

Special Court Session To Handle Segregation Crisis

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court Monday set up a special session for Thursday—five days before a crucial deadline—to consider the school segregation crisis at Little Rock, Ark.

In one of its rare, off-season terms—the fifth in four decades—the tribunal must determine whether to allow or forbid a delay in racial integration at Little Rock.

The high court is up against a Sept. 2 deadline for reopening of schools in the Arkansas capital. Violence broke out there a year ago when nine Negroes enrolled at Central High School under a federal court order calling for desegregated public schools.

The impending Supreme Court decision has sweeping implications. It is expected to provide the first guidance on desegregation methods and timing since the court outlawed racial segregation in public schools more than four years ago and ordered desegregation to proceed with deliberate speed.

It also will have a direct bearing on integration in Norfolk, Va., schools, which begin the fall term Sept. 8.

ASKS RECONSIDERATION

In Norfolk, Federal District Judge Walter E. Hoffman Monday told the school board to reconsider the rejected applications of 151 Negroes who asked for admission to white schools. He ordered the board to report by next Friday.

Hoffman has said he wouldn't order Norfolk schools desegregated if the Supreme Court permits a delay in Little Rock.

At Little Rock, members of the state legislature assembled for a special session beginning today. Governor Orval Faubus, who called it, has three segregation bills ready.

Retired U.S. Officer Gives Talk On Okinawa And People

"Okinawa and its people" was the subject of an address by Major Edwin D. Bowman, United States Army (retired) at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club held at the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday.

Major Bowman recently spent two years in the Pacific on an engineering project with the United States Marines and makes his home in Arlington, Va. He is visiting the Island, the guest of his brother-in-law John Finlay MacLeod, Rotarian Roy MacGillivray and Don Martin were co-chairmen.

Major Bowman described Okinawa as the largest island in the group, about 60 miles long and 20 miles wide with mountains in the interior but entirely surrounded with beautiful beaches where the people lived. The roads are excellent and communications are exceptionally adequate. There are 1,000 islands in the range, some being only projecting rocks. There were 14 cars and three buses there when the U.S. forces took over and the native diet consisted of boiled sweet potatoes and roots and fish. "Probably they had never seen a loaf of white bread", Major Bowman said.

SOME IMPROVEMENTS

Describing some of the improvements in the four larger towns, he told how solid concrete houses with all modern conveniences had replaced the hovels. There is large enough for a family among the million natives. "Laying out of doors for nine months of the year and under shelter for the three months of the monsoon season", is routine. All food is prepared in a single pot over a charcoal fire and is eaten cold.

The natives are particularly sensitive to cleanliness and bathe several times daily.

The U.S.A. forces are an economic factor and there are no industries. Whaling has been developed to the extent that 400 were taken last year up to 40 feet long. The U.S. government has set up handicraft teaching with success.

"One industry has been operative in a family for six or seven hundred years—that of lacquering, with 500 artisans participating in the making and decorating of salad bowls with mother of pearl eyes," Major Bowman said.

"There are 280 miles of two and four lane paved highways, five 2-storey buildings, seven 6-storey buildings and six large theatres in this area which was an oversize village in appearance a few years ago."
