WOMEN IN PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

William Dean Howells has allowed the following utterances of his through the public press to place on record as the friend of woman's cause, especially as touching her part—or desired part—in public affairs: "I am glad to see women enter into public life in any way. As for this particular matter (the franchise) I could not give an opinion of it, as I have not given it any consideration. I should think that women's suffrage would apply, as far as I know, to this. Women, I believe are naturally serious-minded. It would be a good thing for public affairs if she were interested in them. I think it would purify public life. The average woman is better than the average man. A woman is not tempted by money, generally. That is one of the evils of public life. A man's distaste would apply, as far as I know, to this.
