REID sells Suits of such solid good Tweed,

And Suits in the year is all that you need;

Elegant patterns, with trimmings to match, ALL WOOL.

Just the thing for the Man, the Youth, or the Boy at school.

There are Suits for the Blacksmith or Mason by trade;

For the men at the Waterworks no better are made;

For the Carpenter, Shoemaker or Painter as well;

For all sorts of trades those Suits we do sell.

For Suits that are strong and Suits that are nice,

And Suits that the poor man can reach at a price;

For Boys that are rough on their knees and the seat,

We say it, maintain it, those Suits can't be beat.

Now don't think I'm blowing when you're singing this song,
But come, TRY-ON a Suit, and that before long;
They are all that we say; twice as much and far more;
To be had of J. D. REID ONLY at the Tryon Woolen Mills Store.

THE TEA TABLE.

A Collection of Interesting Items for Dessert.

Thirty years ago there was a tremendous contest, which was felt over almost all of Europe, over the Jewish child Mortara, whom the archbishop of Bologna claimed as the property of the Roman Catholic Church, on the ground that he had been baptized by a serving maid. The church prevailed and took the boy from his parents. He has now reappeared as an ascetic monk of extraordinary eloquence, learning and fervor, and has been preaching to great audiences near Madrid. The queen and court have subscribed to help the convent chapel he has built in the Basque highlands. He is called Father Mortara. He is a canon of the Order of Saint Augustin, and among other accomplishments he speaks twenty-two languages.

An Albany newspaper says that there are families in that town who have got the art of keeping up appearances reduced to a science. When they want to make their neighbors think that they have gone into the country they are not content with the old plan of shutting the front blinds and living in the back of the house. They leave their newspapers on the front piazza, apparently neglected; but they take them in at night and read them, at the same time supplying the piazza with old papers for the next day's masquerade.

A valuable archaeological discovery has been lately made in the Azamgarh district in the shape of a copper plate recording in later Gupta characters the grant by King Harshavardhana, of Stanisvara, of a village to several Brahmins, for the spiritual welfare of his parents and elder brother. The historical value of the record is that it gives in detail the genealogy of King Harshavardhana, who reigned from A. D. 618 to 642 over the greater part of Northern India, including Kashmir and Nepal, and whose court was visited at Kanauj by the Chinese Buddhist pilgrim Kiuen Kiangin, A. D. 637. The plate has been purchased by the British Government, and deposited in the provincial museum at Lucknow.

They have had the jubilee fever very strong in New Zealand. The Herald of that colony contains abundant evidence of the fact. Here is one advertisement:—"Wanted—Two jubilee ladies want two jubilee husbands. Apply 25 Queen Street." Here is another:—"Wanted—Jubilee wives, husbands, housemaids, waitresses, housekeepers, barmaids and general servants, can be had for the asking. A. McLeod, 25 Queen Street."

Bennettsville, Ind., holds within its confines a remarkable freak. The wonder is Henry Luegeman. Three years ago, during a storm, he was engaged in gathering tanbark when the tree from which he was taking it was struck by lightning. Luegeman received a severe shock. It transformed him into a genuine electric man. Any one who shakes hands with Luegeman now receives a severe shock. By passing the blade of a knife between his thumb and finger during the progress of a storm he charges the metal so strongly that heavy weights can be lifted. When flies light upon him they drop dead, and when he is in a dark room sparks flash from his flesh, and his eyes shine like incandescent lights. Whenever a storm approaches Luegeman becomes highly charged with electricity, and it is dangerous to touch him. He claims to feel no inconvenience, except that he will go near no moving locomotive for fear of being drawn under it and killed.

According to Kahlott's, recent experiments at Hamburg have proved it possible to make a gun-powder which will produce little or no smoke when fired and still be as serviceable in all other respects as the present smoke-producing gun-powder. By substituting cork for wood charcoal, it is further stated, trouble arising from powder absorbing moisture readily will be avoided. If the above statements prove to be borne out by the facts, the importance of the two discoveries, both in a military and a civil way, can hardly be overrated.

A few days ago a Boston lady was informed by her servant girl that a box of flowers had been left at the door for her. Being occupied at the time, the lady told the servant to open the box, sprinkle the flowers with water and put them on ice, adding that she would attend to them when she went down to tea. The box really contained a new spring hat which had been ordered, but was forgotten at the time the servant reported the arrival. Only the flowers were to be seen when the box was opened. The servant followed her orders explicitly, and the flowers were so thoroughly drenched that from a "perfect love of a hat," it became a limp and worthless mass of discolored ribbons and straw.

