary, and there in insert the tooth which has lain perhaps for months in its bath of disinfectant. The tissue heal, and in a short time the transplanted tooth is as firmly rooted as any of its neighbors which have been grown on the soil. Ordinarily, where it is determined to replace an extracted tooth by transplanting, it is customary to keep the cavity open until its new occupant is introduced. The length of time the cavity is open has nothing to do with the success of the transplanting process. A prominent New York dentist relates an instance of a woman who lost a transplanted tooth soon after its insertion in her gum. She was out of town at the time and her dentist was inaccessible. She filled the cavity with cotton wool and so kept it open for several days. Then she fell sick and passed through a long attack of typhoid fever. When she realized that she was seriously ill and consequently liable to delirium, she instructed the nurse to keep the cavity in the gum still open, and those directions were implicitly followed when the sick woman was no longer able to attend to the matter herself. When she recovered and returned to town the cavity was in a condition to receive another tooth. In some cases where the roots and base of a tooth remain intact your modern dentist will fit a new top and fasten it to the old foundation with a neat rivet of gold.

HOW TO GET RID OF THE BLUES.

[From Harper's Round Table.]

The blues make the person suffering from their presence extremely uncomfortable, and her discomfort in a subtle way acts upon others, so that nobody is quite cheerful in her neighborhood. People who are "blue" are quite often cross as well, and are unable to accept pleasantly the ups and downs of every day. Now, when you think of it, you must admit that it is a very humiliating experience to be cross, for cross people are disagreeable, and none of us wishes to be that.

The best way to get rid of the blues is not to own that they have you. Put on your hat and a go for a walk. Call on a friend and take her the piece of music you are to try together, or the book you have just finished, which you would like to lend her. Do something kind for somebody, and stop thinking about yourself. The greatest waste of time in this world, dears, is to think too much about one's self. Mrs. Browning gives the right idea in her poem, "My Kate," where she says,

"Twas her thinking of others made you think of her."

Don't laugh at me girls, when I tell you that half the low spirits one hears of springs from a very prosaic source. That pound of chocolates, that rich pudding, that piece of frosted cake, all of them very delicious, but all very indigestible, are to blame, in most instances, for a young girl's depression. Try what Emerson called "plain living and high thinking," and see how cheery life will become Seize the Opportunity At Once.

When the opportunity occurs to escape from death only lunatics would refuse to do it. But there are many consumptive people lying on death beds who can escape the threatened doom if they will take Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. Some are not aware of such a preparation, and if they die it will be the result of ignorance. Those who know that Miller's Emulsion makes new blood and enables the consumptive to get strength to overcome the disease are self-destroyers if they still neglect to obtain the life-giving remedy. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve streugthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula, and all Lung agections. In Big Bottles 50c and $1 rt all Drug Stores.

CHERRY VALLEY NOTES.

Miss Emma Beers returned from Boston last week.

Mr. Edward Fraser, who has had charge of our school for the past year, has been engaged again for the next twelve months. Mr. Fraser, who is well liked by all the students of the district, is a splendid teacher, sparing no pains to give the children a good practical education, and we hope soon to see his name on the honor roll.

The tea party and fancy sale held here on the beautiful grounds adjoining the English Church was a very successful affair, and the large number of people present spent a thoroughly enjoyable time, as a result of the labors of an energetic committee and the ladies of the church. Several of the officers and men of H. M. S. Canada drove out in the afternoon. We understand quite a snug sum was realized.

A monument to the efficiency of the Peter's Government in having our roads and bridges in good condition is to be found on this road in the shape of a bridge in a most disgraceful state. If this "monument" continues for the next year to rise at the same ratio that it has for the past two years, it will only be necessary to climb to the top of it to get a good view of Charlottetown and Souris. No statute labor has been performed yet on the lower end of our road, owing, we understand, to the fact that the overseer was promised that the road machine would be sent here this spring. A wicked Tory says that all the mud machines are in Egmont Bay district this summer. When we have another local election here our roads and bridges will, no doubt, receive attention at the hands of the boodle brigade.

Strange, but True

The child that cannot digest milk can digest Cod-liver Oil as it is prepared in Scott's Emulsion. Careful scientific tests have proven it to be more easily digested than milk, butter, or any other fat. That is the reason why puny, sickly children, and thin, emaciated and anæmic persons grow fleshy so rapidly on Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites when their ordinary food does not nourish them.

YE OLD TIME DOCTOR.

Physicians of a Hundred Years Ago Were Men of Marked Importance.

At the universities medical students were not permitted to go out without their scholastic cloaks, a regulation that still obtains in Spain. That the number of students has enormously multiplied may be seen from the fact that the little University of Giessen, with scarcely any medical school at all, has always more students than had Haller in the days of the famous Hoffmann. In the middle of the last century Wurzburg had at one time but three medical students, while to-day it has in the neighborhood of 500. Even then it was complained that on account of the number of students there was an educated proletariat arising, and in 1791 it was proposed in Austria, that the rush for study should be repressed.

