THE PIRATE.

By Sir Walter Scott.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

—Bunce immediately resumed: "You are right, my friend, these are but vain visions of felicity, and it remains but for the unhappy Altamont to serve the friend to whom he is now to bid farewell. I have determined to put you and the two girls ashore, with Fletcher for your protection; and so call up the young women, and let them be gone before the devil gets aboard of me, or of some one else. You will carry my letter to the magistrates, and second it with your own eloquence, and assure them that if they hurt but one hair of Cleveland's head, there will be the devil to pay, and no pitch hot."

Relieved at heart by this unexpected termination of Bunce's harangue, Halcro descended the companion ladder two steps at a time, and knocking at the cabin door, could scarce find intelligible language enough to say his errand.

The sisters hearing, with unexpected joy, that they were to be set ashore, muffled themselves in their cloaks, and when they learned that the boat was hoisted out, came hastily on deck, where they were apprized, for the first time, to their great horror, that their father was still to remain on board of the pirate.

"We will remain with him at every risk," said Minna: "we may be of some assistance to him, were it but for an instant—we will live and die with him!"

"We shall aid him more surely," said Brenda, who comprehended the nature of their situation better than Minna, "by instructing the people of Kirkwall to grant these gentlemen's demands."

"Spoken like an angel of sense and beauty," said Bunce: "and now away with you; for, d—n me, if this is not like having a lighted linstock in the powder-room—if you speak another word more, confound me if I know how I shall bring myself to part with you!"

"Go, in God's name, my daughters," said Magnus. "I am in God's hand; and when you give me a small care little for myself—and I shall think and say as long as I live, that this good gentleman deserves a better trade. Go—go—away with you!"—for they yet lingered in unwillingness to leave him.

"Stay not to kiss," said Bunce, "for fear I be tempted to ask my share. Into the boat with you—yet stop an instant." He drew the three captives apart—"Fletcher," said he, will answer for the rest of the fellows, and will see you safe off the sea-beach. But how to answer for Fletcher, I know not, except by trusting Mr. Halcro with this little guarantee."

He offered the minstrel a small double-barrelled pistol, which he said was loaded with a brace of balls; Minna observed Halcro's hand tremble as he stretched it out to take the weapon. "Give it to me, sir," she said, taking it from the outlaw; "and trust to me for defending my sister and myself."

"Bravo, bravo!" shouted Bunce. There spoke a wench worthy of Cleveland, the King of Rovers!"

"Cleveland!" repeated Minna, "do you then know that Cleveland, whom you have twice named?"

"Know him! Is there a man alive," said Bunce, "that knows better than I do the best and stoutest fellow ever stepped betwixt stem and stern? When he is out of the bilboes, as please Heaven he shall soon be, I reckon to see you come on board of us, and reign the queen of every sea we sail over. You have the little guardian, I suppose you know how to use it. If Fletcher behaves ill to you, you need only draw up this piece of iron with your thumb, so—and if he persists, it is but crooking your pretty forefinger thus, and I shall lose the most dutiful messmate that ever man had—though, d—n the dog, he will deserve his death if he disobeys my orders. And now, into the boat—but stay, one kiss, for Cleveland's sake."

Brenda, in deadly terror, indured his courtship, but Minna, stepping back with disdain, offered her hand. Bunce laughed, and kissed, with a theatrical air, the fair hand which she extended as a ransom for her lips, and at length the sisters and Halcro were placed in a boat, which rowed off under Fletcher's command.

Bunce stood on the quarter-deck, soliloquizing after the manner of his original profession. "Were this told at Fort-Royal now, or at the Isle of Providence, or in the Pettes Quayes, I wonder what they would say of me! Why that I was a good-natured milkop—a Jack-a-lent—an ass—Well let them. I have done enough of bad to think about it; it is worth while doing one good action, if it were but for the rarity of the thing, and to put one in good humor with oneself." Then turning to Magnus Troll, he proceeded—"By these are bonarobas, these daughters of yours. The eldest would make her fortune on the London boards. What a dashing attitude the wench had with her, as she seized the pistol!—that touch would have brought the house down! What a Roxalana the jade would have made!" (for, in his oratory, Bunce, like Sancho's gossip, Thomas Cecial, was apt to use the most energetic word which came to hand, without accurately considering its propriety.) "I would give my share of the next prize to hear her spout—"

"Away, begone, and give a whirlwind room. Or I will blow you up like dust.—Avaunt! Madness but meanly represents my rage!"

And then, again, that little, soft, shy, tearful trembler, for Statira, to hear her recite—

"He speaks the kindest words, and looks such things."

Vows with such passion, swears with so much grace,

That 'tis a kind of heaven to be deluded by him! What a play we might have run up!—I was a beast to think of it before I sent them off—this old gentleman might have made a Clythra, for a pinch. I was an idiot not to think of it!"

There were much in this effusion which might have displeased the Udaller; but, to speak truth, he paid no attention to it. His eye, and, finally, his spy-glass; was employed in watching the return of his daughters to the shore. He saw them land on the beach, and accompanied by Halcro, and another man, the latter, doubtless, he saw them ascend the acclivity, and proceeded upon the road; o Kirkwall, and he could even distinguish that Minna, as if considering herself as the guardian of the party, walking a little aloof from the rest, on the watch, as it seemed, against surprise, and ready to act as occasion should require. At length, as the Udaller was just about to lose sight of them, he had the exquisite satisfaction to see the party halt, and the pirate leave them, after a space just long enough for a civil farewell, and proceed slowly back, on return to the beach. Blessing the Great Being who had thus relieved him from the most agonizing fears which a father can feel, the worthy Udaller from that instant, stood resigned to his fate, whatever that might be.

(To be continued.)

The Third Party.

PLATFORM AND GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE NEW PARTY IN CANADIAN POLITICS.

(Special to the St. John Globe.)

OTTAWA, March 7.—The new prohibition party, which has been freely discussed in temperance conventions and alliances for some time past, is about to take definite shape. It is learned on reliable authority that an announcement will be made on Thursday morning in the leading cities of the Dominion of the platform of the party and of the convention to complete its organization. At a meeting of temperance workers in Toronto, in September last, a resolution was adopted on motion of Rev. Dr. Sutherland, seconded by J. R. Dougall, Montreal, stating it was the opinion of the convention that the present juncture was peculiarly favorable for the organization of a new party with prohibition as the chief plank in its platform. After the adoption of this resolution its supporters met and decided to take the initial steps to organize a party, and a committee was appointed to obtain expressions of opinion from the leading temperance men of the Dominion and to draft a platform for the proposed party. The following was finally decided upon:—

1. Righteousness and truth in public affairs as well as in private business, and no compromise with wrong.

2. Equal rights for all creeds, classes and nationalities, but exclusive privileges to none.

3. National sentiment, national literature; and in all matters of public policy our country first.

4. Prompt and absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic as the objective point of temperance legislation. In the meantime honest and vigorous enforcement of the Scott Act and all other laws for repression of vice and intemperance.

5. Retrenchment and economy in public expenditure with a view of reducing our enormous national debt.

6. Manhood suffrage, with educational qualifications; that is a vote to every free man of legal age, who can read and write.

7. Extension of the franchise to women.

8. Elective senate.

9. Civil service reform.

A convention will be held in Toronto, March 21st, for the completion of the organization of the party. An effort is being made to get W. H. Howland, of Toronto, to take the leadership.
