STUDIES FOR CASH
BOURNEMOUTH, England (CP)—A student in this Hampshire resort claims to have set a world record for studying. Trevor Cooke, 22, spent three days and nights plowing non-stop through several of Shakespeare's plays while his friends collected £100 for charity. Cooke had slowed down to one page an hour by the end of the session.

Atlantic Ocean, 800 miles east of Cape Kennedy at 4:38 p.m. For the first time in the history of the U.S. man-in-space program, flight objectives required an afternoon launch, forcing planners to stretch the pilots' work day the first night into the wee hours of the morning.

But, Young and Collins didn't mind the prospect of such a long day. Said Young, who flew the first two-man flight, Gemini 3 last year with air force Lt-Col. Virgil I. Grissom:

"That's the way it should be. I don't think we'll want to go to sleep anyway. I don't think you can change a guy's whole life and expect him to sleep soundly the first night."

The position of the powerless Agena, a so-called "dead bird" satellite which is helplessly around the globe nearly 250 miles out in space, warranted split-second timing for launch if it was to rendezvous with it two days later.

The old Agena was left in orbit after the Gemini 8 flight during which the two astronauts accomplished man's first docking, then had to suddenly return to earth after trouble struck their spaceship March 16.

To get in the dead bird, officials figured that Gemini 110 would have to shoot up to a high egg-shaped orbit around the globe ranging from 185 to 468 miles.

MAY TOP RUSSIANS
Their spacecraft firmly latched to the "live" Agena rocket launched Monday, the astronauts planned to crank up the powerful, 16,000-pound-thrust Agena engine to shove them to a record altitude of 468 miles, topping the altitude record of 307.5 miles held by two Russian cosmonauts.

Radiation becomes a hazard at such altitudes. Experts ran through days of crash studies on how much radiation the two spacemen might encounter. They said it might be 10 times more than any other American astronaut has ever faced, but still well below dangerous limits.

Collins' walk in space was to take him over to the old Agena satellite to remove a device that—hopefully—had become pitted by strikes from micro-meteorites that whip through space at supersonic speeds. He packed a new one in the spaceship to leave on the Agena for the Gemini 12 astronauts to retrieve.

Doctors predicted that Collins' walk would not be anywhere near the fatiguing ordeal any Cmdr. Eugene A. Cernan went through during map's longest walk in space—two hours, 10 minutes—during the flight of Gemini 9 last month. Cernan cut short his stroll because his "helmet" face-plate fogged, then froze. A special solution was developed to smear on Collins' face-plate to prevent any frost from blinding his view.

The initial chase and meeting with the live Agena was designed to let the pilots do their own calculations for navigation.

DOCKING A MUST
Link-up with the Agena is a must in the U.S. plan to send Gemini 8 pilots Neil A. Armstrong and air force Lt. Col. David R. Scott dramatically accomplished man's first link-up in space. However, a wild jet on their spaceship forced them to back away less than half an hour later, ending the flight with an emergency splashdown in the Pacific.

Gemini 10 was the third manned flight of the year by the United States and the eighth since the Soviet Union last sent a man into space.

Only two more two-man flights after Gemini 10 remain before the U.S. heads full-steam into the three-man Apollo project, which has its first mission tentatively set for Nov. 15.

Early Apollo missions will be designed to test the moon-flight hardware in earth orbit and to perfect lunar landing techniques, with an admittedly optimistic goal of sending men to the moon in 1968.

FOURTH STRIKE DAY

Atmosphere Of Quiet Prevails At Plants

SUDBURY (CP)—An atmosphere of quiet siege prevailed Monday at plants throughout the Sudbury area of the giant International Nickel Co. of Canada—watching 300 additional policemen with an estimated 7,000 pickets.

There was no violence reported on the fourth day of a wildcat strike by 16,000 Inco workers, members of the United Steelworkers of America (U.S.W.A.).

Earlier in the walkout some vandalism was reported and Sunday several shots were fired at a company-chartered helicopter. Nobody was injured and the company would give no details of the shooting.

Company executives and leaders of the Steelworkers' Local 6500, which represents the strikers, met in Toronto with William Dickie, chief conciliation officer for the provincial labor department. The union delegation was led by William Mahoney, Canadian director of the Steelworkers.

The two parties sought to break an impasse sparked Thursday when a shift boss at Inco's Levack mine, 35 miles northwest of Sudbury, ordered several miners to the surface.

The talks continued throughout the day into the evening with no sign of success. The shift boss acted apparently because the men began eating sandwiches before starting work. The union says that ...eating a sandwich while waiting for a work assignment is a long-standing practice in the mines.

200 QUIT MINE
About 200 men immediately quit the mine and the walkout spread rapidly throughout Inco's installations.

Monday 300 extra provincial policemen from across the province were on duty in the Sudbury area, standing by in case of trouble, and relieving the area's normal complement of 40 OPP men who had been working overtime shifts since Thursday.

Staff Superintendent William Gillins of the OPP in Toronto led the reinforcements.

"We are here as the result of a request by the mayor of Copper Cliff to the Attorney-General's department," he said.