Among the continental students the revels and bad behavior of past centuries were not to any extent corrected. Fights and debauchery were very common, and all sorts of orgies and bacchanals prevailed. The professors were, in a large measure, independent of the state, and a single individual often represented a number of branches now taught by special chairs. When it disposed to lecture they simply posted upon the blackboard "Hodie non legitur," and this was the end of the matter. In 1777 Vienna had 147 medical teachers, and in Germany there were two to every 39 students. That in the last century one man often accomplished more than a great number of average teachers do to-day is amply demonstrated by the lives of Boerhaave, Haller and others. Then, too, the Latin tongue was generally employed for purposes of instruction, though surgeons, for the most part lectured in the vernacular. Cullen, in 1770, was the first in Great Britain to deliver purely medical lectures in English, and as the clergy gradually retired from the ranks of the profession, Latin more and more fell into disuse. Strange to say, as the clerical influence waned the Jews began to enter medicine, the movement beginning about 1751 in France, under the promulgation of "civil equality" ideas. Previously the Hebrews had been an almost universally suppressed people, and in Berlin were permitted to enter and leave the city by only one gate and were forbidden to learn or write pjure German, in consequence whereof their dialect was a Hebraic Teutonoc jargon that even to-day prevails in some portions of Western Europe. Educated Jews were few in number, since attendance upon universities was ordinarily denied them, although long before they had been admitted at Salamanca, Toledo, Senum and Montpellier. In Austria the prohibition was not removed until 1789, and even then so bitter was the prejudice against the Semitic race that the clergy protested vigorously. It was the same clerical body that in 1667 protested with the greatest vehemence against allowing Hebrew physicians to pass through the gates of Wurttemberg without paying toll, declaring that it was "better to die with Christ than be cured by Jews who were aided by the devil."

The physician of the last century was, at least on occasions of moment, very different from other men, and to be recognized by his dress. A cap was placed upon his head when he graduated, in recognition of the fact that physicians at an earlier period belonged to the learned or clerical profession, and in later life he wore a purplish or scarlet cloak to distinguish him from lawyers, whose professional color was yellow, and from theologians, who then as now sported the somore black.

The regulation full dress costume of the English physician of the last century demanded a well powdered wig, silk coat, knee breeches with stockings, buckled shoes, lace ruffles, cap and gold headed cane, to which, in cold weather, was added a muff—to preserve his delicacy of touch.—Medical Age.

The End of a Historic Jail.

The supervisors of Ontario county have just sold at auction the historic old jail of that county, the property bringing $100, and the bidder being obliged to remove it. This jail was widely celebrated in its day because of the so called "Morgan cell" therein, in which, previous to his mysterious disappearance in 1826, Morgan, the author of a book purporting to reveal the secrets of Freemasonry, was placed for protection. After his disappearance Morgan was never heard of again, and it was charged that the Masons had made way with him, some holding that he was drowned in the Niagara River above the falls, and another story being that he was banished to Australia, never to return on pain of death. The only thing that was ever proved was that he disappeared as effectually as though the ground had opened to swallow him.

This incident was widely discussed. This incident was widely discussed, and it aroused fierce animosities and bitterness at the time. It entered into politics, and the late Thurlow Weed and others utilized it to the political advantage. The pharse "good enough Morgan till after election" dates back to this anti-Mason agitation period of 70 years ago. Western New York especially, the home of Morgan, was a hot-bed of anti-Masonry, and the records of Genesee commandery, No. 14, K. T., one of the oldest in the state, now located at Lockport, but then at Batavia, relate how on St. John's day the parade of Sir Knights was stoned by the people. Whole counties were carried to the anti-Mason issue in those days.—Albany Argus.

Forest Preservation Falls.

What hope existed for the establishment of state forest reservations on the commendable plan suggested by Dr. Rothrock of the Pennsylvania Forestry Association has fallen through as one of the neglects of the Legislature to take action on a very important movement. The forest products of the state represent a revenue of $37,000,000 annually, and forest reservations, so vitally necessary if anything shall be saved to the watershed system in sections now suffering every year from draught, could be established at a cost of $300,000. This sum would provide 120,000 acres of forests of constantly increasing value, and the $300,000 required to secure this result covers but three days' earnings of the forest and is likewise less than what seven counties paid out in flood damages in the last two years.—Philadelphia Times.

The subscriber offers for sale, cheap, the double Tenement Dwelling House on Alley Street, near Prince, now in course of erection and which will be ready for occupation about the first week in August. This house is well situated on high ground and in a most convenient part of the city, quite near the Upper Prince Street School and the Second Methodist Church. Painless Dentistry!

TESTIMONIALS.

J E McDonald, D D S,—

The seventeen (17) teeth you extracted for me on Thursday, May 30th, at Doctor Robertson's, Crapaud, gave me less pain than I have suffered many times in having ONE taken out. I shall send all my suffering neighbors to you.

With gratitude yours,
MRS HUGH GILLIS.
Rose Valley, May 31, 1895.

Doctor McDonald, Dentist,—

Dear Doctor,—For two years I have been a constant sufferer from toothache, always in dread of having them taken out. Hearing of your success I determined to try your method, and now, after having you extract six for me, I can conscientiously say you are the only one who ever extracted a tooth for me WITHOUT PAIN. Truly yours,

MRS JAS DEVEREAUX.

McKinnon's English Ointment.

MR. NEIL MCKINNON,—

Dear Sir,—For five years I was a sufferer from eczema. Physicians could not help me. At last I bought a box of your Ointment, which helped me wonderfully, while two boxes made a complete cure. I can recommend it to all others similarly afflicted.
