

Agitation Increasing For Brewery In Pictou County

WESTVILLE, N.S. (CP)—Agitation is increasing for Nova Scotia's third brewery to be established in economically depressed Pictou County where coal was once the major industry.

"I think it would be a wonderful thing for our area," Mayor Alfred Matheson said Tuesday.

This town of 4,200 is in the centre of the province's depressed coal mining district.

The proposal for a brewery originated with the Pictou County Labor Council. It won approval and was endorsed by the local town council and the Trenton council nearby.

ESTIMATES COST AT $100,000

Mayor Matheson said he thought a brewery could be built in the area for about $100,000—the same amount the crown-owned Industrial Estates Limited estimates it will cost to establish an Italian textile mill at Stellarton, N.S.

"We would be centrally located for distribution," said the mayor. "It would employ a lot of people. And it would be clean, safe employment."

At present there are four breweries in the Maritimes, three owned by the same interests. The two commonly owned Nova Scotia producers, A. E. Keith and Son and Oland and Son Limited of Halifax, have been strikebound for 13 weeks.

Recently the firm purchased Red Ball Brewery Limited of Saint John, N.B.

EMPLOY 150 MEN

Both union and company officials said Tuesday there was no sign of an early settlement. The weekly payroll for both plants which employ about 150 men was more than $8,000.

The two breweries produce about 50 per cent of the beer sold in Nova Scotia.

Local 361 of the United Brewery and Distillery Workers (CLC) is demanding a 20-cent hourly increase now and a further 10 cents next year in a two-year contract. The present basic wage is $1.33 an hour.

When the brewer's 93 (90) barrels of beer were stored at the plants. The union estimated the beverage would not be marketable after about two months.

However, union President Harold Martell said Tuesday the company had mixed a preservative with the beer and it is still in good condition.

53 African Women Fined

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (Reuters)—Fines of £15 or six weeks imprisonment with hard labor were imposed Tuesday on 53 African women who took part in a procession Oct. 28 in protest against the issue of identity cards.

Two-thirds of the sentence imposed on the women was suspended for a year on the condition that no offence of a similar nature be committed by them in that time.

They were found guilty of failing to disperse when ordered to do so by police.

KILLED BY WRINGER

MONTREAL (CP)—Athanasios Psharis, 28, a Greek immigrant married two months ago, was killed Tuesday when his arm caught in a clothes wringer at a laundry where he was employed.