An estimated 3,000 pickets were on duty outside Inco offices, a smaller and refinery which stand together in the 5,000-population company town of Copper Cliff.

It was here that several shots were fired at a twin-bladed helicopter Sunday afternoon as it flew supplies into the Inco site. The helicopter flew out again, apparently without further incident, to a site which the company has not named.

Mayor Richard Dow of Copper Cliff said he called for the police reinforcements to maintain order, "not to break a strike, illegal or not."

and other officers of the chapter elected were: vice-president, Noel Wilson; secretary, Harry Kabours; treasurer, Benny Koko; warden, John Boudreau. Instead of the regular opening prayer, Robert Ferguson said the rosary for the late Father McCordie, who had been a longtime member of the Knights of Columbus. The minutes of the last regular and the last annual meeting were read and approved. Thomas Curran moved a vote of thanks, seconded by John Boudreau, to the retiring president and the executive for their hard work which made the past year so successful. A motion to have a picnic for the members and their families was carried unanimously. It was decided to hold the picnic at Sir Andrew MacPhail park on July 17th at 2:00 p.m.

A suggestion that the chapter have a Mass for the late Father McCordie was accepted by the meeting.

It was decided that the chapter would sponsor one child of a member to attend the Rustico Cultural Training Camp each summer. The first selection was that of Yvonne Boudreau, daughter of George Boudreau. In his opening remarks, the new president elaborated on plans for the future and stressed, especially for all members to be active. It was decided to hold the next meeting on Sunday, September 3rd, following which the president adjourned the meeting after prayer by George Boudreau.

Strike Director Comments

MONTREAL (CP)—No settlement was reached Monday to end a strike of 32,500 hospital employees which now is affecting over 70 per cent of Quebec's 189 hospitals.

"Negotiations are not progressing at all," said Raymond Couture, strike director for the National Federation of Services, an affiliate of the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions. "But we expect, they will continue today."

The strike—which began in 38 hospitals Friday, spread to an additional 101 hospitals Monday morning.

Employees involved include dietary, laundry, housekeeping and maintenance workers, ward orderlies and some nurses.

They are seeking a weekly salary increase of $8 for all workers, plus improvements in the system of judging the competence of workers, in a one-year contract.

The hospital association is reported to have offered increases ranging from $4.60 to $6.60 in a two-year contract.

Hospitals are reported able to carry on and to operate effectively—emergency facilities in spite of the staff shortage.

Prime Minister Indicates Policy

LETHBRIDGE (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson indicated Monday the Canadian government does not plan to send diplomat Chester Ronning to Hanoi to intercede on behalf of American prisoners of war there.

Responding to a suggestion from Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, Mr. Pearson said there seemed to be little possibility of positive results of any kind coming from another visit to Hanoi.

Mr. Ronning already has made two visits to Hanoi in search of a solution to the Viet Nam conflict.

Mr. Pearson said in a statement the government would not hesitate to ask Mr. Ronning to go again "if the situation seemed to warrant another effort our part to help bring about an end to the fighting in Viet Nam, or to prevent such atrocities as the surrender of prisoners of war."

Ferry Traffic Is Heavy

Reports from Borden last night indicated very heavy traffic on the CNR ferries between Cape Tormentine and Borden yesterday. Waiting lines of up to 600 cars were formed yesterday afternoon, with some cars waiting as long as six hours on the Cape Tormentine pier before crossing.

Opposition Leader Outlines Program

QUEBEC (CP)—Opposition Leader Jean Lesage said Monday he plans to give the new Union Nationale regime enough rope to hang itself.

The Liberal leader told a press conference that although he will do nothing to thwart the government of Premier Daniel Johnson, neither will he do anything to aid it.

"I want to give him (Mr. Johnson) all the rope necessary to hang himself, and it won't take much rope to do that. The strangulation has already started."

Asked whether this attitude would not also result in the strangulation of the province, Mr. Lesage replied that "the province will not allow itself to be hanged. I have too much confidence in the people to believe they will allow themselves to be treated that way."

To show that this confidence is not misplaced, he stressed the fact that although the Liberals lost the recent provincial election, they still had the largest part of the popular vote.

IN LONG ORBIT
Trackers said Gemini 10's initial orbit was 100 by 163 miles—an egg-shaped path through space.

"Looks beautiful, man!" Young said.

A long night's work ahead, Young—a U.S. navy commander making his second space journey in slightly more than a year, and Collins, an air force major who had never been in space, slept until 1:30 p.m. Monday.

The flight was broken down this way:

First night: Rendezvous and link-up with an Agena rocket within six hours after blastoff, then firing the main Agena engine for a shove to an altitude of 468 miles, a record for man.

Tuesday: Opening of the spacecraft hatch late in the afternoon so Collins can stand in the seat—his arms, head and shoulders exposed to space—for an hour of scientific picture-taking.

Wednesday: Rendezvous with the powerless Agena left in orbit after the troubled flight of Gemini 8. Then Collins leaves the safety of Gemini 10 for an hour-long space stroll, using a 50-foot lifeline and small space gun.