A tailor in a poor village in the Highlands endeavored to make both ends meet by turning and renewing the old clothes of the villagers. A dyer set up business next door to the tailor, and the folks, instead of turning their coats, found it cheaper to get them dyed. The poor tailor's occupation was nearly gone till he hit on the following expedient. He printed in large letters, and pasted it inside his window the legend: "Turn ye, oh, turn ye, for why will ye dye?" The bill was effective, and the dyer soon after shut up his shop.

Wedding presents have now become so gorgeous that people of moderate means are afraid to send what they can afford. This fashion, started among the affluents, of giving the young couple their household furniture and a sum of money to begin life with, has degenerated into a vulgar display of wealth. The French have a wiser plan. The relatives make up a sum of money as a wedding gift and send it to the bride's mother, who spends it for her daughter in jewels, lace, or whatever seems best. We have had the good sense to abjure the English wedding favors made of white satin ribbon and artificial flowers, some for horses' cars and servants' coats.

A writer in the British Medical Journal says:—Some years since, when on duty at recruiting stations in the north of England, I took observations on the great amount of disease and loss of teeth existing among the class of men who offered themselves. It became a cause of reflection of itself in great numbers. As far as inquiries went I was led to trace it to the working classes in the manufacturing towns, and this went on all through the day, whether with food or not. In fact, instead of 5 o'clock tea being the invention of the upper classes, it was found to exist to an injurious extent in the working classes long before that time. Tea seems to have a peculiar tendency to cause hyperemia in the tooth sacs, leading to inflammation, and eventually, abscess of the fang, with, of course, dentralia at every stage. Whether this special tendency was due to theine, it is not possible for me to say. It would be curious to know if medical men, practicing in such manufacturing districts, had observed the deterioration of teeth to be coincident with tea drinking.

The latest fashion in note paper is called the Great Scott. It folds up into a small space and looks very neat afterward. Another style is the size and shape of business letter paper, and it is placed in long narrow envelopes. Ladies use envelopes to appear as much like a business letter as possible. The ragged edged paper is very popular, and so is paper cut into square sheets. In fact, anything out of the regular style can be used now.

Crops in Ontario.

The Monetary Times, learns from reliable sources that the prospect for the fall wheat crop is no better than last year; the grain is very uneven in sample and the quantity likely to be no greater than in 1887. In some districts the promise is very fair indeed, but in more it is poor in the extreme, very many fields having been ploughed under. Last autumn, by reason of the drought, a less acreage was sown and it was got into the ground "in bad shape." Still, it emerged from under the snow, looking generally well, only to be damaged by the cold winds and frosty nights of April and May last.

Spring wheat is looking very fairly, but less of it has been sown this year, it appears, than in other years. There is nowhere serious exception to the good appearance of spring crops. They promise well; here and there a little backward, but no more so than can be overcome by a week's fine weather. A greater average of barley than usual has been sown this year.

Bribery in London.

London, it seems, is to have bribery investigations as well as New York; and they promise to even eclipse the latter's famous "Boodle" trials. The Metropolitan Board of Works will furnish the subject for investigation. Complaints have long been made of this body, which appears to have outlived its usefulness, but no systematic action has been taken in regard to it. The charges have now, however, become direct, and Mr. John Goddard, an architect, connected with the board, is charged with receiving £200 a year for six years, besides a lump sum from the Pavilion theatre alone. This money has been paid by the theatre to secure immunity from certain penalties and taxes rightly incurred under the law. The Board suspended Goddard a few days ago. A searching investigation will be made.

"No Time to be Tired."

Nothing in the late Emperor William's life was more characteristic of the man than his manner of taking leave of it. He died, as he had lived, like a soldier—fearless, resolute, self-possessed, heroic. When begged not to tire himself with too much talking, he replied, realizing that his end was near: "I have no time to be tired." To wait for rest was to miss the opportunity to say what was in his mind. And so the grand old man, drawing on the last grain of his splendid strength that had sustained him for more than ninety years, delivered his final messages, wrote his signature as boldly and firmly as he had ever done in his prime, and passed away as became a
