

City enjoys huge building boom

NEEDED LIBRARY AT ST. DUNSTAN'S ADDS BEAUTY TO CAMPUS

MONASTERY OF PRECIOUS BLOOD NUNS OPENED THIS YEAR

Another year of tremendous growth and construction is coming to an end in metropolitan Charlottetown and optimistic glances are being cast at 1963 at another banner year in building.

The boom in construction this year has centred mainly around several large buildings, most of them in the heart of the city, although dwelling house construction also hit high peaks.

One of the largest structures is the St. Dunstan's Basilica Recreation Centre, being built on a site in the heart of Charlottetown that once housed two dilapidated and condemned buildings. The building, to cost about $500,000 is designed to compliment the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Building, to be built nearby.

Another beautiful and much needed building added during the year is the new Sacred Heart Home on Rochford Street overlooking the harbor. The new building replaces the ancient former home for the aged.

NEW SCHOOLS
West Kent School, third in line of new school construction program undertaken, is well on its way to completion on Wellington Ave. The $383,000 structure replaces the much loved but hopelessly antiquated West Kent School on Kent Street.

Maritime Electric has added a big new section to its generating station at a cost of $300,000 and this would be further proof of the expanding economy of the capital city.

M.F. Schurman Ltd. has also indicated confidence in the growth of the city's economy with the addition of a $70,000 wing to its office and showroom space on Logsworth Ave.

In the uptown area new and impressive fronts have been put on buildings occupied by Holmans of P.E.I., Maritime Electric Ltd. and Redfern Drug Store. All are designed to add to the beauty that will be centred around the new Memorial Building.

HUGE PROJECTS
Outside the city but within the metro area, two huge buildings are under construction. At Mount St. Mary's, a beautiful $1,500,000 new structure is underway and in West Royalty the $2,000,000 provincial vocational institute is taking shape.

The new library building at St. Dunstan's University is nearing completion at a cost of $460,000.

On the city waterfront, the department of transport wharf, replacing numerous unsightly structures and adding greatly to docking space, is well on the way to completion. Irving Oil Ltd. is building a tanker berth at the west end of the harbor for the huge ships that ply to and from the fuel storage depot. Imperial Oil and Texaco have both added to their fuel storage facilities.

Residential construction has also boomed in the city with a peak month of $130,000 recorded at the building permit office. Much of this housing development has taken place in the newly opened housing areas in the north and north west sections of the city.

Sewer and water line construction and improvement and street paving has moved fast to keep pace with the building upsurge.

Next year promises, from present indications, to be another banner year, headlined by the construction of the new Federal Confederation Memorial Building. A new provincial building is in the offing and many of the large projects now underway will carry over into 1963. These two massive projects will cost upwards of $1,000,000.

Gov't Planning Machinery To Handle '67 World Fair

OTTAWA (CP) — The government hopes to introduce legislation early next month setting up the administrative machinery for Canada's World's Fair, to be held in Montreal in the 1967 centennial year.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker has conferred with Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal and it is believed organization of the fair was discussed.

Associate Defence Minister Pierre Sevigny, senior federal representative on the inter-governmental group which won approval of Canada as host for the 1967 fair, hopes to have draft legislation ready by the end of next week.

A meeting of Montreal civic and Quebec provincial authorities with federal representatives is being arranged for next Friday here if no hitch occurs, the draft legislation probably will be submitted to them in private for their comments and then introduced in the Commons.

According to international agreement, the host country sets up a two-pronged organization to deal with inter-governmental and national negotiations, and with the purely business aspect of holding a large international exposition. A committee, usually someone with special diplomatic talents, heads a 12-member board which in turn incorporates an operating company with its own board of directors.

Mentioned in informed quarters here as candidates for senior jobs are Conservative Senator Mark R. Drouin, former Speaker of the upper house, and Gerald Letendre, Montreal and Quebec City engineer and business executive.

Senator Drouin, prominent in Quebec business circles and an enthusiastic promoter of Quebec theatre, is a personable, fluently bilingual lawyer who fell naturally into a quasi-diplomatic role as Speaker of the Senate from 1957 until this autumn when he was succeeded by Senator George S. White.

Students Efforts Fruitless At Canadian Affairs Talks

By GERRY McNEIL
QUEBEC (CP) — Henry Hicks, former Liberal premier of Nova Scotia has deflated university students' supporting what they considered "a major resolution" adopted at the Congress of Canadian Affairs.

The 86 students from 25 Canadian universities had spent more than an hour drawing up a resolution that endorsed Britain's entry into the European Common Market and "wishes her well in so doing."

"I can find little to disagree with in it," said Mr. Hicks, asked by a student to comment. "But I don't know if any government or politician could derive much from it."

The vice-president and dean of arts and science of Dalhousie University in Halifax earlier had criticized the economic conservatism of Canada during a panel discussion student chairman Michel Robitaille of host Laval University called the most interesting of the week.

The congress began last Tuesday on the theme "The Canadian Economy: Where are we going?" Politicians of all stripes, union leaders, an industrial economist gave their views and answered students' questions.

NOTE SHORTCOMINGS
Friday when students drew up their resolutions, delegates themselves noted that the proposals were either in force or not accepted. There were complaints about the lack of fresh ideas.

"This resolution consecrates the status quo in immovable terms," said one student.

Peter Kilgour, delegate from the University of Toronto, said "We seem to be saving nothing... coming out for motherhood and against sin."

Mr. Hicks said later he thought Mr. Kilgour's comment fairly summed up the resolutions.

"They were hedged around with sufficient qualifications so that anyone could vote for them, except perhaps an inveterate splitter of hairs," Mr. Hicks said.

A foreign observer remarked: "The only thing more conservative than a Canadian citizen is a Canadian university student."

Mr. Hicks, who had sat smiling at times through Friday's session, stressed the need for realism in facing Canada's economic problems.

"We Canadians have been a remarkably conservative, small-C conservative, people," he said. "We have spent our energy trying to bolster declining industry instead of entering new fields."
